THE object which I have had in view in the present Volume is to compare the representations which are given of the Indian deities Brahmā, Vishṇu, and Rudra, and of the goddess Ambikā, in the Vedic Hymns and Brāhmaṇas, with the accounts which we find in the legendary poems called Itihāsas and Purāṇas, and to shew how far, and by what steps in each case, the earlier conceptions were gradually modified in the later works.

The First Chapter (pp. 3-53) treats of the deity who is described in the later hymns of the Rig-veda, and in the Atharva-veda, under the different titles of Viśvakarman, Hiranyagarbha, and Prajāpati, and appears to correspond with the Brahmā of the more modern legendary books.

Though this god was originally unconnected with Vishṇu and Rudra, while at a subsequent period he came to be regarded in systematic mythology as the first person in the triad of which they formed the second and third members, yet the general idea entertained of his character has been less modified in the course of his history than is the case in regard to the other two deities.

Brahmā was from the beginning considered as the Creator, and he continued to be regarded as fulfilling the same function even after he had sunk into a subordinate position, and had come to be represented by the votaries of Vishṇu and Mahādeva respectively as the mere creature and agent of one or other of those two gods (see pp. 156, 162, 193, 226, 230). In later times Brahmā has had few special worshippers ; the only spot where he is periodically adored being at Pushkara in Rajputana.* Two of the acts which the earlier legends ascribe to him, the assumption of the forms of a tortoise and of a boar, are in later works transferred to Vishṇu (see pp. 23, 29 ff., 374).

The Second Chapter first of all describes the original conception of Vishṇu as he is celebrated in the hymns of the Rig-veda (pp. 54–83). The particular attribute by which he is there distinguished from every other deity is that of striding across the heavens by three paces. This phrase is interpreted by one of the ancient commentators as denoting the threefold manifestations of light, as fire on earth, as lightning in the atmosphere, and as the sun in the sky ; and by another as designating the three stages of the sun's daily movement, his rising, culmination, and setting. The latter explanation seems to satisfy best the idea of movement expressed in the description ; but it must be confessed that an obscurity rests over this conception. Some of the highest divine functions and attributes are also assigned to Vishṇu ; and we might thus be led to suppose that the authors of these hymns regarded him as the Supreme Deity. But this supposition is invalidated by the fact that Indra is sometimes associated with Vishnu in the performance of these functions, and that several other deities are magnified in terms of similar import (pp. 84–101). The Third Section (pp. 101–106) treats of Vishnu as one of the sons of Aditi. The origin here assigned to this god would lead us to conclude that he was originally considered as of no higher rank than the other beings who bear the same name of Ādityas. The Fourth Section contains the legends relating to the same god in the Brāhmaṇas, in which he is identified with sacrifice ; while in one of them he is spoken of as a dwarf. The later accounts of the dwarf incarnation are next adduced as recorded in the Rāmāyaṇa, the Mahābhārata, and in the Vishnu and Bhāgavata Purāṇas (pp. 107–131). In the Fifth Section a passage is quoted from the Nirukta (pp. 131 ff.) in which the gods are classified, and the most prominent places are assigned to Agni, Vāyu or Indra, and Sūrya, who seem to have been regarded by the author as the triad of deities in whom the Supreme Spirit was especially revealed, while Vishnu and Rudra are merely mentioned as gods who were worshipped conjointly with Indra and Soma, respectively. The later triad of Brahmā, Vishnu and Rudra, seems therefore to have been then unknown. The remainder of this Section, and pp. 377–413 of the Appendix, are chiefly occupied by quotations from the Rāmāyaṇa and Mahābhārata, containing a great variety of details relating to Rāma and Kṛishṇa, the two heroes who came ultimately to be regarded as incarnations of Vishnu; and an attempt is made by an examination of these texts to elucidate the question whether or not a divine nature was ascribed to these two personages by the authors of the two poems as they originally stood. The passages adduced from the Mahābhārata relating to Krishna make frequent mention of Mahādeva also, and illustrate the conceptions entertained of him at that epoch of Indian history. This Section contains also many texts which indicate the existence of a strong rivalry between the adherents of these two gods. In different passages here cited, Vishnu and Rudra (Mahādeva) are both described by their respective votaries as one with the Supreme Spirit; while in some places they are identified with one another.

The Third Chapter traces the mythological history of Rudra as he is represented in the Rig-veda (pp. 252-267), in the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā (267-276), in the Atharva-veda (276-282), in the Brāhmaṇas (282-296), in the Upanishads (297-305), and in various further texts from the Itihāsas and Purāṇas which describe some of this god's proceedings, and indicate the struggles of his votaries to introduce his worship, as illustrated in the story of Daxa's sacrifice (305-332). A summary of the conclusions deducible from these Sections is given in pp. 332-343, to which I refer. Pages 343-356 contain an enquiry into the origin of the Linga worship, though unfortunately nothing better than a negative result is obtained. This Chapter concludes with an account of the different representations of the goddess called variously Ambikā, Umā, Kālī, Karālī, Pārvatī, Durgā, etc., which we find in the Kena and Muṇḍaka Upanishads, in the Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, in the Rāmāyaṇa, Harivaṃśa, and Mahābhārata, and in the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa.

A further indication of the various matters illustrated in this Volume will be obtained by consulting the Index under the names Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rāma, Kṛishṇa, Umā, etc.

It will be apparent to all Sanskrit scholars that the main results at which I have arrived in regard to Viṣṇu, Rudra, and Ambikā, are not new. Rosen (in the notes to his translation of the R. V. p. li.), Burnouf (Pref. to Bhāg. Pur. vol. iii. p. xxii.), and Wilson (Pref. to transl. of R. V. i. p. xxiv.), had already drawn attention to the text of Yāska and to the Commentary of Durgā, by which it is shewn that the three steps of Viṣṇu were interpreted by the ancient commentators in the manner which I have indicated in pp. 55 f.

In the same way Wilson, Weber, and Whitney (see pp. 332 ff. of this Volume), had pointed out that the Rudra of the Rig-veda is very different from the Rudra or Mahādeva of the Purāṇas. And in pp. 357 ff. I have quoted the dissertations of Professor Weber on the mythological history of Ambikā or Umā. The whole, therefore, that I can claim to have effected is to have brought together, and to have illustrated to the best of my power, all the most important texts which I could discover to have any bearing on the subjects which I have handled.

My best thanks are due to the different scholars who are mentioned in the course of the Work as having given me assistance ; and in particular to Professor Aufrecht, whose name recurs perpetually in the following pages, and who has favoured me with the most valuable suggestions and information in respect particularly to the sense of the Vedic texts, which long and careful study has rendered him so competent to interpret.

PART FOURTH.

PLAN OF THE PRESENT VOLUME.

REFERENCE has already been made in the Second Part of this work (pp. 212-216) to the great difference which is discoverable between the mythology of the Vedas and that of the Indian epic poems and Purāṇas; and this difference was there illustrated by comparing the representations of Viṣṇu and Rudra which are given in the hymns of the Rig-veda, with those which we find in the productions of a later age. On the same occasion I intimated my intention of treating the same subject in greater detail in a subsequent portion of my work. In pursuance of this design, I propose to collect in the present volume the most important texts regarding the origin of the universe, and the characters of the three principal Indian gods, which occur in the Vedic hymns, and Brāhmaṇas, and to compare these passages with the later legends and popular speculations on the same subjects which are to be found in the Mahābhārata, the Rāmāyaṇa, and the Purāṇas.

This gradual modification of Indian mythological conceptions will indeed be found to have already commenced in the Rig-veda itself, if we compare its later with its earlier portions; it becomes more clearly discernible when we descend from the hymns to the Brāhmaṇas; and continues to exhibit itself still more prominently in the Purāṇic writers, who, through a long course of ages, gave free scope to their fancy in the embellishment of old, and the invention of new, legends in honour of their favourite gods, till at last the representations given of the most popular divinities became not only at variance with the characteristics ascribed to their prototypes in the Vedas, but even in some respects different from the descriptions which occur in the older Purāṇas themselves.

These successive mutations in Indian mythology need not occasion us any surprise, as they merely afford another exemplification of a process which may be remarked in the history of all nations which have given free scope to thought, to feeling, and to imagination, in matters of religion.

In carrying out the plan just sketched, I shall, first of all, quote the texts in the Vedic hymns which refer to the creation of the world, and to the god Hiranyagarbha or Prajāpati; these shall be succeeded (2) by passages from the Brāhmaṇas, and (3) by quotations from Menu, the Mahābhārata, the Rāmāyaṇa, and the Purāṇas having reference to the same subjects.

I shall then proceed in a similar order with the various texts which relate to the gods Vishṇu and Rudra, with occasional notices of any other Indian deities whose history it may appear desirable to illustrate.

<sup>1</sup> The Vishṇu Purāṇa, i. 2, 21 f., quotes (from some source which is not indicated) a verse which seems to be in some degree founded on the text before us and employs it in support of the Sāṅkhya doctrine of Pradhāna: Veda-vāda-vido viprā niyatā Brahma-vādināḥ | paṭhanti vai tam evārtham Pradhāna-pratipādakam | 22. Nāho na rātrir na nabho na bhūmīr nāsīt tamo jyotir abhūd na vū 'nyat | śrotrādi-buddhyānupalabhyam ekam pradhānikam Brahma pumāns tadāsīt | "Brahmans learned in the tenets of the Veda, firm assertors of its principles, repeat the following statement establishing the doctrine of Pradhāna: 22. 'There was neither day nor night, neither sky nor earth; there was neither darkness nor light, nor anything else. There was then the One, Brahmā in the form of Pradhāna, the Male, incomprehensible by the ear, or other senses, or by the intellect.'"

<sup>2</sup> These words are quoted by Kullūka or Manu, i. 5, of which passage this may be the germ.

<sup>3</sup> In the passages which I shall quote from the Sātapatha Brāhmaṇa, etc. further on, we shall see that the creative acts of Prajāpati are constantly said to have been preceded by desire: so 'kāmayata, "he desired," etc.

“There was then neither nonentity, nor entity; there was no atmosphere, nor sky beyond it. What covered [all?] where was the receptacle of each thing? was it water, the deep abyss? 2. Death was not then, nor immortality; there was no distinction of day or night: That One breathed calmly, with svadhā (nature); there was nothing different from It [that One] or beyond It. 3. Darkness there was; originally enveloped in darkness, this universe was undistinguishable water; the empty<sup>4</sup> [mass] which was concealed by a husk [or by nothingness] was produced, single, by the power of austerity (or heat). 4. Desire first arose in It, which was the first germ of mind. This the wise, seeking in their heart, have discovered by the intellect to be the bond between nonentity and entity. 5. The ray which shot across these things,—was it above, or was it below? There were productive energies, and mighty powers; Nature (svadhā) beneath, and Energy (prayati) above. 6. Who knows, who here can declare, whence has sprung, whence, this creation? The gods are subsequent to its formation; who then knows from what it arose? 7. From what source this creation arose and whether [any] one created it or not,<sup>5</sup>—He who in the highest heaven is its ruler, He knows, or He does not know.”

See Professor Müller's translation of this remarkable hymn, his enthusiastic appreciation of its merits, and his remarks in regard to its age, in his “History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature,” pp. 559-566; and Professor Goldstücker's observations on the same subject in his “Pāṇini,” pp. 144 f.

Do thou who art rich in oblations, augmenting thyself, worship thyself<sup>12</sup> at the sacrifice. 6. Do thou, Viśvakarman, growing by the sacrifice, thyself offer up heaven and earth. Let other men who are against me become fools. May Maghavan [or the opulent god] be here our sage. 7. Let us to-day invoke at our sacrifice the lord of speech, who is swift as thought, Viśvakarman, for succour. May he who is the source of all prosperity, the beneficent, with a view to our protection, receive graciously all our invocations."

[receptacle] rested upon the navel of the unborn, wherein all the worlds stood. 7. Ye know not him who produced these things; something else is within you. The chanters of hymns go about enveloped in mist, and unsatisfied with idle talk."

I have placed these two hymns together, as they are so similar in character. The verses of which they are made up, are all to be found in the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā, (xvii. 17-23, and 25-31) in the same order in which they occur in the Rig-veda; and without any various readings of importance. Some of them also occur in the Nirukta; viz., R. V. x. 81, 6 in Nir. x. 27; R. V. x. 82, 2 in Nir. x. 26; the second half of R. V. x. 82, 4 in Nir. vi. 15; and R. V. x. 82, 7 in Nir. Parisiṣṭa, ii. 16. Professor Roth, in his Illustrations of the Nirukta, (pp. 141, f.) offers some remarks on the 2nd verse of the second, and the 6th verse of the first, of the hymns before us, which I shall translate. He renders the former verse thus: "Viśvakarman, wise and mighty in act, is the creator, the orderer, and the highest image [for the spiritual faculty]. That which men desire is the attainment of good in the world where the One Being dwells beyond the seven rishis." He then proceeds to observe: "Viśvakarman, who is no mythological personage, but the 'creator of all things,' and who in the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā, 12, 61,<sup>15</sup> is so far rightly identified with Prajāpati, is here celebrated as equally wise in design, and powerful in execution (the highest conception which can be attained by man); and from him the fulfilment of every desire is obtained beyond the starry heaven, where he resides alone, without the numerous deities of the popular creed. . . . . The legend, which relates that Viśvakarman, son of Bhuvana, after he had offered up all beings in sacrifice, concluded by offering up himself, belongs, in my opinion, to the numerous class of stories which have arisen out of a misunderstanding of Vedic passages, viz., in the present instance, verses 1 and 5 of R. V. x. 81."

The legend here referred to by Professor Roth is given by Yāska, Nirukta, x. 26:

“Here they tell a story: Viśvakarman son of Bhuvana offered up all creatures at an universal sacrifice (sarvamedha). He finally offered up himself also. The following verse (R. V. x. 81, 1) is descriptive of this, viz., ‘he who offering up all worlds,’ etc.”

On the 6th verse of the first of the hymns before us (R. V. x. 81), Professor Roth remarks thus: “For the correct understanding of the second pāda (the latter half of the first line), and similar passages, the reader should compare R. V. x. 7, 6, yathā 'yaja ritubhir deva devān evā yajasva tanvān sujāta | ‘As thou (o Agni) at the measured times, o god, didst sacrifice to the gods, so sacrifice also to thyself.’ Agni is to accept the offering for himself also. In the same way are the words of the 5th verse of the hymn before us to be understood; svayān yajasva tanvān vridhānah | ‘sacrifice to thyself for thine own glorification’: the idea of self-immolation has arisen from a misunderstanding of the word tanū,<sup>16</sup> and of the construction of the root yaj. The 1st verse of the same hymn (R. V. x. 81, 1) is, as it appears to me, to be understood in a similar manner: ‘He who received all these creatures as offerings.’ In the passage before us (the 6th verse of R. V. x. 81) the words would therefore be rendered as follows: ‘Viśvakarman, glorify thyself by the sacrifice, offer up to thyself heaven and earth.’ The idea of sacrifice is introduced, because every portion of the created universe which is given as a possession to the gods, comes to them in the shape of a sacrifice. The god who takes anything into his possession, is said to offer it to himself. The various reading which we find in the Sāma-veda, ii. 939, as compared with the verse before us (viz., tanvām svā hi te, ‘offer thy body, for it is thine,’ instead of prithivīm uta dyām, ‘offer earth and heaven’) may be an amendment in support of the legend.”

I do not know whether this view is consistent with the 6th and 7th verses of the Puruṣa Sukta. See the First Part of this work, <sup>16</sup> In his remarks on the word Tanūnapāt in p. 117 of his Illustrations, Professor Roth observes: “The signification has been overlooked, which tanū obtains in the older Sanskrit, as well as in Zend and modern Persian, as it there designates our own person, our self, in contrast to things belonging to us. Hence I might explain the word Tanūnapāt as meaning ‘his own son.’ Agni is his own son, because he springs into life either as lightning, or from the friction of wood, without being the product of similar phenomena, or powers.” See also Bochtlingk and Roth’s Lexicon, under the word Tanūnapāt.

pp. 7, 8. Perhaps both conceptions (that of the gods sacrificing themselves, and that of their sacrificing to themselves) may have been entertained by the Vedic writers.

[I may here remark that the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, ii. 6, 15 ff., gives a sort of paraphrase on the Puruṣa Sūkta. The author then puts into the mouth of Brahmā the following lines (verses 21 ff.), which are intended to illustrate the 7th and following stanzas of that allegorical hymn :

21. Yadā 'sya nābhyād nalinād aham āsam mahātmanah | nāvindaṁ yajña-sambhārān Puruṣāvayavān rite | 22. Teshu yajñasya paśavaḥ sa-vanaspatayaḥ kuśāḥ | idaṁcha deva-yajanaṁ kālaśchoru-guṇānvitaḥ | 23. Vastūny ośadhayaḥ snehā rusa-loha-mṛido jalam | richo yajñāṁshi sāmāni chāturhotraṁcha sattama | 24. Nāmadheyāni mantrāścha dāxī-āścha vratāni cha | devatānukramaḥ kalpaḥ saṅkalpas tantram eva cha | 25. Gayo matayaś chaiva prāyaśchittāṁ samarpaṇam | Puruṣāvayavair ete sambhārāḥ sambhṛitā mayā | 26. Iti sambhṛita-sambhārāḥ Puruṣāvayavair aham | tam eva Puruṣaṁ yajñāṁ tenaivāyajam īśvaram |

“21. When I was produced,” says Brahmā, “from the lotus sprung out of the navel of that great Being, I found no materials for sacrifice excepting the members of Puruṣa. 22. Among them were the victims, the sacrificial posts, the kuśa grass ; they formed the sacrificial ground, and the seasons with their various qualities. The utensils, the grains, the unctuous substances, the flavours, the metals, the earths, the water, the verses of the Rich, the Yajush, and the Sāmān, the functions of the four priests, the names [of the rites], the hymns, the gifts, the vows, the list of deities, the ritual rules, the designs, the forms, the arrangements, the meditations, the expiation, the dedication, all these essentials of sacrifice were derived by me from the members of Puruṣa. Having thus drawn from the members of Puruṣa all these appliances, I by this means offered up Puruṣa, the lord [himself], as a sacrifice.”

In his note on the Nirukta, vi. 15, Professor Roth translates the 4th verse of the second hymn before us (R. V. 82), as follows : “They who in still, in moving, and falling vapour (rajas) created those beings . . . . . furnished to him the material.” In his Lexicon, however, he renders the word asūrtta, not by “still,” but by

"distant;" and quotes A. V. x. 3, 9, as another passage in which it occurs.

Men say that that remote nonentity is one member of Skambha." This production of the gods out of nothing seems to be contrary to the doctrine of the Chhāndogya Upanishad. Tad ha eke āhur "asad evadam agre āsid ekam evādvitīyañ tasmiñ asatāḥ saj jāyeta" | Kutas tu khalu saumya evaṁ syād iti hovācha katham āsataḥ saj jāyeta iti | (Biblioth. existent. 3. In the first age of the gods the existent sprang from the non-existent. Then the different regions sprang forth from Uttānapad. 4. The earth sprang from Uttānapad; and the regions sprang from the earth. Daxa sprang from Aditi, and Aditi [came] forth from Daxa. 5. For Aditi was produced, she who is thy daughter, o Daxa. After her the gods came into being, beneficent, sharers in immortality. 6. When ye, o gods, stood, strongly agitated, in that water, there a violent dust issued forth from you, as from [persons] dancing. 7. When ye, o gods, like devotees [or strenuous men], replenished the worlds, then ye disclosed the sun which had been hidden in the ocean [or in the sky]. 8. The eight sons who were born from the body of Aditi,—with seven [of these] she approached the gods, but cast away [the eighth] Mārttāṇḍa [the sun]. 9. With seven sons [only] Aditi approached [the gods in?] the former age. Again, for birth as well as for death she disclosed Mārttāṇḍa.<sup>24</sup>

In R. V. vi. 50, 2, mention is made of certain luminous gods (sujoyotishah) as being the sons or descendants of Daxa (Daxa-pitrin). These notices of Daxa which occur in the Rig-veda have been greatly developed in the later mythology, as may be seen by a reference to the passages given in the First Part of this work, pp. 25-27. Uttānapāda is said in the Vishnu Purāṇa to have been a son of Manu Svāyambhuva by Satarūpā (ibid. p. 25).

On the fourth verse of this hymn Yāska remarks as follows in the Nirukta, xi. 23: Ādityo Daxa ity āhur Āditya-madhye cha stutah | Aditir Daxāyanī | “Aditer Daxo ajāyata Daxād u Aditih pari” iti cha | tat kalham upapadyeta | samāna-janmānau syātām ity api vā deva-dharmena itaretara-janmānau syātām itaretara-prakṛitī | “Daxa is, they say, a son of Aditi, and is praised among the sons of Aditi. And Aditi is the daughter of Daxa, [according to the text] Daxa sprang from Aditi, and Aditi came forth from Daxa. How can this be possible? They may have had the same origin; or according to the nature of the gods, they may have been born from each other,—have derived their substance from one another.”

Roth, in his Illustrations of the Nirukta (p. 151), translates the 4th and 5th verses of the hymn before us: “Bhū (the world) was born, and from her opened womb (Uttānapad) sprang the Spaces: from Aditi was born Daxa (spiritual force), and from Daxa again Aditi. Yes, Aditi was born, o Daxa, she who is thy daughter; after her the gods were produced, the blessed possessors of immortality.” He then proceeds to remark: “Daxa, spiritual force, is the male power, which generates the gods in eternity. As Bhū (the World or Being) and Space are the principles of the Finite, so to both of these is due the beginning of divine life.”

Sāyana annotates thus on the 8th verse of the hymn:

“Ashṭau putrāsaḥ” putrā Mitrādayo 'diter bhavanti | “Ye Adites tanvas pari” śarīrāj “jātāḥ” utpannāḥ | Aditer ashṭa-putrā Adhvaryyava-brāhmaṇe pariganitāḥ | tathā hi | “tān anukramishyāmo Mitraścha Varuṇaścha Dhātūcha Aryamūcha Amśaścha Bhagaścha Vivasvān Ādityaścheti” | tathā tattraiva pradeśāntare Aditim prastutya āmnātam “tasyā uchchheshanam adadhūḥ tat prāśnāt | sā reto 'dhatta tasyai chatvāra Ādityā ajāyanta sā dvitīyam apibad” ityādinā ash-tānām Ādityānām utpattir varṇitā |

“Eight sons, Mitra and the rest, were born to Aditi, who sprang from her body. Eight sons of Aditi are enumerated in the Brāhmaṇa of the Adhvaryus, thus: ‘We shall state them in order, Mitra, Varuṇa, Dhātṛi, Aryaman, Amśa, Bhaga, Vivasvat, and Āditya.’ In another part of the same work, after reference has been made to Aditi, it is recorded: ‘They placed before her the remnant of the sacrifice. She ate it. She conceived seed. Four Ādityas were born to her. She drank the second [portion],’ etc. Thus is narrated the birth of the eight Ādityas.”

The Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (3, 1, 3, 3 ff.) gives the following explanation of the same (the 8th) verse of this hymn:

After quoting the text of the Rig-veda the author of the Brāhmaṇa proceeds :

"Aditi had eight sons. But there are only seven [gods] whom men call the Āditya deities. For she produced the eighth, Mārt-tāṇḍa, destitute of any modifications of shape, (without hands and feet, etc.) He was smeared all over: of the dimensions of a man, as broad as long, say some. The Āditya deities said, 'If in his nature he be not conformable to us, then it will be unfortunate; come let us alter his shape.' Thus saying, they altered his shape, as this man is modified. An elephant sprang out of those [pieces of] his flesh which they cut off, and threw away. Wherefore men say, 'let no one take (?) an elephant, for an elephant partakes of the nature of man. He whom they then altered was Vivasvat (the Sun) the son of Aditi, from whom these creatures are descended.'"

Who by his might became the sole king of the breathing and winking world, who is the lord of this two-footed and four-footed [creation],—to what god, etc.? 4. Whose greatness these snowy mountains, and the sea with the Rasā [river], declare,—of whom these regions, of whom they are the arms,—to what god, etc. 5. By whom the sky is fiery, and the earth fixed, by whom the firmament and the heaven were established, who in the atmosphere is the measurer of the aerial space;—to what god, etc.? 6. To whom heaven and earth, sustained by his succour, looked up, trembling in mind; over whom the sun shines,—to what god, etc.? 7. When the great waters pervaded the universe, containing an embryo, and generating fire, thence arose the one spirit (asu) of the gods,—to what god, etc.? 8. He who through his greatness beheld the waters which contained power, and generated sacrifice, who was the one god above the gods,—to what god, etc.? 9. May he not injure us, he who is the generator of the earth, who, ruling by fixed ordinances, produced the heavens, who formed the great and brilliant waters,—to what god, etc.? 10. Prajāpati, no other than thou is lord over all these created things: may we obtain that, through desire of which we have invoked thee; may we become masters of riches.”

The whole of this hymn is to be found repeated in the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā, and most of the verses recur in the Atharva-veda. In making my translation, I have had the assistance of Mahidhara's Commentary on the former Veda, as well as of the version given by Professor Müller in his Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 569 f. In his annotations on verse 7, the commentator refers to the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, xi. 1, 6, 1 :

Āpo ha vā idam agre salilam evāsa | “This [universe] was in the beginning waters, only water;” and explains the words garbhaṁ dadhānāḥ, “containing a germ,” thus: tathā garbhaṁ Hiranyagarbha-laxaṇaṁ dadhānāḥ dhārayantyaḥ ata eva agniṁ janayantiḥ agni-rūpaṁ Hiranyagarbhaṁ janayantyaḥ utpādayishyantyaḥ | “And also containing an embryo (garbha) distinguished as the golden embryo (Hiranyagarbha); and consequently generating (being about to produce) fire,—Hiranyagarbha in the form of fire.” The Atharva-veda reads this seventh verse somewhat differently, thus (A. V. 4, 2, 6): Āpo agre viśvam āvan garbhaṁ dadhānā amṛitā ṛitajñāḥ | yāsu devīshv adhi deva asīt kasmai ityādi | “In the beginning, the waters, immortal, and versed in the sacred ceremonies, protected (covered?) the universe, containing an embryo; over these divine [waters] was the god,” etc. The verse which comes next, the seventh in the A. V., is the first in the R. V. The eighth in the A. V., which has none answering to it in the R. V., is as follows: Apo vutsaṁ janayantir garbham agre samairayan | tasyota jāyamānasya ulba āsīt hiranyayaḥ | kasmai devāya ityādi—“In the beginning the waters, producing a child, brought forth an embryo, which as it was coming into life, was enveloped in a golden covering.”

The idea of the production of a god from the embryo generated in the waters, seems to be contained in the seventh verse of the hymn before us (R. V. x. 121, 7); but whether the author would have identified that god with the Brahmā of the later mythology, I will not decide. In the verse attached to the hymn as the 10th, at least, the deity celebrated in the hymn is addressed by the appellation of Prajāpati, which became a title of Brahmā. The last verse which I have quoted from the A. V. (iv. 2, 8) assigns a “golden covering” to the embryo produced by the waters.

In another part of the same Veda (A. V. x. 7, 28) the following verse occurs: Hiranyagarbham paramam anatyudyam janā viduḥ | Skambhas tadagre prāsiñchad hiranyam loke antarā | “Men know Hiranyagarbha, the supreme, the ineffable: before him Skambha [the Supporter] shed forth gold in the midst of the world.”

I shall make some additional quotations from the hymn of the A. V. in which the last cited verse occurs, and the next following.

A. V. x. 7, 7.—“Tell who that Skambha (supporter) is, on whom Prajāpati has supported, and established all the worlds. 8. How far did Skambha penetrate into that highest, lowest, and middle universe, comprehending all forms, which Prajāpati created; and how much of it was there which he did not penetrate? 9. How far did Skambha penetrate the past? and how much of the future is contained in his receptacle? how far did Skambha penetrate into that one member which he separated into a thousand parts? . . . . . 17. Those men who know Brahma (the divine Being?) in the Male (Purusha), know him who occupies the highest place (Parameshṭhin): he who knows Parameshṭhin, and who knows Prajāpati,—they who know the ancient Brāhmaṇa (Deity?), they know Skambha.
. . . . . 24. In the place where the gods, the knowers of Brahma, reverence the ancient Brahma,—that priest (brahmā) who knows them clearly, is the knower. . . . . 32. Reverence to that eldest Brahma, of whom the earth is the measure, the atmosphere the belly, who

<sup>35</sup> I know not whether this word has here its ordinary meaning, or the same sense which is assigned to the word vaitasa in R. V. x. 95, 4, 5; Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, xi. 5, 1, 1; and Nir. iii. 21.

made the sky his head. . . . . 35. Skamba established both these [worlds] the earth and sky, Skambha established the wide atmosphere, Skambha established the six wide regions, Skambha pervaded this entire universe. 36. Reverence to that eldest Brahma, who, sprung from toil and from devotion, has pervaded all the worlds, who made Soma for himself alone. . . . . 41. He who knows the golden reed standing in the water, is the mysterious Prajāpati."

A. V. x. 8, 2.—"These two [worlds] the earth and sky, stand, supported by Skambha. Skambha is all this which has soul, which breathes, which winks. . . . . 11. Whatever moves, falls, or stands, whatever exists breathing, or not breathing, or winking,—all this, comprehending every form, sustains the earth; gathering together, that becomes one only. . . . . 44. Knowing him, the Soul, calm, undecaying, young, who is passionless, tranquil, self-existent, satisfied with enjoyment, wanting in nothing,—a man is not afraid of death."

I quote these passages partly because they contain frequent references to Prajāpati, a name which occurs but sparingly in the Rīgveda; and partly because they celebrate a new god called Skambha, the "Supporter," or "Propper," whose personification may have been suggested by the function of "supporting" the earth and heavens, which, as we shall see in the next chapter, is frequently ascribed to Indra, Varuṇa, Viṣṇu, and Savitṛi.

The verse last quoted (x. 8, 44) seems to contain the idea of the supreme Soul as the object of knowledge.

SECT. II.—Creation; primeval waters; mundane egg, Prajāpati, etc., according to the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, Manu, the Rāmāyaṇa, Viṣṇu Purāṇa, etc.

"In the beginning this [universe] was indeed non-existent. But men say, 'what was that non-existent?' The rishis say that in the beginning there was non-existence. Who are these rishis? The rishis are breaths. Inasmuch as before all this [universe], they, desiring this [universe], strove (? arishan) with toil and austerity, therefore they are called Rishis. 2. This breath which is in the midst

is Indra. He by his might kindled these breaths in the midst: inasmuch as he kindled them, he is the kindler (Indha). They call Indra Indra imperceptibly: for the gods love that which is imperceptible. They being kindled, created seven separate men (purusha). 3. They said, 'being thus, we shall not be able to generate these seven men; let us make one man.' So speaking, they made these seven men one man (purusha). Into the part above the navel, they compressed two of them, and two others into the part below the navel; [one] man [formed one] side; [another] man [another] side; and one formed the base. . . . . 5. This [one] man became Prajāpati. The man who became Prajāpati is the same as this Agni who is kindled on the altar. 6. He verily is composed of seven men (purusha): for this man is composed of seven men, since four [make] the soul, and three the sides and extremity (lit., tail). For the soul of this man [makes] four, and the sides and extremity three. Now inasmuch as he makes the soul [which is equal to four] superior by one man, the soul, in consequence of this [excess of] force, controls the sides and extremity [which are only equal to three]. . . . . 8. This man (purusha) Prajāpati desired, 'may I become more, may I be reproduced.' He toiled, he performed austerity. Having toiled and performed austerity, he first created the Veda (brahma), the triple science. It became to him a foundation; hence men say, 'the Veda (brahma) is the foundation of all this.' Wherefore having studied [the Veda] a man has a foundation (?), for this is his foundation, namely the Veda. Resting on this foundation, he performed austerity. 9. He created the waters from the world [in the form of] speech.<sup>38</sup> Speech belonged to him. It was created. It obtained (pervaded?) all this. Because it obtained (apnot) all this which exists, it (speech) was called waters (āpaḥ); and because it covered (avrinot), it was called vāḥ (another name of water). 10. He desired, 'May I be reproduced from these waters.' So saying, with this triple science he entered the waters. Thence an egg arose. He pondered on it (?). He said, 'let there be,' 'let there be; again, 'let there be.' From it the Veda was first created, the triple science. Hence men say, 'the Veda is the first-born of this whole [creation]. Further, [as] the Veda was first created from that Man, therefore it was created his mouth. Hence they say of a learned man that he is like Agni; for the Veda is Agni's mouth."

The same idea about Prajāpati being composed of seven men, occurs again in the Sātapatha Brāhmaṇa, x. 2, 2, 1 (p. 767).—Yān vai tān sapta puruṣhān ekam puruṣham akurvan sa Prajāpatir abhavat | sa prajā asṛijata | sa prajāḥ sṛiṣṭvā ūrddhva udakrāmat sa etaṁ lokam agachhad yatra eṣha etat tapati | no ha tarhy anya etasmād atra yajñīya āsa tam devā yajñenaiva yashtum adhriyanta | tasmād etad ṛishinā 'bhyantūktam 'yajñena yajñam ayajanta devā' ityādi | "These seven men whom they made one man (puruṣha) became Prajāpati. He created offspring. Having created offspring, he mounted upwards; he went to this world where he scorches this. There was then no other object of worship: the gods began to worship him with sacrifices. Hence it has been said by the rishi (R. V. x. 90, 16), 'the gods worshipped the sacrifice with sacrifice.'" Part of the passage, Sātapatha Brāhmaṇa, vi. 1, 1, 6 is repeated in Sātapatha Brāhmaṇa, x. 2, 2, 5.

II. In the preceding legend, the gods are represented as the creators of Prajāpati, who in his turn is stated to have generated the waters, and the mundane egg. In the following story, the order of production is different. The waters generate the egg, and the egg brings forth Prajāpati, who creates the worlds and the gods.

"In the beginning this universe was waters, nothing but water. The waters desired, 'how can we be reproduced?' So saying, they toiled, they performed austerity. While they were performing austerity, a golden egg came into existence. Being produced, it then became a year. Wherefore this golden egg floated about for the period of a year. 2. From it in a year a man (purusha) came into existence, who was Prajāpati. Hence it is that a woman, or a cow, or a mare, brings forth in the space of a year, for in a year Prajāpati was born. He divided this golden egg. There was then no resting-place for him. He therefore floated about for the space of a year, occupying this golden egg. 3. In a year he desired to speak. He uttered bhūḥ, which became this earth; bhuvaḥ, which became this firmament; and svaḥ, which became that sky. Hence a child desires to speak in a year, because Prajāpati spoke in a year. . . . . 6. He was born with a life of a thousand years. He perceived the further end of his life, as [one] may perceive the opposite bank of a river. 7. Desiring offspring, he went on worshipping and toiling. He conceived progeny in himself: with his mouth he created the gods. These gods were created by attaining heaven. This is the godhead of the gods (devāḥ) that they were creating by attaining heaven (divam). To him while he was continuing to create, heaven, as it were, arose(?). This is the godhead of the gods, that to him as he was continuing to create, heaven, as it were, arose. . . . . 14. These [following] gods were created from Prajāpati, Agni, Indra, Soma, and Parameshthin, son of Prajāpati. . . . . 18. Prajāpati said to his son Indra," etc.

In the next passage, Prajāpati is said to have taken the form of a tortoise :

Sātapatha Brāhmaṇa, vii. 4, 3, 5 (p. 609).—Sa yat kūrmo nāma etad vā rūpaṁ kṛitrā Prajāpatiḥ prajā asṛijata | yad asṛijata akarot tad yad akarot tasmāt kūrmaḥ | Kāśyapo vai kūrmas tasmād āhuḥ 'sarvaḥ prajāḥ Kāśyapya' iti | sa yaḥ sa kūrmo 'sau sa Ādityaḥ | "Having assumed the form of a tortoise, Prajāpati created offspring. That which he created, he made (akarot); hence the word kūrma. Kāśyapa means tortoise; hence men say, 'all creatures are descendants of Kāśyapa.' This tortoise is the same as Āditya."

In the later mythology it is Viṣṇu who assumes the form of a tortoise :

Thus in the chapter of the Bhāgavata Purāṇa descriptive of Viṣṇu's incarnations it is said (i. 3, 16): Surāsuraṇām udadhim mathnatām mathanāchalam | dadhre kamaṭha-rūpeṇa prishṭhe ekādāśe vibhuḥ | "In his eleventh incarnation, the Lord in the form of a tortoise supported on his back the churning-mountain, when the gods and Asuras were churning the ocean."

In its application of the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā, 37, 5, the Sātapatha Brāhmaṇa 14, 1, 2, 11 (p. 1025) makes the following allusion to the elevation of the earth by a boar: "Iyaty agre āsīd (Vāj. S. 37, 5) iti | iyatī ha rā iyam agre prithivy āsa prādeśa-mātrī | tām Emūsha iti va-rāha<sup>44</sup> ujjaghāna | so 'syāḥ patiḥ Prajāpatis tenaiva enaṁ etan-mithu-nena priyena dhāmnā<sup>45</sup> samardhayati kṛtsnaṁ karoti ityādi |

" 'She (the earth) was formerly so large,' etc.; for formerly this earth

was only so large, of the size of a span. Emūsha, a boar, raised her up. Her lord, Prajāpati, in consequence, prospers him (the boar ?) with love (?) and the object of his desire, and makes him complete," etc.

I quote some further texts from the Śātapatha Brāhmaṇa relative to Prajāpati.

In the following he is said to have in the beginning constituted the universe, and to have created Agni (see above, pp. 19, 22).

Śātapatha Brāhmaṇa, ii. 2, 4, 1 (p. 151).—Prajāpatir ha vā idam agre eka evāsa | sa aixata 'katham nu prajāyeya' iti so 'śrāmyat sa tapo 'tapyata so 'gnim eva mukhāj janayāñchakre ityādi | "Prajāpati alone was all this [universe] in the beginning. He considered, 'how can I be reproduced?' He toiled, and performed austerity. He generated Agni from his mouth."

In the next passage he is identified with Daxa : <sup>46</sup>

Śātapatha Brāhmaṇa, ii. 4, 4, 1 (p. 173).—Prajāpatir ha vā eten-āgre yajñeneje prajākāmo 'bahuh prajāyā paśubhiḥ syām śriyaṁ gachheyaṁ yasaḥ syām annādaḥ syām' iti | sa vai Daxo nāma ityādi | "Prajāpati formerly sacrificed with this sacrifice, being desirous of progeny, [and saying] 'may I abound in offspring and cattle, attain prosperity, become famous, and obtain food.' He was Daxa."

In Śātapatha Brāhmaṇa, vi. 8, 1, 14 (p. 565) Prajāpati is said to be the supporter of the universe (a function afterwards assigned to Viṣṇu) : Prajāpatir vai bharataḥ sa hidaṁ sarvam bibhartti | "Prajāpati is Bharata (the supporter), for he supports all this universe." <sup>47</sup>

Compare the first verse of the Muṇḍaka Upanishad, where Brahṁā is called the preserver of the world (bhuvanasya goptā).

In the next passage Prajāpati is represented as desirous, not to create, but to conquer, the worlds :

<sup>47</sup> In R. V. i. 96, 3, the epithet Bharata is applied to Agni. The commentator there quotes another text, no doubt from a Brāhmaṇa, esha prāṇo bhūtvā prajā bibhartti tasmād esha bharataḥ [ "He becoming breath, sustains all creatures ; hence he is the sustainer."

'ubhan lokāṃ abhijayeyāṃ devalokaṅcha manushya-lokaṅcha' ityādi | "Prajāpati desired, 'may I conquer both worlds,' that of the gods, and that of men," etc.

In Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, xiii. 6, 6, 1 (p. 997) Puruṣa Nārāyaṇa is introduced: Puruṣo ha Nārāyaṇo 'kāmayata 'atitishṭheyaṃ sarvāṇi bhūtāny aham eva idaṃ sarvaṃ syām' iti | sa etam puruṣa-medham pañcha-rātraṃ yajñakratum apaśyat tam āharat tena ayajata tena ishtvā 'tyatishṭhat sarvāṇi bhūtāni idaṃ sarvaṃ abhavat | atitishṭhati sarvāṇi bhūtāni idaṃ sarvaṃ bhavati ya evaṃ vidvān puruṣa-medhena yajate yo vā etad evaṃ veda |

"Puruṣa Nārāyaṇa desired, 'may I surpass all created things; may I alone become all this?' He beheld this form of sacrifice called puruṣa medha (human sacrifice) lasting five nights (?). He took it; he sacrificed with it. Having sacrificed with it, he surpassed all created things, and became all this. That man surpasses all created things, and becomes all this, who thus knowing, sacrifices with the puruṣa medha,—he who so knows this." The Puruṣa-sūkta is shortly afterwards quoted.

In Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, xi. 2, 3, 1 (p. 838) Brahma (in the neuter) is introduced as being the original source of all things: Brahma vā idaṃ agre āsit | tad devān asṛjata | tad devān sṛishṭvā eṣhu lokeshu vyārohayad asmīn eva loke 'gnīm Vāyūm antariṣṭe divy eva sūryam | "In the beginning Brahma was all this. He created the gods. Having created the gods, he placed them in these worlds, in this world Agni, Vāyu in the atmosphere, and Sūrya in the sky."

In Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, xiii. 7, 1, 1 (p. 1000) Brahma is described as sacrificing himself: Brahma vai svayambhu tapo 'tapyata | tad aizata 'na vai tapasy ānantyam asti hanta aham bhūteshṭv ātmānaṃ juhavāni bhūtāni cha ātmani' iti | tat sarveshu bhūteshṭv ātmānaṃ hutvā bhūtāni cha ātmani sarveshām bhūtānām śraishṭhyāṃ svārājyam ādhipatyam paryait | tathaiva etad yajamānaḥ sarvamedhe sarvān medhān hutvā sarvāṇi bhūtāni śraishṭhyāṃ svārājyam ādhipatyam paryeti | "The self-existent Brahma performed austerity. He considered, 'in austerity there is not infinity. Come let me sacrifice myself in created things, and created things in myself.' Then having sacrificed himself in all created things, and all created things in himself, he acquired superiority, self-fulfillence, and supreme dominion (compare Manu, xii. 91), Therefore a man offering all oblations, all creatures, in the śarvamedha (universal sacrifice), obtains superiority, self-fulgence, and supreme dominion."<sup>48</sup>

The following is the account of the creation, given at a later period by Manu, i. 5 ff., founded, no doubt, on the passages of the Sātapatha Brāhmaṇa, given above (pp. 19, 21, 22), or some other ancient source of the same character, with an intermixture of more modern doctrines :

*Āsīd idam tamobhūtam aprajātam aluxanam | apratarkyam avijñeyam prasuptam iva sarvataḥ | 6. Tataḥ svayambhūr bhagavān aryakto vyañjayan idam | mahābhūtādi vṛttanājāḥ prādurāsīt tamonudat | 7. 5. "This universe was enveloped in darkness, unperceived, undistinguishable, undiscoverable, unknowable, as it were entirely sunk in sleep. 6. Then the irresistible self-existent Lord, undiscerned, causing this universe with the five elements and all other things, to become discernible, was manifested, dispelling the gloom. 7. He who is beyond the cognizance of the senses, subtle, undiscernible, eternal, who is the essence of all beings, and inconceivable, himself shone forth. 8. He desiring to produce various creatures from his own body, first with a thought created the waters, and deposited in them a seed. 9. This [seed] became a golden egg, resplendent as the sun, in which he himself was born as Brahmā,<sup>49</sup> the progenitor of all the worlds. 10. The waters are called nārā, because they are the offspring of Nara; and since they were formerly his receptacle, he is therefore called Nārāyaṇa. 11. Being formed by that First Cause, undiscernible, eternal, which is both existent and non-existent, that Mule (puruṣa) is known in the world as Brahmā. 12. That lord having continued a year in the egg, divided it into two parts by his mere thought. 13. With these two shells he formed the heavens and the earth; and in the middle he placed the sky, the eight regions, and the eternal abode of the waters."

It will be observed from verses 9-11, that the appellation Nārāyaṇa is applied to Brahmā, and that no mention is made of Vishṇu.

On verse 8 Kullūka annotates thus: 'Tad aṇḍam abhavat haimam' iti | tad vijam Parameśvarechhayā haiman aṇḍam abhavat haimam iva haimaṁ śuddhi-guṇa-yogād na tu haimam eva | tadyaika-śakalena bhūmi-nirmāṇasya vācyamānatrād bhūmeśchāhaimatvasya pratyakṣatvād upachārāśrayaṇam | . . . . . tasminn aṇḍe Hiranyagarbho jātavān yena pūrva-jaimani 'Hiranyagarbho 'ham asmi' iti bhedābheda-bhāvanayā Parameśvaropāsānā kṛitā tadyaṁ līṅga-śarīrācchhinna-jīvam anupraviśya svayam Paramātmaiva Hiranyagarbha-rūpatayā prādurbhūtaḥ | "That [seed] became a golden egg,' etc.' That seed by the will of the deity became a golden egg. Golden, i.e. as it were golden, from the quality of purity attaching to it, and not really golden; for since the author proceeds to describe the formation of the earth from one of the halves of its shell, and since we know by ocular proof that the earth is not golden, we see that a mere figure of speech is here employed. . . . . In that egg Hiranyagarbha was produced; i.e. entering into the soul,—which was invested with a subtle body,—of that person by whom in a former birth the deity was worshipped, with a contemplation on distinctness and identity, expressed in the words, 'I am Hiranyagarbha,' the supreme spirit himself became manifested in the form of Hiranyagarbha."

The creation is narrated in a similar manner, but without the introduction of any metaphysical elements, in the Harivaṁśa, vv. 35 ff.: Tataḥ svayambhūr bhagavān sisṛixur vividhāḥ prajāḥ | apa eva sasarpjādau tāsu vijam avāśrijat | āpo nāra iti proktā āpo vai nara-sūnavaḥ | ayanaṁ tasya tāḥ pūrvaṁ tena nārāyaṇaḥ smṛitāḥ | hiranyavarṇam abhavat tad aṇḍam udakeśayam | tatra jajñe svayam Brahmā svayambhūr iti naḥ śrutam | Hiranyagarbho bhagavān ushitvā parivatsaram | tad

madhye ākāśam asṛjāt prabhuḥ | apsu pāriplavām prithvīm dīśascha

“Then the self-existent lord, desiring to produce various creatures, first of all formed the waters, and deposited in them a seed. The waters are called nārā, for they are the offspring of Nara. They were formerly his receptacle; hence he is called nārāyaṇa. That seed became a golden-coloured egg, reposing on the water: in it the self-existent Brahmā himself was born, [or, in it he himself was born as the self-existent Brahmā], as we have heard. The divine Hiranyagarbha having dwelt [in the egg] a year, divided it into two parts, heaven and earth. In the midst between these two shells, the Lord created the æther, and the earth floating about on the waters, and placed the regions in ten directions.”

In a later part of the same work we find another account of the production of Hiranyagarbha:

Harivaṁśa, vv. 12, 425 ff.—*Jagat-sraśṭu-manū devaś chintayāmāsa
pūrvataḥ | tasya chintayato vaktrād niḥṣṛtaḥ puruṣaḥ kila | tataḥ sa

yajña-bhāgo vidhīyate | ‘vibhajātmānam’ ity uktas tenāsmi sumahāt-
manā | katham ātmā vibhajyaḥ syāt saṁśayo hy atra me mahān” |*

“Being desirous to create the world, the deity formerly meditated. As he meditated, a man (puruṣa) issued from his mouth. This man then approached [or adored] the deity, [saying] ‘what am I to do?’ The god of gods, the lord of the world, answered smiling, ‘divide thyself.’ Having thus spoken the lord vanished. The path of the radiant embodied deity, when he has vanished, is not known, like that [of the flame] of an extinguished taper. The lord then meditated [thus] upon the word which the deity had uttered: ‘This divine Hiranyagarbha, who is celebrated in the Vedic hymn, was formerly the one sole Prajāpati, the ruler of the world. Thenceforward the first half of the sacrifice is allotted to him. Divide thyself,—thus have I been commanded by that mighty being. But how is the self to be divided? Here I have great doubt.'” Then follow the verses which have been quoted in the Third Part of this work, p. 10, to which I refer.

The Rāmāyaṇa, which I quote first according to the recension of Schlegel (which here coincides with the Serampore edition), thus describes the origin of the world :

Rāmāyaṇa (Schlegel's ed.), ii. 110, 2 ff.—Imām loka-samutpattiṁ loka-nātha nibodha me | 3. Sarvaṁ salilam evāsīt prithivī yatra nirmītā | tataḥ samabhavad Brahmā svayambhūr daivataiḥ saha | 4. Sa varāhas tato bhūtvā projjahāra vasundharām | asrijachcha jagat sarvaṁ saha putraiḥ kṛitātmabhiḥ | 5. Ākāśa-prabhavo Brahmā śāśvato nityam avyayah | tasmād Marīchiḥ sañjajñe Marīcheḥ Kaśyapaḥ sutah | 6. Vivasvān Kaśyapāj jajñe Manur Vivasvataḥ smṛitah | sa tu Prajāpatiḥ pūrvam ityādi |

Vaśisṭha says, “Lord of the world, understand from me this [account of] the origin of the worlds. 3. All was water only, in which the earth was formed. Thence arose Brahmā, the self-existent, with the deities. 4. He then, becoming a boar,<sup>50</sup> raised up the earth, and created the whole world with the saints, his sons. 5. Brahmā, eternal, and perpetually undecaying, sprang from the æther; from him was descended Marīchi; the son of Marīchi was Kaśyapa. 6. From Kaśyapa sprang Vivasvat, and Manu is declared to have been Vivasvat's son. He (Manu) was formerly the Prajāpati,” etc.

It will be observed that here it is Brahmā who assumes the form of a boar to raise up the earth from under the ocean. In the Gauḍa recension of Gorresio, however, this function is transferred to Viṣṇu; and this I regard as a proof that this recension of the text is more modern than that followed by Schlegel. I have indicated by italics in my translations, the important points in which the two recensions differ from one another.

Rāmāyaṇa (Gorresio's ed.), ii. 119, 2 ff.—Imām loka-samutpattiṁ loka-nātha nibodha me | 3. Sarvaṁ salilam evāsīt vasudhā yena nirmītā | tataḥ samabhavad Brahmā svayambhūr Viṣṇur avyayah | 4. Sa varāho

'tha bhūtvomām ujjahāra vasundharām | asṛijachcha jagat sarvām sacharācharam avyayam | 5. Ākāśa-prabhavo Brahmā śāśvato nityam avyayaḥ | tasmād Marīchiḥ sañjayāne Marīcheḥ Kāśyapaḥ sutah | 6. Tataḥ paryāya-sargeṇa Vivascān asṛijaḥ Manum ityādi |

“Lord of the world, understand from me this [account of] the origin of the worlds. 3. All was water only, through which the earth was formed. Thence arose Brahmā, the self-existent, the imperishable Vishṇu. 4. He then, becoming a boar, raised up this earth, and created the whole world, moveable and immoveable, imperishable. 5. Brahmā, eternal, and perpetually undecaying, sprang from the æther; from him was descended Marīchi; the son of Marīchi was Kāśyapa. 6. By successive creation, Vivasvat created Manu,” etc. ✓

It will be noticed that at the end of the 3rd śloka, the reading of the first recension, viz., Brahmā svayambhūr daivataiḥ saha, “Brahmā, the self-existent, with the deities,” is, in the second, changed into Brahmā svayambhūr Vishṇur avyayaḥ, “Brahmā, the self-existent, the imperishable Vishṇu,” whereby Brahmā becomes a mere manifestation of Vishṇu,—a character of which we have no hint in the earlier recension. Similarly the words which are given in Schlegel’s recension, at the close of the 4th śloka, viz., saha putraiḥ kṛitātmabhiḥ, “with the saints, his sons,” are in the other recension altered into sacharācharam avyayam, “moveable and immoveable, and imperishable”—epithets descriptive of the world. This second alteration was rendered necessary by the first: for as soon as the god who is the subject of the passage had been changed from Brahmā to Vishṇu, the mention of sons became inapplicable; as Vishṇu is not described in the accounts of the creation as having any sons, whereas Brahmā is. Compare with the 5th verse of the passage before us (in Schlegel’s text), the Vishṇu Purāṇa, i. 7, 1 ff.; and i. 7, 26, quoted in the First Part of this work, pp. 25, 26. The accounts of Brahmā’s descendants are not, however, always consistent. See Manu, i. 32 ff., and Vishṇu Purāṇa, i. 7, 12 ff., quoted in pp. 15 and 25 of Part First.

Before proceeding to quote the other texts which I have to adduce regarding the egg of Brahma, I shall here introduce two quotations, to show how the assumption of the form of a boar, ascribed in the older recension of this passage of the Rāmāyaṇa, to Brahmā, is in works of a later date, represented as the act of Viṣṇu. The first passage is from the rapid enumeration of the twenty-two incarnations of Viṣṇu, in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, i. 3, 7: Dvitiyaṁ tu bhavāyāsyā rasā-tala-gatām mahīm | uddharishyann upādatta yajñeśaḥ saukaraṁ vapuḥ | “Secondly, with a view to the creation of this universe, the lord of sacrifice, being desirous to raise up the earth, which had sunk into the lower regions, assumed the form of a boar.”

The second passage to be adduced, is from the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, i. 4, 1 ff. (p. 27 ff. of Wilson’s English trans.), and has been already partly quoted in the First Part of this work, pp. 19, 20:

<sup>51</sup> I take the opportunity of quoting here an answer given in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, i. 3, 1 ff. (p. 21 of Wilson’s trans.), to the question how it is conceivable that Brahmā should create;—an answer which if admitted as the only solution of the problem, would have rendered many speculations of the Indian philosophers unnecessary. Maitreya uvācha | nirguṇasyāprameyasya śuddhasyūpyamalatmanāḥ | katham sargādi-kartṛtvaṁ Brāhmaṇaḥ bhyupapadyate | Parāśara uvācha | śaktayaḥ sarva-bhāvānām achintyā [?] jñāna-gocharāḥ | yato ’to Brahmanas tāstu sargādyaḥ bhūva-śaktayaḥ | bhavanti tapasāṁ śreṣṭhā pūvakasya yathoshṇatā | “Maitreya asks: How can the agencies of creation, etc., be possible to Brahma, who is devoid of the [three] qualities, i. e. measurable, pure, and free from stain? Parāśara answers: Since powers which could not be imagined, are actually known to belong to all natures, therefore, o chief of ascetics, these powers of creative agency, etc., belong to the essence of Brahmā, as heat is an attribute of fire.”

“Maitreya said : Tell me, great Muni, how, at the beginning of the Kalpa, that divine Brahmā called Nārāyaṇa created all beings. Parāśara replied : Hear from me how the divine Brahmā, lord of the Prajāpatis, who was formed of Nārāyaṇa, created living beings. At the close of the past (or Pādma) Kalpa, Brahmā, the lord, endowed predominantly with the quality of goodness, awoke from his night-slumber, and beheld the universe void. He [was] the supreme lord Nārāyaṇa, who cannot even be conceived by others, existing in the form of Brahmā, the deity without beginning, the source of all things. [The verse given in Manu i. 10, and the Harivaṁśa, v. 36, regarding the derivation of the word Nārāyaṇa, is here quoted.] This lord Prajāpati, discovering by inference,—when the world had become one ocean,—that the earth lay within the waters, and being desirous to raise it up, assumed another form, taking the body of a boar consisting of the Vedic sacrifices, as he had before, at the commencement of the [previous] Kalpas, taken the shape of a fish, a tortoise, etc. Then Prajāpati, residing in the entire existing universe, the unchanging, supreme, and universal soul, sustainer of soul, and supporter of the earth, hymned by Sanaka and other saints, entered the water. Beholding him then descended to Pātāla, the goddess Earth, reverential, and prostrated through devotion, sang his praise : ‘Reverence, bearer of the shell and club, to thee who art all things : raise me to-day from this place : by thee have I been formerly lifted. . . . Having swallowed up the universe, when the world has become one ocean, thou, Govinda, sleepest, meditated upon by the wise. No one knows that which is thy highest form: the gods adore that form which [thou takest] in thy incarnations. Worshipping thee, the supreme Brahma, men desirous of final liberation have attained their object. Who shall obtain liberation without adoring Vāsudeva? . . . . . Thou art sacrifice, thou art the vashatṭkāra (a sacrificial formula), thou art the omkāra, thou art the fires. . . . . Being thus celebrated by the Earth, the glorious upholder of the earth, with a voice like the chanting of the Sāmaveda, uttered a deep thundering sound. Then the great boar, with eyes like the expanded lotus, tossing up the earth with his tusk, rose up resembling the leaf of the blue lotus, from the lower regions, like the great blue mountain . . . . [The boar is then again lauded by Sanandana and other saints, in a hymn, in the course of which his different members are compared in detail to different parts of the rite of sacrifice, etc.—See Wilson's Vishṇu Purāṇa, p. 31.] . . . . . Being thus hymned, the supreme Soul, the upholder of the earth, lifted the earth up quickly, and placed it upon the great waters. Resting upon this mass of waters, like a mighty ship, the earth does not sink, owing to the expansion of its bulk." 52

52 Another instance in which an act ascribed to Brahmā by earlier writers is transferred to Viṣṇu in the later Purāṇas, may be found in the story of the deluge in the Mbh., Vanaparva, 12, 797 ff. (see the Second Part of this work, pp. 329-332); towards the conclusion of which, vv. 12, 797 f., the Fish declares himself to be Brahmā: Athābravid animishas tām rishīm sa hīlas tādā | aham Prajāpatiḥ Brahmā yat-paraṁ nādhiṅanyate | matsya-rūpeṇa yūyañcha mayā smād moṣṭvā bhuyāt | "Then the god (lit. the unwinking), kindly-disposed, said to those rishis, 'I am the Prajāpati Brahmā, above whom no Being is discoverable: by me in the form of a fish you have been delivered from this danger.'" Compare the story as told in the Bhāg. Pur., (and see Burnouf, Pref. to Bhāg. Pur., iii. p. xxiii.). Bhāg. Pur. viii. 24, 4: Ity ukto Viṣṇurāteṇa bhagavān Vādarāyaṇiḥ | uvācha charitaṁ Viṣṇor matsya-rūpeṇa yat kṛitam | 'Suka uvācha | . . . . . 7. āsīt atita-kalpānte Brāhmaṇo naimittiko layaḥ | samudropaplūtās tatra lokā bhūrādayo nṛipa | 8. Kālenāgata-nidrasya dhātuh śīṣayi-shor balī | nyukhato niḥsrūtān vedān Hayagrivo 'ntike 'harat | 9. Jñātvā tad dānavendrasya Hayagrivasya cheshtitam | dadhūra sapharirūpaṁ bhagavān Harir īvara ityādi | "Being thus addressed by Viṣṇurāta, the divine Vādarāyaṇi related the deed of Viṣṇu done by him under the form of a fish. Suka said . . . . . 7. At the end of the past Kalpa there was a Brāhma, or partial, dissolution of the universe (see Wilson's Vish. Pur., pp. 56, and 630); in which the earth and other worlds were submerged under the ocean. The powerful Hayagriva [coming] near, snatched away the Vedas which had issued from the mouth of the creator, who from drowsiness, which had supervened through time, was disposed to sleep. Having discovered this act of Hayagriva, chief of the Dānavas, the divine lord, Hari, took the form of a saphari fish," etc.

The Linga Purāṇa, which is of the Śaiva class, and has not, as such, any interest in glorifying Viṣṇu, describes Brahmā as the deity who took the form of a boar : Part i. 4, 59 ff. : Rātrau chaikārṇave Brahmā naṣṭe sthāvara-jaṅgame | sushvāpāmbhasi yas tasmād Nārāyaṇa iti smṛitaḥ | sarvavy-ante prabuddho vai dṛiṣṭvā śūnyaṁ charācharam | srashtuṁ tadā matiṁ chakre Brahmā brahma-vidāṁ varāḥ | udakair āplutām zmūṁ tāṁ samādāya sanātanaḥ | pūrva-vat sthāpayāmāsa vārāhaṁ rūpam āsthitāḥ | "In the night, when all things moveable and immoveable had been destroyed in the universal ocean, Brahmā slept upon the waters, and is hence called Nārāyaṇa. At the close of the night, awaking, and beholding the universe void, Brahmā, chief of the knowers of Brahma, then resolved to create. Having assumed the form of a boar, this eternal [god] taking the earth, which was overflowed by the waters, placed it as it had been before."

To return to the mundane egg. In the Viṣṇu Purāṇa i. 2, 45 ff. we have the following account of its production, in which the simplicity of the older mythical conceptions is destroyed by the intermixture of metaphysical ideas borrowed from the Sāṅkhya philosophy. In fact, though it forms the subject of a magniloquent description, the egg was an element in the cosmogonic traditions with which any writers less ingenious and fanciful than the authors of the Purāṇas, would, perhaps, have found it somewhat inconvenient to deal in such a way as to harmonize with their philosophical speculations : Ākāśa-vāyu-tejāṁsi sasilam prithivī tathā | śabdādibhir guṇair brahman saṁyuktāny uttarot-taraḥ | śāntā ghorāścha mūḍhāścha viśeṣhās tena te smṛitāḥ | nānā-viryāḥ prithag-bhūtās tatas to saṁhatiṁ vinā | nāsaknuvan prajāḥ srashtuṁ asamāgamyā kṛtsnaśaḥ | sametyānyonya-saṁyogam paraspara-samāśrayāḥ | eka-saṅghāta-laxyāścha samprāpyaikyam aśeṣhataḥ | Puruṣādhishṭhitatvāchcha Pradhānānugraheṇa cha | mahadādayo viśeṣhāntā aṇḍam utpādayanti te | tat kramena vivridhhaṁ tu jala-budbuda-vat samam | bhūtebhyo 'ṇḍam mahābuddhe vṛihat tad udake śayam | prākṛitam Brahma-rūpasya Viṣṇoḥ saṁsthānam uttamam | tatṛavyakta-svarūpo 'sau vyakta-rūpī jagat-patih | Viṣṇur Brahma-svarūpeṇa svayam eva vyavasthitaḥ | Meru-tulyam abhūt tasya jarāyuscha mahādhārāḥ |

“Æther, air, fire, water and earth, when joined in order, with sound and the other qualities in succession, are then called specific, being soothing, terrific, or stupefying,<sup>53</sup> but being of different powers, and separated from one another, they could not, without contact, and without being combined together, produce living creatures. [At length] having attained to mutual conjunction, becoming associated with each other, having a tendency to amalgamation, and having so attained an entire unity,—being presided over by Purusha (spirit) and prospered by Pradhāna (matter),—these principles, commencing with Mahat (intellect), and down to the gross elements inclusive, generate an egg. Gradually augmented from the elements, smooth like a bubble of water, that vast egg, resting on the water, was the material and appropriate receptacle of Vishṇu in the form of Brahmā. There undiscernible in his essence, Vishṇu, the lord of the world, himself abode in a discernible shape, in the form of Brahmā. It was like mount Meru; the mountains were the womb, and the seas were the uterine fluids of that vast [production]. In that egg, o Brahmān, were collected the worlds, with their hills, continents, and oceans, the luminaries, the gods, Asuras, and men. This egg was enveloped externally by water, fire, air, æther, and the source of the elements (bhūtādi, i.e. ahankāra) increasing in tenfold progression; and in the same way ahankāra was invested by Mahat; and Mahat with all these [aforesaid principles] was surrounded by the indiscreet principle (Pradhāna). The egg is enveloped in these seven material coverings, as the seed within the cocoa-nut is surrounded by the outward husks. Assuming there the quality of passion (rajas) Hari, the universal lord, himself becoming Brahmā, engages in the creation of this world.”

The Vishṇu Purāṇa does not connect the egg any further with the creation, or tell us how it became divided, etc. etc.

The Linga Purāṇa, Part i., 3, 28 ff., gives a similar description of the egg: Mahādādi-viśeṣhāntā hy aṇḍam utpādayanti cha | jala-bud-buda-vat tasmāt avatirṇaḥ Pitāmahaḥ | sa eva bhagavān Rudro Viṣṇur viśvagataḥ prabhuh | tasminn aṇḍe tv ime lokā antar viśvam idaṁ jagat | aṇḍam daśa-guṇaiva nabhasā vāhyato vṛitam | ākāśaś chāvṛitas tadvad ahaṅkāreṇa śabdajah | mahatā śabda-hetur vai pradhānenāvṛitaḥ svayam | saptāṇḍāvaraṇāny āhus tasyātmā Kamalāsanaḥ | koṭi-koṭy-ayutāny atra chāṇḍāni kathitāni tu | tatra tatra chaturvaktṛā Brahmāṇo Harayo Bhavūḥ | sṛiṣṭiḥ pradhānena tadā labdhvā Sambhostu sannidhim ityādi |

“And these principles, from Mahat to the gross elements inclusive, generate an egg, like a bubble of water, from which issued the Parent [of the universe] who was the same as divine Rudra, and Viṣṇu, the omnipresent lord. Within that egg were these worlds,—this entire universe. The egg was externally invested with a tenfold æther; in like manner, the æther, sprung from sound, was surrounded by ahankāra; the cause of sound (ahankāra) by Mahat, and the latter itself by Pradhāna. These men call the seven coverings of the egg; its soul is Kamalāsana (Brahmā). Here ten thousand crores of crores of eggs are specified; in which four-faced Brahmās, Haris, and Bhavas (Śivas) were created by Pradhāna, which had attained to proximity with Śambhu (Śiva).

The Bhāgavata Purāṇa has the following passage on the same subject in the third Book, in answer to an enquiry how the Prajāpatis created the world :

Bhāg. Pur. iii. 20, 12 ff.—Maitreya evācha | Daivena durvitarkyeṇa parenūnimishheṇa cha | jātazobhād bhagavato mahān asid guṇa-trayāt | 13. Rajah-pradhānād mahatas trilingo daiva-choditāt | jātah sasaryja bhūtādir viyadādāni panchasah | 14. Tūni chaikaikasah srashtum asam-artḥāni bhautikam | saṁhatya daiva-yogena haimam aṇḍam avāsṛjan | 15. So 'sayiṣṭūdbhi-salile aṇḍa-kosho nirātmakah | sāgraṁ vai varaha-sāhasram anavātsit tam īśvaraḥ | 16. Tasya pūbher abhūt padmaṁ sahasrārkorudīdhiti | sarva-jīva-nikāyauko yatra svayam abhūt Svarāt | 17. so 'nuviṣṭo bhagavatā yah śete salilāsaye | loka-saṁsthāṁ yathā-pūrvam nirmamo saṁsthayā svayā |

“Maitreya said :

12. “The Great principle (Intelligence) arose from the three qualities agitated by the Divine Being in consequence of an inscrutable destiny, supreme, and ever wakeful. 13. Springing from the Great principle (in which the quality of passion prevailed, and which was impelled by destiny), the source of the elements (bhūtādi or ahankāra) created the æther and other principles, in groups of five. 14. These principles being severally unable to create, deposited, when united by the action of destiny, a golden egg formed of the elements. 15. This egg-shell lay lifeless on the waters of the ocean: the Lord dwelt in it for a complete [period of a] thousand years. 16. From his navel sprang a lotus splendid as a thousand suns, the abode of all living things, where Svarāṭ (Brahmā) himself was born. 17. He penetrated by the Divine Being who reposes on the receptacle of waters, constructed as before, the substance (saṁsthā) of the worlds with his own substance."

Bhāg. Pur. iii. 26, 50 ff. : Etāny asaṁhatya yadā mahad-ādini sapta vai | kāla-karma-guṇopeto jagadādir upāviśat | 51. tatas tenānuvid-dhebhyo [rubhitebhyaḥ, Comm.] yuktebhyo 'ndam achetanam | utthitam Purusho yasmād udatiṣṭhad asau Virāṭ | 52. Etad aṇdam viśeṣākhyam krama-criddhair daśottarair | toyādibhiḥ parivṛitam pradhānenācṛitair vahiḥ | yatra loka-vitāno 'yaṁ rūpam bhagavato Hareḥ | 53. hiraṇ-mayād anda-koshād utthāya salile śayāt | tam āviśya mahādevo bahudhā nirbībheda kham [chhidram, Comm.] 54. nirabhidyatāsyā prathamam mukham vāṇi tato 'bhavad ityādi |

50. "When these seven principles, Mahat and the rest, remained uncombined, the [god who is the] source of the universe entered into them, united with time, action, and the qualities. 51. Then out of these principles penetrated by him, and combined, there arose a lifeless egg, from which sprang Purusha, viz., that Virāṭ. 52. This egg, named Viśeṣa (the specifio) was surrounded by water, and other elements gradually increasing in extent by a tenfold progression, which in their turn were externally invested by Pradhāna. In this egg [was formed] this expanse of worlds, which is the form of the divine Hari. 53. Having arisen out of the envelopment of this golden egg reposing upon the water, the great god, pervading it, opened up many apertures. 54. First his mouth was divided, from which speech issued," etc.

The same process is also described in the second book of the same

Purāṇa, sect. 5, 32 ff.; but it is unnecessary to adduce more than a verse or two of the passage.

34. *Varsha-pūga-sahasrānte tad aṇḍam udakeśayam | kālā-karmā-
svabhāva-stho jīvo 'jīvam ajīwayat |* 35. *sa eva puruṣas tasmān aṇḍam
nirbhīdya nirgataḥ | sāhasrorv-aṅghri-bāhu-axaḥ sahasrānana-śīrṣhavān |*

34. "At the end of many thousand years, the Life (Jīva) residing in time, action, and nature, gave life to that lifeless egg reposing on the water. 35. Splitting the egg, Puruṣa issued forth with a thousand thighs, feet, arms, eyes, faces, and heads."

The same subject is yet again referred to in another text of the same work.

Bhāg. Pur. ii. 10, 10 f.: *Puruṣo 'ṇḍam vinirbhīdya yadūdau sa vinirgataḥ | ātmano 'yanam anvichhann apo 'srāxīch chhuchīḥ śuchīḥ |
tāsv avātsīt svasrīṣṭīśu sahasra-parivatsarān | tena Nārāyaṇo nāma
yad āpaḥ puruṣodbhavāḥ |*

10. "When, splitting the egg, Puruṣa first issued from it, seeking a receptacle for himself, he created the pure waters, himself pure. 11. In these waters created by himself he dwelt a thousand years. Hence he is named Nārāyaṇa, because the waters were produced from Puruṣa."

The story about the sexual intercourse of Brahmā with his own daughter, which is sometimes alluded to in the Purāṇas, is thus noticed in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, 1, 7, 4, 1 ff.—Prajāpatir ha vai svām duhitaram abhidadyau divam vā ushasam vā 'mithunī enayā syām' iti tam sambabhūva | 2. Tad vai devānām āga āsa 'ya ittham svām duhitaram asmakam svasāram karoti' iti | 3. Te ha devā ūchur 'yo 'yaṁ devaḥ paśūnām iṣṭe 'tisandham vā ayaṁ charati ya ittham svām duhitaram asmakam svasāram karoti vidhyemam' iti | tam Rudro 'bhyāyatyā vivyādha tasya sāmi retāḥ prachaskanda tatkā id nūnam tad āsa | 4. Tasmād etad rīṣiṇā 'bhyanūktam 'pitā yat svām duhitaram adhishkhan xmayā retāḥ sañjagmāno nishīṇhad' iti tad āgni-mārutam ity uktham tasmīṁs tad vyākhyāyate yathā tad devā retāḥ prajānayan | teshām yadā devānām krodho vyaid atha Prajāpatim abhishajyaṁs tasya tam śulpaṁ nirakṛītan | sa vai yajña eva Prajāpatiḥ |

“Prajāpati cast his eyes upon his own daughter, either the Sky, or the Dawn, [desiring] ‘May I pair with her.’ So [saying] he had intercourse with her. 2. This was a crime in the eyes of the gods, who said : ‘[He is guilty] who acts thus to his own daughter, our sister.’ 3. The gods said : ‘This god who rules over the beasts, commits a transgression in that he acts thus to his own daughter, our sister : pierce him through.’ Rudra assailed (?) and pierced him. Half of his seed fell to the ground. So it happened. 3. Accordingly this has been said by the rishi (R. V. x. 61, 7), ‘when the father approaching his daughter, uniting with the earth, discharged his seed,’ etc. This is a hymn addressed to Agni and the Maruts; and it is there related in what manner the gods generated this seed. When the anger of the gods had passed away, they applied remedies to Prajāpati, and cut out of him the arrow (?). Prajāpati is sacrifice.”

The following is the context of the passage of the Rig-veda referred to in the preceding legend. It is obscure and difficult to translate, even with the aid of Sāyana’s Comment, for a copy of which I am indebted to Professor Müller. The commentator regards verses 5–7 as intended to show how “Rudra Prajāpati created Rudra Vāstoshpati with a portion of himself:” (Yathā svamśenu bhagavān Rudrah prajāpatir Vāstoshpatim Rudram asrijat tad etad-ādibhir tisribhir vadati.)

R. V. x. 61, 4: Krishnā yad goshu aruṇīṣhu sidad divo napāta Aśvinā huve vām | vītam me yajñam āgatam me annam vavanvāṁsā na isham asmṛita dhrū | 5. Prathishṭa yasya vīrakarmam ishnad anushṭhitam nu naryyo apauhat | punas tad āṛihati yat kaṇāyā duhitur ā anubhṛitam anarvā | 6. Mudhyā yat kartram abhavad abhike kāmam kṛinvāne pitari yuatyām | manānag reto jahatur viyantā sānau nishikṭam sukṛitasya yonau | 7. Pitā yat svām duhitaram adhishkan xmayā retah sañjagmāno nishīñchat | svādhyo ajanayan brahma devā vāstoshpatim vṛatapām nira-taxan |

“When the night stands among the tawny cows (rays of the dawn), I invoke you twain, Aśvins, sons of the sky. Come to my sacrifice, come to my oblation, desiring it as food, ye who do not disappoint my longings.” 5. That friend of men, whose prolific, hero-generating [seed] was diffused, disseminated it far and wide, after it had been sent forth. Again the irresistible [god] expands that [germ] which had been fostered in [the womb of] his youthful daughter. 6. [They then did] that which was to be done by contact in the midst, when the father loved the youthful damsel,—approaching each other, they discharged a little seed, which was shed on the surface of the place of sacrifice. 7. When the father, impregnating his own daughter, uniting with the earth, discharged his seed, the contemplative gods generated prayer, they fashioned Vāstoshpati, the protector of sacred rites.”

The same story is repeated in the later literature, as in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa iii. 12, 28 ff., only that Vāch is the daughter of Brahmā who is there spoken of: Vāchaṁ duhitaraṁ tanvīm Svayambhūr haratīm manah | akāmāṁ chakame zattaḥ sakāma iti naḥ śrutam | 29. taṁ adharme kṛita-matim vilokya pitaraṁ sutāḥ | Marīchi-mukhyā munayo viśrambhāt pratyabodhayān | 30. Naitat pūrvaiḥ kṛitaṁ tvad ye na karishyanti chāpare | yas tvāṁ duhitaraṁ gachher anigrihyāṅgajam prabhuḥ | 31. tejīyasāṁ api hy etad na suślokyāṁ jagadguro | yad vṛittam anutishṭhan vai lokāḥ zemāya kalpate | 32. tasmai naṁo bhagavate ya idaṁ svena rochiṣhā | ātmasthaṁ vyañjayāmāsa sa dharmam pātum arhati | 33. Sa itthaṁ grīṇataḥ putrān puro drishṭvā prajāpatin | prajāpati-patis tanvaṁ tatyāja vṛīḍitas tadā | tāṁ diśo jagrihur ghorāṁ nīharaṁ yad vidus tamaḥ |

“We have heard, o Kshattriya, that Svayambhū (Brahmā) had a passion for Vāch; his slender and enchanting daughter, who had no passion for him. The Mūnis, his sons, headed by Marīchi, seeing their father bent upon wickedness, admonished him with affection: ‘This has never been done by those before you, nor will those after you do it,—that you, being the lord, should sexually approach your daughter, not restraining your passion. This, o preceptor of the world, is not a laudable deed even in glorious personages, through imitation of whose actions men attain felicity. Glory to that divine being (Vishṇu) who by his own lustre revealed this [universe] which abides in himself,—he must maintain righteousness.’ Seeing his sons, the Prajāpatīs, thus speaking before him, the lord of the Prajāpatīs (Brahmā) was ashamed, and abandoned his body. This dreadful body the regions received, and it is known as foggy darkness.”

This legend of Brahmā and his daughter, though, as appears from the passage in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, it has occasioned scandal among the Indian writers from an early period, is not to be regarded in the same light as many other stories regarding the licentious actions of some of the other gods. The production of a female and her conjunction with the male out of whom she was formed, is regarded in Manu i. 32, as one of the necessary stages in the cosmogonic process (and finds its near parallel in the book of Genesis): dvidhā kṛtvā 'tmano dehaṃ arddhena puruṣho 'bhavat | arddhena nārī tasyām sa Virājam asṛijāt prabhuḥ | “Dividing his own body into two, [Brahmā] became with the half a man, and with the half a woman; and in her he created (i.e. according to the commentator, begot)<sup>55</sup> Virāj.” Compare also the passage from the Viṣṇu Purāṇa i. 7, 12 ff. quoted in the First Part of this work, p. 25.<sup>56</sup> On the injustice of ascribing an immoral character to the Hindu writings, or to the deities whom they describe, on the ground of such legends as the one before us, or of the dialogue between Yama and Yamī in the 10th hymn of the tenth Mandala of the Rig-veda, see some instructive remarks by Prof. Roth in the 3rd Vol. of the Journal of the American Oriental Society, pp. 332-337.

The case is different, however, with another class of stories, which are frequently to be met with in the Itihāsas and Purāṇas, in which various adulterous amours, of the Aśvins, Indra, Varuṇa, and Kṛishṇa, are described.—See the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, p. 150, the Mahābhārata, Vanaparva, v. 10, 316 ff. Indische Studien, i. 198; the Rāmāyaṇa i. 48, 16 ff., Schlegel's ed.; and the passages quoted from the Mbh. in the First Part of this work, pp. 70, 165 (with Note 9), and 166. In all these cases a licentious character is evidently attributed to the gods.<sup>57</sup> In the case of Kṛishṇa the following is the reasoning by which the author of the Bhāgavata Purāṇa attempts to quiet the scruples of some of the purer-minded among the devotees of the pastoral deity, and to vindicate his morality, by seeking to impart a mystic character to those loose adventures which had been the occasion of scandal to them, though, no doubt, well suited to the taste of his coarser worshippers.

<sup>56</sup> “The Matsya P. has a little allegory of its own on the subject of Brahmā's intercourse with S'atarūpā; for it explains the former to mean the Vedas, and the latter the Sāvitrī, or holy prayer, which is their chief text; and in their cohabitation there is therefore no evil: Veda-rāsīḥ smṛito Brahmā Sāvitrī tad-adhishṭhitā | tas-māna kāsched doshaḥ syāt Sāvitrī-gamane vibhoḥ | ”—Wilson's Viṣṇu Pur. p. 53, note.

<sup>57</sup> Kumārila Bhaṭṭa, however, attempts to explain allegorically not only the dalliance of Brahmā with his own daughter, but also the adultery of Indra with Ahalyā.—See the passage quoted from him and translated in Müller's Anc. Sansk. Lit., pp. 529 f.

“The king said : 27. The divine lord of the world became partially incarnate for the establishment of virtue, and the repression of its opposite. 28. How did he, the expounder, author, and guardian of the bulwarks of righteousness, practise its contrary, the corruption of other men's wives ? 29. With what object did the lord of the Yadus (Krishna) perpetrate what was blameable ? Resolve, devout saint, this our doubt. Suka said : 30. The transgression of virtue, and the daring acts which are witnessed in superior beings, must not be charged as faults to those glorious persons, as no blame is imputed to fire, which consumes fuel of every description. 31. Let no one other than a superior being ever even in thought practise the same: any one who, through folly, does so, perishes, like any one not a Rudra [drinking] the poison produced from the ocean.<sup>59</sup> 32. The word of superior beings is true, and so also their conduct is sometimes [correct]: let a wise man observe their command, which is right. 33. These beings, o king, who are beyond the reach of personal feelings, have no interest in good deeds done in this world, nor do they incur any detriment from the contrary. 34. How much less can there be any relation of good or evil between the lord of all beings, brute, mortal, and divine, and the creatures over whom he rules? (i.e. since he is entirely beyond the sphere of virtue and vice, how can any of his actions partake of the nature of either?) 35. Since Munis, who are satisfied by worshipping the pollen from the lotus of his feet, and by the force of abstraction have shaken off all the fetters of works,—since even they are uncontrolled, and act as they please, why should there be any restraint upon him (the Supreme Deity) when he has voluntarily assumed a body? 36. He who moves within the gopīs (milkmen's wives) and their husbands, and all embodied beings, is their superintendent, who only in sport assumed a body upon earth. 37. Taking a human form out of benevolence to creatures, he practises sports such as that those who hear of them may become devoted to himself. 38. The [male] inhabitants of Vraja harboured no ill-will to Krishna, since, deluded by his illusion, they each imagined that his own wife was by his side. 39. When Brahmā's night had arrived, the gopīs, beloved and gladdened by Krishna, departed unwillingly to their own homes."

This passage is followed by an assurance on the part of the author of the Purāṇa, that the person who listens with faith to the narrative of Krishna's sports with the cowherds' wives, or who repeats it to others, shall attain strong devotion to that deity, and shall speedily be freed from love, that disease of the heart.

I quote the remarks of the commentator, Śrīdhara Svāmin, on verses 30 ff. of this passage: 30. Paramēśvare kaimutika-nyāyena parihartuṁ sāmānyato mahatām vṛttam āha 'dharmavyatikrama' iti | sāha-sāñcha dṛṣṭam Prajāpātindra-Soma-Viśvāmittrādīnāṁ tacheha teshāṁ

"In order to refute [the charge of immorality] in regard to the Supreme Deity, by the à fortiori argument, the author states generally the conduct of great persons in the words 'the transgression,' etc. The 'daring acts witnessed,' etc., i.e. of Prajāpati, Indra, Soma, Viśvāmitra, and others; and it is not to be charged to them as a fault. 31. Having intimated the doubt that according to the reasoning 'whatever an eminent person does,'<sup>60</sup> etc., etc., there is a danger that another person may do the like,—he says 'Let no one do the same,' etc.; 'no one other than a superior being,' i.e. no one who is in subjection to a body, etc.; 'as anyone separate from Rudra using,' swallowing 'poison.' 32. Whence, then, is the authority for pure conduct? He tells us in the words, 'of superior beings,' etc. Their word is true; therefore let their declarations be followed. Their conduct is sometimes true [correct]: therefore, let 'their correct words,' viz., that, not being contrary [to right], which is declared by their word, be followed. 33. In answer to the question whether these superior beings also thus practise 'daring acts,' he states, in the words 'good deeds,' etc., that they have no other concern whatever than merely to nullify the consequences of their commenced works [so as to prevent these works from interfering with their final liberation]. 34. He arrives at his main subject in the words 'how much less,' etc.: i.e. there is no such relation of good or evil: What more is to be said? 35. He makes this clear. [The first words here mean either] 'they who are satisfied by worshipping the pollen of the lotus of his feet;' or 'they who are worshippers of the pollen of the lotus of his feet, and are also satisfied, i.e. devotees;' further, who are wise men, not bound,—finding no restraint. The fact that the gopīs were other men's wives is [here] admitted, and obviated. 36. Now he [further] asserts, in the words 'the gopīs,' that in the case of the divine, all-pervading, Being there is no such thing as an attachment to other men's wives [since he pervades, and is one with, everything]. It is 'he who moves within,' the superintendent, the witness of the understanding, etc., who in sport takes a body; but he does not resemble such persons as ourselves, so that he should be in fault. 37. He now, in the words 'out of benevolence,' answers the question why, if the case be so, the Being who has no want unsatisfied should engage in acts which have been censured: the purport is, that he seeks to incline to himself such persons as are attracted by sensual love, and greatly devoted to external things.<sup>61</sup> 38. But do not others of a very different mode of life represent their own conduct as of this very description? In reference to this he says 'they harboured no ill-will,' etc. The drift is, that those who without such divine character act in the same way are to be considered sinners."

The following is the passage referred to by the commentator in his annotation on verse 31. It will be seen that it inculcates a doctrine diametrically opposed to that urged in the earlier part, at least, of the argument by which the author of the Bhāgavata endeavours to justify the adulteries of Krishna, and is perfectly coincident with the tenor of the condemnation which the same author (who is inconsistent with

"20. For it was by works that Janaka and other sages attained perfection. You also ought to act, seeking the edification of mankind.<sup>62</sup> 21. Whatever a person of eminence practises, that the rest of men also [do]. Whatever authoritative example he sets, the people follow. 22. There is nothing in the three worlds, son of Prithā, which I have to do, nor anything unattained which I have to attain; and yet I continue in action. 23. If I were not to continue diligently engaged in works, o son of Prithā, men would follow my course in every respect. 24. These people will be ruined if I do not practise works; and I shall occasion a confusion of castes: I shall destroy these subjects. 25. In the same way as the ignorant, who are attached to works, perform them, so let the wise man perform them without attachment, seeking the edification of mankind. 26. Let not the wise man create a difference of opinion among ignorant persons who are attached to works: let him fulfil all ceremonies with alacrity, while he practises them with abstracted mind."

I quote here some other interesting legends which I have observed in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa regarding Prajāpati, the creation of the gods, and the manner in which they acquired immortality, and became

"Prajāpati produced creatures. From his upper breaths he created the gods, and from his lower breaths mortal creatures. After the creatures he created Death the devourer. 2. Of this Prajāpati, half was mortal, and half immortal. With that part of him which was mortal, he was afraid of Death. Fearing, he entered this [earth], having become two things, earth and water. 3. Death said to the gods, 'what has become of him who created us?' [They answered], 'fearing you, he has entered this earth.' Death said, 'let us search for, and collect him. I will not kill him.' The gods then collected him on this [earth]. The part of him which was in the waters, they collected those waters, and the part which was in this [earth], they [collected] that earth. Having collected both of these, the earth and the waters, they made a brick. Hence these two things make a brick, viz., earth and water. 4. Then these five parts of him were mortal, hair, skin, flesh, bone, and marrow; and these immortal, mind, voice, breath, 'eye, ear . . . . . 6. The gods said, 'let us make him immortal.' So [saying], having surrounded this mortal part with these immortal parts, they made it immortal . . . . . thence Prajāpati became immortal . . . . ."

x. 1, 4, 1.—"Prajāpati was formerly both of these two things, mortal and immortal. His breaths were immortal, and his body mortal. By this rite, by this ceremonial, he made himself uniformly undecaying and immortal."

The next extracts tell how the gods acquired immortality.

Sātapaṭha Brāhmaṇa, p. 787.—“It is this year which is death; for it wears away the life of mortals by days and nights, and then they die; wherefore it is it which is death. Whoso knows this death [which is] the year,—it does not wear away his life by days and nights before [the time of] his decay: he lives through his whole life. 2. This [the year] is the ender; for it by days and nights brings on the end of the life of mortals, and then they die: hence it is the ender. Whosoever knows this ender, death, the year, it does not by days and nights bring on the end of his life, before his decay: he lives through his whole life. 3. The gods were afraid of this ender, death, the year [which is] Prajāpati, ‘lest he should by days and nights bring on the end of our life.’ 4. They performed these rites of sacrifice, viz. the agnihotra, the darśa, and pūrnāmāsa, the *chāturmāsya*s (oblations offered at intervals of four months), the paśubandha, and the saumya adhvara; but sacrificing with these rites they did not attain immortality. 5. They moreover kindled sacrificial fires; they celebrated parīśrita, yajushmatir, *lokamprinā*s, without definite measure, as some now<sup>65</sup> celebrate them. So did the gods, but they did not attain immortality. They went on worshipping and toiling, seeking to acquire immortality. Prajāpati said to them, 'Ye do not celebrate all my forms; ye carry them to excess [?] and ye do not duly carry them out; hence ye do not become immortal.' 7. They said, 'Tell us how we may celebrate all thy forms.' 8. He said, 'perform 63 hundred parisṛits, 63 hundred and 36 yajush-matis, and 10 thousand 8 hundred lokamprīnas: ye shall then celebrate all my forms, and shall become immortal.' The gods celebrated accordingly, and then they became immortal. 9. Death said to the gods, 'In the same way all men will become immortal, and then what portion shall remain to me?' They said, 'no other person shall henceforward become immortal with his body, when thou shalt seize this portion [the body]: then everyone who is to become immortal through knowledge or work, shall become immortal after parting with his body.' This which they said, 'through knowledge or work,' this is that knowledge which is Agni, that work which is Agni. 10. Those who so know this, or those who perform this work, are born again after death; and being born, they are born for immortality. And those who do not so know, or those who do not perform this work, and are born again after death, become again and again his (death's) food."

Sātapatha Brāhmaṇa, xi. i. 2, 12 (p. 828).—Martyā ha vā agre devā āsuḥ | sa yadaiva te saṁvatsaram āpur atha amṛitā āsuḥ | sarvaṁ vai saṁvatsaraḥ | sarvaṁ vā acayyam | etena u ha asya acayyaṁ sukṛitam bhavaty acayyo lokāḥ | "The gods were originally mortal.<sup>66</sup> When they obtained the year, they became immortal. The year is all: all is undecaying: by it a man obtains undecaying welfare, an undecaying world."

Sātapatha Brāhmaṇa, xi. 2, 3, 6 (p. 839).—Martyā ha vā agre devā āsuḥ | sa yadaiva te brahmaṇā "pur (vyāptāḥ, Comm.) atha amṛitā āsuḥ | "The gods were originally mortal. When they were pervaded by Brāhma, they became immortal."

From the next passage, as from two others already quoted (p. 47), it appears that Prajāpati himself was not entirely exempt from the power of death. Sātapatha Brāhmaṇa, x. 4, 4, 1 (p. 790).—

<sup>66</sup> See Sātapatha Brāhmaṇa, ii. 2, 2, 8 (p. 146), quoted in Part II. of this work, p. 388, note 36, for another legend on this same subject, in which the gods are said to have become immortal by another means.

The following legend describes how the gods became distinguished from, and superior to, the Asuras. Sātāpatha Brāhmaṇa, ix. 5, 1, 12 ff. (p. 741).—Devāscha Asurāscha ubhaye prajāpatyāḥ Prajāpateḥ pitur dāyam upeyur vācham eva satyānṛite satyāñchaiva anṛitañcha | te ubhaye eva satyam avadann ubhaye 'nṛitam | te ha sadṛiṣaṃ vadantaḥ sadṛiṣā evāsuḥ | 13. Te devā utsṛijyānṛitaṃ satyam anvālebhire | asurā u ha utsṛijya satyam anṛitam anvālebhire | 14. Tad ha idaṃ satyam īxāñchakre yad asureshv āsa 'devā vā utsṛijya anṛitaṃ satyam anvālapsata hanta tad ayāni' iti tad devān ājagāma | 15. Anṛitam u ha īxāñchakre yad deveshv āsa 'asurā vā utsṛijya satyam anṛitam anvālapsata hanta tad ayāni' iti tad asurān ājagāma | 16. Te devāḥ sarvaṃ satyam avadan sarvaṃ asurā anṛitam | te devā āsakti<sup>67</sup> satyāṃ vadanta aishāvīratarā iva āsur anāḍhyatarā iva | tasmād u ha etad ya āsakti satyāṃ vadaty aishāvīratara ivaiva bhavaty anāḍhyatara iva | sa ha tv evāntato bhavati<sup>68</sup> devā hy evāntato 'bhavan | 17. *Atha ha asurā āsaky anṛitaṃ vadanta ūsha iva pipisur<sup>69</sup> āḍhyā ivāsuḥ | tasmād u ha etad ya āsaky anṛitaṃ vadaty ūsha ivaiva piṣyaty āḍhya iva bhavati parā ha tv evāntato bhavati parā hy asurā abhavan | tad yat tat satyāṃ trayī sā vidyā | te devā abruvan 'yajñam kṛitvedaṃ satyāṃ tanavūmahai' | . . . . . 27. <sup>67</sup> Āsakti satyam | kevalaṃ satyam | Comm.

<sup>68</sup> Some such proposition as abhi might appear to be wanted here; but Dr. Aufrecht suggests to me that bhavati may be taken in a pregnant sense as meaning, "he really exists, continues, or prevails." Compare the words at the close of the 27th paragraph of this passage.

<sup>69</sup> I am indebted to Dr. Aufrecht for pointing out to me another passage of the Sātāpatha Brāhmaṇa where the word piṣyati occurs, and which throws light on the one before us. The passage in question occurs in pp. 71, 72, of the Brāhmaṇa, i. 7, 3, 18: Pesukāṃ vai vāstu piṣyati ha prajāyā pasubhīr gasyaivāṃ viduṣho 'nush-tubhau bhavataḥ | "His house becomes flourishing, he increases in progeny and cattle,—that man who, when he knows this, has the two anushtubh." The commentator explains the word pesukam as equal to abhiwardhana-sīlam, "whose nature is to increase," and piṣyati as meaning atioriddho bhavati, "he becomes exceedingly augmented."

“The gods and Asuras, both descendants of Prajāpati, obtained their father Prajāpati's inheritance, speech, true and false, both truth and falsehood. They both spoke truth, and both [spoke] falsehood. Speaking alike, they were alike. 13. Then the gods, abandoning falsehood, adopted truth; while the Asuras abandoning truth, adopted falsehood. 14. The truth which had been in the Asuras, perceived this, ‘the gods, abandoning falsehood have adopted truth; let me go thither.’ So [saying, truth] came to the gods. 15. Then the falsehood which had been in the gods, perceived, ‘the Asuras, abandoning truth have adopted falsehood; let me go thither.’ So [saying, falsehood] came to the Asuras. 16. The gods [then] spoke entirely truth, and the Asuras entirely falsehood. Speaking truth alone (or devotedly) the gods became, as it were, weaker, and, as it were, poorer. Hence it happens that the man who speaks only truth, becomes as it were, weaker and poorer; but in the end he becomes [superior?] for the gods became so in the end. 17. Then the Asuras, speaking only falsehood, increased like saline earth, and became, as it were, rich. Hence it happens that he who speaks only falsehood, increases like saline earth, and becomes, as it were, rich; but is overcome in the end, for the Asuras were overcome. That which is truth is the triple science (the three Vedas). Then the gods said, ‘let us, after performing sacrifice, spread truth.’” The gods then performed a variety of sacrifices, which were always interrupted by the arrival of the Asuras. At length, 27. “When these had gone, they instituted the third savana, and accomplished it. That which they accomplished, they obtained entirely true. Then the Asuras went away, and these gods became [superior and] the Asuras were worsted. The man who knows this becomes in his own person superior, and his hater, his enemy, is defeated.”

The next legend explains how inequality was introduced among the gods. Śatapatha Brahmana, 4, 5, 4, 1 (p. 397 f.)—*Sarve ha vai devā

“Originally the gods were all alike, all pure. Of them, being all alike, all pure, three desired: ‘May we become superior,’ viz., Agni, Indra, and Sūrya (the sun). 2. They went on worshipping and toiling. They saw these atigrāhyas; <sup>70</sup> they took them over and above. Because they did so, these draughts (or cups) were called atigrāhyas. They became superior. As they [obtained?] thus, as it were, superiority, so superiority is, as it were, acquired by the man, of whom, when he knows this, they receive these grahas (draughts, or cups). 3. Originally there was not in Agni the same flame, as this flame which is [now] in him. He desired: ‘May this flame be in me.’ He saw this graha, he took it; and hence there became this flame in him. 4. Originally there was not in Indra the same vigour, etc., etc. [as in para. 3.] 5. Originally there was not in Sūrya the same lustre, etc., etc. [the same as in para. 3.] That man has in himself these forces, these energies, of whom, when he knows this, they receive these grahas.”

<sup>70</sup> By this name are called “three particular grahas, or sacrificial vessels, with which libations were made in the Jyotishṭoma sacrifice to Agni, Indra, and Sūrya.” Prof. Goldstücker’s Dict. The word is explained by Boehtlingk and Roth, as meaning “haustus insuper hauriendus,” a draught to be drunk over and above; the designation of three fillings of the cup, which are drawn at the Soma offering.

<sup>2</sup> Instead of the words prithivyāḥ sapta dhāmabhiḥ, the Sāma-veda reads, prithivyā adhi sāvavi: "over the surface of the earth." This verse, as well as the following ones, is rendered by Professor Benfey, in his translation of the Sāma-veda, as well as in his "Orient and Occident," i. 30. He understands the place from which Vishnu strides to be the sun, referring to verse 20. For the sense given by Sāyana to this and the following verses, see Wilson's translation of the Rig-veda and notes in loco. Compare also Rosen's Latin version.

or, his step, was] enveloped in his dust.<sup>3</sup> 18. Vishṇu, the unconquerable<sup>4</sup> preserver, strode three steps, bearing from thence fixed observances. 19. Behold the acts of Vishṇu, through which this fitting (or intimate) friend of Indra perceived<sup>5</sup> religious ceremonies. 20. Sages constantly behold that highest position of Vishṇu, like an eye fixed in the sky. 21. Wise men, singing praises, and ever wakeful, light up<sup>6</sup> [by the power of their hymns?] that which is the highest station of Vishṇu.”

The 17th verse of this hymn is quoted in the Nirūkta, xii. 19;<sup>7</sup> where we have the following explanation of its purport:—

Yad idam kīṇcha tad vikramate Viṣṇuḥ | tridhā nidhatte padaṁ | 'tredhā-bhāvāya prithivyām antariṇe divi' iti Śākapūṇiḥ | 'samā-rohane viṣṇupade gayasīrasi' ity Aurnavābhaḥ | 'samūḍham asya pāṁsure' | pyāyane 'ntariṇe padaṁ na dṛśyate | apirā upamārthe syāt | samūḍham asya pāṁsule iva padaṁ na dṛśyate ityādi |

“Vishṇu strides over this, whatever exists. He plants his step in a three-fold manner,—i.e. ‘for a three-fold existence, on earth, in the atmosphere, and in the sky,’ according to Śākapūṇi; or, ‘on the hill where he rises, on the meridian, and on the hill where he sets,’ according to Aurnavābha. ‘Samūḍham asya pāṁsure,’ i.e. his place is not seen in the atmosphere (pyāyane antariṇe): or the phrase may be

<sup>4</sup> Adābhya may also mean “who cannot be deceived.” The idea of Vishṇu being pre-eminently the preserver of the universe which became current in later times, may possibly have been derived from this verse. ●

<sup>5</sup> Sāyana gives to the root spas the sense of “hinderer,” or “touching.” Benfey, in his S. V., renders paspaṇe by “received,” and, in the “Orient and Occident,” by “firmly fixed.” The sense, he says, is this: “Look to the sun, where the terminus lies from which Vishṇu started (verses 16, 21), and in which all the powers which work in Nature have their source.” Roth, in his Illustrations of the Nirūkta, pp. 138 f., thinks that the sense of “beholding” is suitable in all the texts where forms of the root spas occur in the R. V.

Vishṇuḥ Ādityaḥ | Katham iti yata āha 'tredhā nidadhe padam' nidhatte padam nidhānam padaiḥ | kva tat tāvat | 'prithivyām antarixe divi' iti Śākāpūṇiḥ | pāṛthivo 'gnir bhūtvā prithivyām yat kiñchid asti tad vikramate tad adhitishṭhati. | antarixe vaidyutātmanā | divi suryātmanā | yad uktam 'tam ū akrinvan tredhā bhuve kam' (R. V. x. 88, 10) iti | 'samārohane' udaya-girāv udyan padam ekaṁ nidhatte | 'vishṇupade' madhyandine 'ntarixe | 'gayasirasy' astāṁgirāv ity Aurnavābha āchāryyo manyate |

"Vishṇu is the sun [Āditya]. How so? Because [the hymn] says, 'in three places he planted his step;' i.e. plants his step, [makes] a planting with his steps. Where, then, is this done? 'On the earth, in the firmament, and in the sky,' according to Śākāpūṇi. Becoming terrestrial fire, he strides over,—abides in, whatever there is, on earth; in the shape of lightning, in the firmament; and in the form of the sun, in the sky. As it is said (in the R. V. x. 88, 10), 'They made him to become threefold.' Aurnavabha Achāryya thinks [the meaning is] this, 'He plants one foot on the 'samārohana (place of rising), when mounting over the hill of ascension; [another] on the 'vishṇupada,' the meridian sky; [a third] on the 'gayasiras,' the hill of setting."

It thus appears from the statement of Yāska that the two old writers whom he quotes, had proposed two different interpretations of Vishṇu's steps.

First: Śākāpūṇi thought that the triple manifestation of the god, in the form of fire on earth, of lightning in the atmosphere, and of the solar light in the sky, was intended in the hymn. This three-fold distribution of divine agency is thus referred to in another interesting passage of the Nirukta, vii. 5 :

"There are only three deities, according to the Nairuktas (etymologists), Agni, whose place is on earth, Vāyu, or Indra, whose place is in the atmosphere, and Sūrya, whose place is in the sky. These [deities] each receive many designations, in consequence of their greatness,<sup>9</sup> or from the diversity of their functions, as [the appellations of] hotri, adhvaryu, brahman, and udgātri are applied to one and the same person. Or [the gods in question] may all be distinct, for distinct hymns and appellations are addressed to them," etc.<sup>10</sup>

According to Śākapūṇi, therefore, Viṣṇu would be the god who is manifested in a three-fold form on earth, in the atmosphere, and in the sky.

Secondly: Aurnavābha interprets the passage differently. He understands the three steps of Viṣṇu, not of fire, lightning, and solar light, but of the different positions of the sun at his rising, his culmination, and his setting. According to him, therefore, Viṣṇu is simply the sun.

Sāyana (see Professor Wilson's translation, p. 53, note) understands this passage as referring to the three steps of Viṣṇu in his "Dwarf incarnation," of which I shall supply details further on. The commentator on the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā annotates thus, on 5, 15 (= verse 17 of the hymn before us):

Viṣṇus trivikramāvatāraṁ kṛtvā idaṁ viśvaṁ vichakrame vibhajya kramate sma | tad evāha | tredhā padaṁ nidadhe bhūnāv ekam padam antariṣṭe dvitīyaṁ divi tṛtīyam iti kramād Agni-Vāyu-Sūrya-rūpeṇa ity arthaḥ |

"Viṣṇu, becoming incarnate as Trivikrama (the god who stepped thrice) strode over,—i.e. stepped by separate strides over,—this whole [universe]. It is this that [the ṛishi] expresses [in the words] "In three places he planted his step,' i.e., one step on the earth, a second in the atmosphere, and a third in the sky: in the successive forms of Agni, Vāyu, and Sūrya."

The commentator combines the view that the Dwarf incarnation of

<sup>10</sup> In a previous part of this passage, vii. 4, it is said, Mahābhāgyād devatīyā eka ātmā bahudhā stūyate | ekasyātmāno 'nye devāḥ pratyanyāni bhavanti | "From the greatness of the Deity one Soul is celebrated in many ways. The different gods are members of the one Soul," etc. Compare Mr. Colebrooke's Essays, i. 26 f.; or p. 12 f. of W. and N.'s Ed.

Vishṇu is referred to in the hymn, with the conception that his different steps on the earth, in the atmosphere, and in the sky, were taken in the successive characters of Agni, Vāyu, and Sūrya, which is the interpretation of Śākapūṇi, as explained by Durga. There is no trace in the words either of Śākapūṇi, or of Aurnavābha, as handed down by Yaska of any allusion to such a Trivikrama incarnation of Vishṇu.

R. V. i. 85, 7: Te avardhanta sva-tavasō mahitrānā ā nākaṁ tasthuru chakrire sadah | Vishṇur yad ha āvad vṛishanam mada-chyutaṁ vayo na sīdann adhi barhishi priye |

"They (the Maruts) strong in themselves, increased in greatness. They ascended to heaven, and have made [for themselves] a spacious abode. When Vishṇu assisted the hero [Indra?] who humbles pride,<sup>12</sup> they sat down like birds on the sacrificial grass which they love."

R. V. i. 90, 5, 9.—Uta no dhiyo go-agrāḥ Pūshan Vishṇo eva-yāvaḥ | karta nah svastimataḥ | 9. śaṁ no Mitraḥ śaṁ Varuṇaḥ śaṁ no bhavatu Aryamā | śaṁ na Indro Bṛihaspatiḥ śaṁ no Vishṇur urukramaḥ |

5. "Pushan, Vishṇu, swift goer, make our prayers to bring us cattle as their principal fruit: make us prosperous. . . . . 9. May Mītra, may Varuna, may Aryaman, may Indra, may Bṛihaspati, may the wide-striding Vishṇu, all grant us prosperity."

I now come to a hymn which, with the exception of the last verse—(where two gods are alluded to)—is devoted exclusively to the celebration of Vishnu's praises.

R. V. i. 154 (=Vāj. S. 5, 18; A. V. 7, 26, 1).—Vishṇor nu kaṁ vīryāṇi pravochaṁ<sup>13</sup> yaḥ pārthivāni vimame rajāṁsi | yo askabhāyad uttarāṁ sadhasthaṁ vichakramānas tredhā urugāyaḥ | 2. (=A. V. 7, 26, 2, 3;

<sup>11</sup> The word occurs in R. V. i. 61, 7, Mushāyad vishṇuḥ pachatam ityādi; but it may there be an epithet of Indra.

<sup>12</sup> Though the commentator in loco renders mada-chyutam by madasya harsha-syāsektāram, "dispenser of joy," he interprets it in his note on R. V. i. 61, 2—where it is an epithet of Indra—by śatrūṇām madasya garvasya chyāvayitāram, "who brings down the pride of his enemies." In R. V. viii. 1, 21, the word mada-chyut is again applied to Indra, and in R. V. viii. 85, 5, to his thunderbolt.

Nir. 1, 20): Pra tad Vishṇuḥ stavate vīryeṇa mṛigo na bhīmaḥ kucharo girishṭhāḥ<sup>14</sup> | yasyorushu trishu vikramāṇeshu adhixiyanti bhuvanāni viśvā | 3. Pra Vishṇave śūsham etu manma girizite urugāyāya<sup>15</sup> vṛishṇe | yah idam dirgham prayataṁ sadhastham eko vimame tribhir it padebhiḥ | 4. Yasya trī pūrṇā madhunā padāni aśiyamāṇā svadhayā madanti | ya u tridhātu prithivīm uta dyām eko dādḥāra bhuvanāni viśvā | 5. Tad asya priyam abhi pātho aśyām naro yatra devayavo madanti | urukramasya sa hi bandhur itthā Vishṇoḥ pade parame madhva utsaḥ | 6. (Vāj. S. 6, 3; Nir. 2, 7): Tū vām vāstūni uśmasi gamadhyai yatra gāvo bhūri-śringā ayāsaḥ | atrāha tad urugāyasya vṛishṇaḥ paramam padam ava bhāti bhūri |

"I declare the valorous deeds of Vishṇu, who measured the mundane regions, who established the upper world, striding thrice, the wide-stepping. 2. Therefore is Vishṇu celebrated for his prowess, terrible like a wild beast, destructive, abiding in the mountains [or, clouds, if this be an epithet of the god]; he within whose three vast paces all the worlds abide. 3. Let the hymn proceed [as a source of] strength to Vishṇu, the dweller in the aerial mountains, the wide-stepping, the vigorous, who alone measured with three steps this wide, stable firmament;—4. Whose three stations, replenished with honey, imperishable, gladden us spontaneously; who alone sustained the triple universe, the earth, and the sky, [yea] all the worlds. 5. May I attain to that beloved heaven of his, where men devoted to the gods rejoice; for (such a friend is he) there is a spring of honey in the highest abode of the wide-stepping Vishṇu. 6. We desire to attain to those abodes of you two, where the many-horned and swiftly-moving cows abide. Here

I shall quote a portion of the explanation Sāyana gives of the words, pārthivāni rajāmsi, in the first verse of the preceding hymn: Yo Vishnuḥ pārthivāni prithivī-sambandhīni rajāmsi rañjanātmakāni xity-ādi-loka-trayābhimānīny Agni-Vāyū-Āditya-rūpāni rajāmsi vimame viśeshena nirmame | atra trayo lokā api prithivī-śabda-vāchyāḥ | tathā cha mantrāntaram (R. V. i. 108, 9), 'yad Indrāgnī avamasyām prithivyām madhyamasyām paramasyām uta stha' iti | Taittirīye 'pi 'yo 'syām prithivyām asy āyushā' ity upakramya 'yo dvitīyasyām tṛtīyasyām prithivyām' iti | tasmāl lokatrayasya prithivī-śabda-vāchyatvam | . . . yadvā yo Vishnuḥ pārthivāni prithivī-sambandhīni rajāmsi adhastana-sapta-lokān vimame | . . . rajaḥ-śabdo loka-vācī 'lokā rajāmsy uchyante' iti Yāskenoक्तatvāt | . . . athavā pārthivāni prithivī-nimittakāni rajāmsi lokān vimame | bhūr-ādi-loka-trayam ity arthaḥ | bhūmyām upārjita-karma-bhogārthatvād itara-lokānām tat-kāraṇatvam |

"[The meaning is], Vishnu who formed,—especially constructed,—the terrestrial [regions]; i.e., those connected with prithivī (the earth),—the regions (rajāmsi),—the things whose nature is to delight (rañjanātmakāni),—represented by the three worlds, the earth, etc., and existing in the form of Agni, Vāyu, and Āditya. Here all the three worlds are intended to be designated by the term prithivī. Thus another hymn [R. V. i. 108, 9, says]: 'Whether, Indra and Agni, ye are in the lowest earth (prithivī), in the middle [earth], or in the highest,' etc. In the Taittirīya also, [we have the words beginning with] 'thou who art on this earth,' etc., etc.; [and proceeding] 'who in the second, or third earth,' etc., etc. Hence the three worlds are intended to be signified by the word prithivī. . . Or, [the meaning may be], the Vishnu who formed the terrestrial [regions], the regions connected with the earth, the seven worlds beneath the earth. The term rajas denotes a world, since Yāska says 'worlds are called rajāmsi.' . . . Or [the sense may be], he made the terrestrial regions, the worlds caused by the earth, i.e. the three worlds, the earth, and the others. For as the other worlds are meant to be enjoyed as the rewards of merit acquired on earth, the latter is the cause of the former."

*uchyate | udakaṁ raja uchyate | lokā rajāṁsy uchyante | asrig<sup>18</sup>-ahan
 rajasī uchyete | 'rajāṁsi chitrā vicharanti tanyava' ity api nigamo
 bhavati |*

"Rajas is derived from the root raj. Light is called rajas. Water is called rajas. The worlds are called rajāṁsi. Blood (?), and day and night are called rajasī. There is also a text (R. V. v. 63, 5), 'Brilliant and resounding [the Maruts] sweep over the worlds.'—See also Nir. x. 44, and xii. 23, and R. V. i. 90, 7.

In R. V. i. 164, 6, mention is made of six worlds (rajāṁsi): vi yas tastambha shaḥ imā rajāṁsi, "who established these six worlds."

The verb vimame cannot, I think, have the meaning, which the commentator assigns to it, of "constructing." It occurs, not only in verse 1, of the hymn before us, but in verse 3 also, where it must have the sense of "measuring," or "traversing," as it could not fitly be said of Vishṇu that he constructed the firmament with three steps. The phrase rajaso vimānaḥ, "measurer of the world," occurs in R. V. x. 121, 5 (above p. 14), and in R. V. x. 139, 5, quoted in the Third Part of this work, p. 158. In R. V. i. 50, 7, the participle mimānaḥ seems to have the same sense: vi dyām eshi rajas prithvī ahā mimāno aktubhiḥ | paśyan janmāni sūrya | "Sun, thou traversest the sky, measuring the broad space (rajas), and the days, with thy rays," beholding created things."

The phrase rajaso vimānaḥ occurs also in R. V. iii. 26, 7 (= Vāj. S. 18, 66), where Agni says of himself that he is arkas tridhātū rajaso vimānaḥ<sup>18</sup> | "the threefold light, the measurer of the world," which the commentator explains thus: tredhā ātmānam vibhajya tatra Vāy-ātmanā rajaso 'ntarixasya vimāno vimātū 'dhiṣṭhāta 'smi | "Triply dividing myself, I am, in the character of Vāyu, he who abides in the atmosphere."

Compare, with the phrase before us, Habakkuk iii. 6: "He stood and measured the earth," etc.

I shall adduce one other passage (R. V. v. 81, 3 = Vāj. S. 11, 6), in which the same phrase occurs, where this function of measuring the world is ascribed to Savitṛi (the sun): Yasya prayānam anv anye id yayur devā devāsya mahimānam ojasā | yaḥ pāṛthivāni vimame sa etaśo rajāmsi devaḥ Savitā mahitvanā | “He who measured out the terrestrial regions by his power, this god Savitṛi is a steed, whose course, and [whose display of] might, the other gods have followed with vigour.”

This text is quoted and commented on in the Śātapatha Brāhmaṇa, 6, 3, 1, 18 (p. 520). ‘Yasya prayānam anv anye id yayur’ iti | Prajāpatir vā etad agre karmākarot | tat tato devā akurran ‘devā devāsya mahimānam ojasā’ iti | yajño vai mahimā | devā devāsya yajñam vīryam ojasā ity etad | ‘yaḥ pāṛthivāni vimame sa etaśaḥ’ iti | yad vai kiñcha asyām tat pāṛthivām tad esha sarvaṁ vimimāte | rāsmibhir hy enad abhyavatanoti | ‘rajāmsi devaḥ Savitā mahitvanā’ iti | ime vai lokā rajāmsy asāv Ādityo devaḥ Savitā | tām esha mahimnā vimimāte | “‘Whose course the other gods have followed.’ Prajāpati formerly performed this rite. The gods afterwards did it, [according to the words] ‘the gods [followed] his [display of] power with vigour.’ Power means sacrifice. This, [then, is said, that] the gods [followed] the sacrifice, the energy, of the god with vigour. ‘He who measured out the terrestrial [regions] is a steed.’ Whatever is on this [earth] is terrestrial. All this he measures out: for he stretches over [all] this with his rays. ‘The god Savitṛi [measured out] the regions by his power.’ These worlds are the regions: that Āditya (sun) is the god Savitṛi. He measures them out by his power.”

The Bhāgavata Purāṇa introduces the words pāṛthivāni vimame rajāmsi, with a part of R. V. vii. 99, 2, at the close of its account of the Dwarf incarnation of Viṣṇu, assigning to them, however, a different meaning from that which they have in the hymn,—Bhāg. Pur. viii. 23, 29: Pāram mahimna uru-vikramato grīṇāno yaḥ pāṛthivāni vimame sa rajāmsi marttyaḥ | kiṁ jāyamāṇa uta jāta upaiti marttya ity āha mantradṛiḥ ṛishiḥ puruṣasya yasya | “The mortal who celebrates the utmost limits of this wide-striding (Viṣṇu’s) greatness, computes the [particles of the] dust of the earth. Can the mortal who is being born, or has been born, attain to it? Thus speaks the ṛishi who saw a hymn regarding Puruṣa.”

This verse is explained by the commentator thus: Uru bahu vikramato Viṣṇor mahimnaḥ pārām yo grīṇāno bhavāti sa marttyaḥ pāṛthivāni rajāmsy api vimame gaṇitavān | yathā pāṛthiva-paramāṇu-gaṇa-

nam āśakyaṃ tathā Viṣṇor guṇa-gaṇanam āśakyaṃ ity arthaḥ | tathā cha manthro 'Viṣṇor nu kaṃ vīryāṇi' iti | etad eva mantrāntarārthaṃ sūchayann āha yasya puruṣasya pūrṇa-mahimnaḥ pāram mantra-drig rishir Vasishṭha ity evam āha | katham | kiṃ jāyamāno jāto vā upaiti na ko'pi iti vadann anantatvena evāha ity arthaḥ | tathā cha manthro 'na te Viṣṇo jāyamāno na jāto deva mahimnaḥ param antam āpa' iti |

“The mortal who celebrates the utmost limits of the greatness of the wide-striding Viṣṇu, has computed also the particles of the dust of the earth. The meaning is, as the computation of the atoms of the earth is impossible, so also the enumeration of Viṣṇu's qualities is impossible. Thus a hymn (R. V. 1, 154) says: I declare the valorous deeds of Viṣṇu, etc. Alluding to the sense of another hymn, he says the same thing in these words: ‘regarding the utmost limit of the full greatness of which Puruṣa, Vasishṭha, the seer of a hymn, thus speaks:’ How? ‘Can any man being born, or already born, attain it?’ No, one. By this expression he intimates its infinitude. Thus the hymn says: No one who is being born, or has been born, has attained, o divine Viṣṇu, to the furthest limit of thy greatness.”

The sixth verse of the hymn before us is thus commented on in the Nirukta, ii. 6, 7: Sarve 'pi raśmayo gāva uchryante | . . . tūni vām vāstūni kāmayaṃmahe gamanāya yatra gāvo bhūri-śṛṅgāḥ . . . ayāso 'yanāḥ | tatra tad urugāyasya Viṣṇor mahāgateḥ paramam padam parārddhyastham avabhāti bhūri | “All rays are called gāvaḥ.” Then, after quoting the verse, the author proceeds to explain it: “We desire to attain to these regions of you two, where are the many-horned cows, . . the moving. There the highest abode, situated in the loftiest place, of that wide-stepping, large-pacing, Viṣṇu shines forth brightly.”

The verse is rendered thus, by Roth (Illustrations of Nir., p. 19): “May we arrive at your abodes, where the many-horned, moving, cattle are; for thence shines brilliantly down the highest place of the far-striding Showerer.” Roth then proceeds to remark: “This verse occurs in a hymn to Viṣṇu; consequently the dual vām (“of you two”), cannot refer to the deity of the hymn. Durga meets the difficulty, as the commentators frequently do with inconvenient duals, by saying vām iti dampātī abhipretya, etc. “vām refers to the sacrificer and his wife.” But here we have rather a proof of the fact that, in the arrangement of the Veda, many verses have been inserted in wrong places. The verse is addressed to Mitra and Varuṇa; and, perhaps, belonged to one of the hymns to those two gods which immediately precede this in the Sanhitā. The verse has been introduced into the wrong place because Viṣṇu is named in it. Compare verse 3. The inconvenient reading has been already altered in the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā (6, 3), which, instead of tā vām vāstūny uśmasi gamadhyai, "we desire to go to these abodes of you two," etc., reads, yā te dhāmāny uśmasi, etc., "to which realms of thine we desire," etc., etc.

In the next hymn Indra and Viṣṇu are jointly extolled :

V. i. 155.—Pra vaḥ pāntam<sup>19</sup> andhaso dhiyāyate mahe śūrāya Viṣṇave oḥa archata | yā sūnūni parvatānām adābhyā mahas tasthatu arvateva sādhanā | 2. Tresham itthā samaraṇam<sup>20</sup> śimvator Indrā-Viṣṇu suta-pā vām urushyati | yā marṭtyāya pratidhīyamānam i kṛiśānor astur asanām urushyathaḥ | 3. Tū im vardhanti mahi asya pauṇsyam ni mātaraṇā nayati retase bhuje | dadhāti putro avaram param pitur nāma tṛitīyam adhi rochane divaḥ | 4. Tat tad id asya pauṇsyaṁ grīṇmasi inasya trātur avrikasya mīlhusaḥ | yaḥ pāṛthivāni tribhīr id nigāmbhīr uru kramiṣṭhorugāyāya jīvase | 5. Dve id asya kramane svaṛḍṛiṣo abhikhyāya marṭtyo bhurānyati | tṛitīyam asya nakir ā dadharṣhati vayas chana putayanlah patatrinah | 6. Chaturbhīḥ sākām navatīṇcha nāmabhiḥ cakraṁ na vṛittam vyātīr avīripat | bṛihachekharīro vivimāna rikvabhir yuvā 'kumārah prati eti āhavam |

"Sing praises to the great hero (Indra), who desires the draught of your soma, and to Viṣṇu, who both stood, great and invincible, on the summit of the [aerial] mountains, as if [mounted] on an excellent steed. 2. Indra and Viṣṇu, the drinker of the libation escapes the assault, so fierce, of you two who are energetic,—who avert from the [pious] mortal that which is aimed at him,—the bolt of the archer Kṛiśānu. 3. These [libations] augment his (Viṣṇu's) virility; he conducts the parents (heaven and earth) to receive the fertilizing seed; the son has the inferior name; the superior belongs to the father; the third is above the light of heaven. 4. We celebrate this virility of him, the strong, the deliverer, the uninjuring, the fecundator, who with three steps traversed<sup>21</sup> far and wide the mundane regions, for the sake

<sup>24</sup> Compare the words yujyo vā sakhā vā in R. V. ii. 28, 10, where yujya is explained by Sāyaṇa as=yojana-samarthaḥ pītṛādīr vā; and R. V. i. 22, 19, where the same word yujya is said to be equivalent to amukūla, "friendly." Compare also ayuja in R. V. viii. 51, 2.

Vishnu possesses excellent wisdom, which knows the proper day;<sup>25</sup> and with his friend, opens up the cloud. 5. Par. ii. 21).—Sapta ardha-garbhā bhuvanasya reto Viṣṇos tiṣṭhanti pradiśā vidharmanī | te dhītibhir manasā te vipaśchitāḥ paribhuvāḥ pari bhavanti viśvataḥ | "Seven half-children (?), the prolific sources of the world, abide by the command of Vishnu in the function of supporting [the universe]. They by thought, and by mind, they intelligent, circling, revolve in every direction."

I do not attempt any explanation of this obscure and mystical utterance. Compare, however, R. V. ix. 86, 29, which will be quoted below, and in which the same words pradiś and vidharman occur.

R. V. i. 186, 10.—Pro Aśvināv avase kṛinudhcam pra Pūṣhānāṃ svatavaso hi santi | advesho Viṣṇur Vātāḥ Rībhuxāḥ aelhā sumnāya varṛitiya devān | "Dispose the Aśvins, dispose Pūshan, to succour us, for they have power in themselves. Vishnu is free from malice, and so is Vāta (Vāyu) and Rībhuxan. May I incline the gods to be favourable to us."

R. V. ii. 1, 3.—Team Agne Indro ṛṣishabhāḥ satām asi tvaṃ Viṣṇur urugāyo namasyaḥ | team brahmā rayivid brahmanāspate traṃ vidharttaḥ sachase purandhyā | "Thou, Agni, art Indra, bountiful to the excellent; thou art Vishnu, the wide-stepping, the adorable; thou, Brahmanāspati, art a priest, acquainted with wealth; thou, sustainer, art associated with Purandhi (Devotion).

<sup>27</sup> Or, "united," according to Prof. Roth.

<sup>28</sup> Compare R. V. i. 22, 18. The word Vishṇu is here regarded by the commentator as an epithet of Agni, and rendered by "pervading." *

Sarave bṛihatyaī | “Why, Agni, [shouldst thou declare our sin] to the great supplier of nourishment, Pūshan? why to Rudra, the adored, the giver of oblations? why shouldst thou declare our sin to the wide-stepping Viṣṇu? why to the great Saru (Nirṛiti?).”

R. V. iv. 18, 11.—Uta mātā mahisham anvarenad amī tvā jahati putra devāḥ | Atha abravīd Vṛittram Indro hanishyan sakhe Viṣṇo vitaraṁ vikramasva | “And his mother asked the mighty [Indra], ‘My son, do those gods forsake thee?’ Then Indra, being about to slay Vṛittra, said, ‘Friend Viṣṇu, do thou stride vastly.’”

The last words of this verse form the commencement of the 12th verse of the 89th hymn of the 8th Maṇḍala, which I shall introduce here.

R. V. viii. 89, 12.—Sakhe Viṣṇo vitaraṁ vikramasva dyaur dehi lokam vajrāya vishkabhe | hanāva Vṛittraṁ riṇachāva sindhūn Indrasya yantu prasave viṣṛiṣṭāḥ | “‘Friend Viṣṇu, stride vastly;’ sky, give room for the thunderbolt to strike; let us slay Vṛittra, and let loose the waters; let them, when released, flow in the path [opened out by?] Indra.”

R. V. iv. 55, 4.—Vi Aryamā Varuṇas cheti panthām ishas-patiḥ su-vitām gātum Agniḥ | Indrā-Viṣṇū nṛi-vad u shu stavānā śarma no yantam amavad varūtham | “Aryaman and Varuṇa point out our path; so too Agni, the lord of strength, [shews us] a prosperous road. Indra and Viṣṇu, when they are lauded, according to human ability, bestow on us prosperity and strong protection.”

R. V. v. 3, 1–3.—Tvam Agne Varuṇo jāyase yat tvam Mitro bhavasi yat samiddhaḥ | tre viśve sahasas-putra devās tvam Indro dāsushe martyāya | 2. Tvam Aryamā bhavasi yat kanīṇam nāma svadhāvan guhyam bibharshi | añjanti mitraṁ sudhitaṁ na gobhir yad dampatī samanasaḥ kṛiṇoshi | 3. Tava śriye Maruto marjayanta<sup>31</sup> Rudra yat te janima chāru chitram | padaṁ yad Viṣṇor upamaṁ nidhāyi tena pāsi guhyaṁ nāma gonām |

May both the Aśvins, Rudra, and the wives of the deities, with Pūshan, Bhaga, and Sarasvatī, be pleased with us. 3. I invoke, for our protection, Indra and Agni, Mitra and Varuṇa, Aditi, heaven, earth, sky, the Maruts, the mountains, the waters, Viṣṇu, Pūshan, Brahmanaspati, Bhaga, Saṁsa, and Savitṛi. 4. And may Viṣṇu, and the Wind, uninjuring, and Soma, the bestower of riches, give us happiness. And may the Ribhus, Aśvins, Tvasṭṛi, and Vibhvan be favourable to us, so as to [grant us] wealth."

Maruts, come without malice to our song, hear the invocation of your worshipper, Evayāmarut; of the same mind with the great Vishṇu, like men riding in chariots, drive our enemies away far from us by your might."

The difficult hymn from which these verses are taken is quoted and translated in Prof. Benfey's Glossary to the Sāma-veda, p. 39 f.

R. V. vi. 17, 11.—*Vardhān yañ viśve Marutah sajoshāh pachat satam mahishān Indra tubhyañ | Pūshā Vishnus trīṇi sarāṃsi dhāvan vṛittra-

<sup>36</sup> The word śrīpra occurs also in R. V. i. 96, 3; i. 181, 3; iii. 18, 5; iv. 50, 2; viii. 25, 5; and viii. 32, 10 = S. V. i. 217. By Yaska, Nir. vi. 17., it is derived from the root śrīp, "to go" (see Roth's Illust., p. 83); and is rendered by Sāyana surpana-sīla, "going," prasrita, "extended," etc. (see also Benfey's Glossary to the S. V.)

<sup>37</sup> Such is the sense assigned to ādiṣe by Sāyana: in Wilson's Sanskrit Dictionary I find the word pradeśana rendered "a gift or offering; anything given to the gods, superiors, or friends," etc.

R. V. vii. 40, 5. — Asya devasya mīlhuso rayāḥ Vishnor eshasya “

iti ime lokā ime vedā atho vāg iti brūyāt | airayethām airayethām [ity uchhāvāka ukthye 'bhyasyati]” | Ait. Br. 6, 15. | “In reference to whatever thing ye two strove, i.e. strove with the Asuras, over that, in its three characters, i.e. as existing in its character of world, Veda, and speech, and in number a thousand, i.e. immeasurable, ye strode. Thus a Brāhmaṇa [the Aitareya, 6, 15,] says: ye both conquered; this is what the Achhāvāka priest [repeats]: for ye both conquered, ye are not vanquished, neither was vanquished, for neither of these two was vanquished: [the last line of the verse before us is then cited]. Indra and Vishṇu fought with the Asuras. Having conquered them, they said, ‘let us divide [the world].’ The Asuras said, ‘be it so.’ Indra said, ‘As much as this Vishṇu strides over in three strides, so much is ours; the rest is yours.’ He strode over these worlds, then the Vedas, then speech. When people say, ‘what is that thousand?’ let him say, ‘These worlds, these Vedas, then speech.’ The Achhāvāka priest repeats at the Ukthiya ritual ‘ye scattered, ye scattered.’”

<sup>43</sup> The word bhavitra is explained by Sayana as = bhuvanam antariṣam udakaṁ vā. “The world, or the atmosphere, or water.” The word, Dr. Aufrecht informs me, does not occur again in the Vedas.

<sup>44</sup> Sayana interprets the first words of the verse before us thus, Vishnoḥ sarva-devātmakasya asya devasya anye devā rayāḥ sākṣā iva bhavanti | “Other gods are, as it were, branches of this god, who is the soul of all the gods.” He explains eshasya as follows: Prabhrīthe havirbhir havī-rūpair annaiḥ eshasya prōpranījasya. “One who, in the sacrifice, can be reached by oblations of food.” The same epithet esha is applied to Vishṇu in the other two following passages referred to in Boelt. and Roth’s Lexicon under this word. R. V. ii. 34, 11. — Tān vo mahā Maruta evayāvno Vishnor eshasya prabhrīthe havāmāhe | ityādi | “In the sacrifice of the rapid Vishṇu we invoke you the great, and impetuous Maruts,” etc. R. V. viii. 20. 3. — Vidmā hi

prabhrithe havirbhiḥ | vide hi Rudro rudriyam mahitvā yāsishṭam varttir Aśvināv irāvat | “[The other gods are?] branches of this bountiful and rapid (?) deity Vishṇu [who is to be worshipped?] with oblations in the sacrifice. For Rudra possesses impetuous power. Come, Aśvins, to our place of sacrifice which is provided with food.”

R. V. vii. 44, 1.—Dadhikrām vaḥ prathamam Aśvinā Ushasam Agniṁ samiddham Bhagam ūtaye huve | Indraṁ Vishṇum Pūṣaṇam Brahmanaspatiṁ Adityān dyāvā-prithivī apah svah | “I invoke for your succour first Dadhikrā, the Aśvins, Ushas, the kindled Agni, Bhaga, Indra, Vishṇu, Pūshan, Brahmanaspati, the Adityas, heaven and earth, the waters, the sky.”

R. V. vii. 93, 8.—Etā Agne āsushānāsa ishtir yuvoh sachā abhiśyāma vājān | mā Indro no Vishṇur Marutaḥ parikhyan ityādi | “Breathing forth these petitions, may we, Agni [and Indra], with [the help of] you twain obtain food. Let not Indra, Vishṇu, and the Maruts despise us,” etc.

R. V. vii. 99, 1.—Paro mātrayā<sup>45</sup> tanvā vṛidhāna na te mahitvam anu aśnuvanti | ubhe te vidma rajasī prithivyaḥ Viṣṇo deva tvam paramasya vitse | 2. Na te Viṣṇo jāyamāno na jāto deva mahimnaḥ param antam āpa | ud astabhnāḥ nākam ṛishraṁ bṛihantaṁ dādhartha prāchīm kakubham prithivyaḥ | 3 (=Vāj. (S. V. 2, 977.) Vashaṭ te Viṣṇo āsaḥ ā kṛṇomi tad me jushasva śipivishṭa havyam | vardhantu tvā sushtutayo giro me yūyam pāta svastibhiḥ sadā naḥ |

Rudriyānām sushmam ugram Marutām śinīvatām | Viṣṇor eśhasya mīthushām | “For we know the fiery vigour of the sons of Rudra, the destructive Maruts; who dispense [the gifts] of the rapid Vishṇu.” Dr. Aufrecht considers the interpretation of eśha very doubtful, and does not see why all three passages should not be referred to Rudra rather than Vishṇu. As, however, they contain the word Viṣṇu, I have retained them.

“Thou who, with thy body, growest beyond our measure, [men] do not attain to thy greatness: we know both thy two regions of the earth; thou, divine Vishṇu, knowest the remotest [world]. 2. No one, o divine Vishṇu, who is being born, or who has been born, knows the furthest limit of thy greatness. Thou didst prop up the lofty and vast sky; thou didst uphold the eastern pinnacle of the earth.<sup>47</sup> 3. [Ye two worlds] be ye abundant in food, cows, and pastures, through beneficence to man. Vishṇu, thou didst prop asunder these two worlds; thou didst envelop the earth on every side with beams of light. 4. Ye (Indra and Vishṇu) have provided ample room for the sacrifice, producing the sun, the dawn, and fire. Ye, o heroes, destroyed in the battles the illusions of the hostile (dāsa) Vṛishaśipra. 4. Indra and Vishṇu, ye smote the ninety-nine strong cities of Sambara; together, ye slew, unopposed, a thousand and a hundred heroes of the Asura Varchin. 6. This great hymn magnifies you two, the great, the wide-striding, the powerful; Vishṇu, and Indra, I present to you twain a hymn at the sacrifices. Increase my vigour, should [I fall] into calamity. 7. Vishṇu, I utter to thee this invocation from my mouth. Śipivishṭa, receive this my oblation. May my laudatory hymns magnify thee: do you always preserve us with blessings.”

Vishṇu, the wide-stepping, who worships him with his whole heart, and propitiates such a powerful [god]. 2. Vouchsafe to us, swiftly-moving Vishṇu, thy benevolence, which embraces all mankind, thy unpreoccupied regard; that thou mayest grant us abundant good, and brilliant wealth, with horses. 3. Thrice this god by his greatness has traversed this earth with its hundred lights. May Vishṇu be the strongest of the strong: for awful is the name (power?) of that immoveable [being]. 4. This Vishṇu traversed the earth to bestow it for a habitation on Manu [or man]. The men who praise him are secure: [the god] of exalted birth has given them an ample abode. 5. I, a master, who know the sacred rites, to-day celebrate this thy name, S'ipivishṭa; I, who am weak, laud thee who art strong, and afar off, reignest over this lower world. 6. What, Vishṇu, hadst thou to conceal, that thou declarest, 'I am S'ipivishṭa?' Do not conceal from us this form, since thou didst assume another shape in the battle."<sup>49</sup>

When, thunderer, thou didst by thy might slay Vṛittra, who stopped up the streams, then thy dear steeds grew. 27. When by thy force Vishṇu strode three steps, then thy dear steeds grew.”

S’āntiparva, vv. 13229, ff, Kṛishṇa is introduced as explaining the sense of the word S’ipivishṭa thus; (If the writer intended to represent Yāska as the rishi by whom the word was first applied to Vishṇu, he could not have been a particularly good Vedic scholar) : S’ipivishṭeti chākhyāyāṃ hīna-romā cha yo bhavet | tenūvishṭaṃ tu yat kinchich Chhipi-vishṭeti cha smṛitaḥ | Yāsko nūm rishir anyagro naika-yajñeshu gītavān | S’ipivishṭa iti hy asmād guhya-nūma-dhara hy aham | stutvā mūm S’ipivishṭeti Yāskaḥ sarshir udāra-dhīḥ | mat-prasādād adho nashṭam Niruktaṃ abhijagmivān | “A bald man is designated by the word S’ipivishṭa. Anything which is penetrated by that (what?) is called S’ipivishṭa. Yāska, the serene rishi, celebrated me at many sacrifices. In consequence of this I bear the mysterious name of S’ipivishṭa. Yāska, that rishi of large understanding, having lauded me as S’ipivishṭa, recovered by my favour the Nirukta, which had been destroyed.”

*tvām śardho madati anu mārutam | 10. Traṁ vṛishā janānām māñ-

We desire that excellent treasure, worthy to be guarded, which Mittra, Varuṇa, and Aryaman possess. 14. And may the ocean of waters, may the Maruts, may the Aśvins, Indra, and Vishṇu, the beneficent, associated together, [bestow] that."

The following hymn, in the seventh verse of which Vishṇu is mentioned, is interesting from the manner in which the various characteristics of the different gods are succinctly described :

R. V. viii. 29, 1 ff.—Babhrur eko rishuṇaḥ sūnaro yuvā añji aṅkte hiraṇyayaṁ | 2. Yonim eka ā sasādu dyotano antar deveshu medhiraḥ |

by "high abode, i.e., heaven, or those who dwell in the high abode, the gods." He also conjectures that the correct reading in this passage may be bṛihat-zayaḥ, "who dwells on high."

<sup>61</sup> Dr. Aufrecht tells me that the word nāram is so accented that it cannot mean "ship." He regards it as a masc. noun from the root nu, "to praise;" and assigns to it the sense of "bard," or "hymn." That there is such a word as nāva is proved by its occurrence in R. V. ix. 45, 6 : Induṁ nāvāḥ anūshata | where it must mean "the bards, or hymns, celebrated Indu."

3. Vāsim eko bibhartti haste āyasīm antar deveshu nidhruviḥ | 4. Vajram eko bibhartti haste āhitaṁ tena vrittrāṇi jighnate | 5. Tigmam eko bibhartti haste āyudhaṁ śuchir ugro jalāsha-bheshajaḥ | 6. Patha ekaḥ pīpāya taskaro yathā esha veda nidhīnām | 7. Trīṇi eka urugāyo vi chakrame yatra devāso madanti | 8. Vibhir dvā charataḥ ekayā saha pra pravāsā iva vasataḥ | 9. Sado dvā chakrāte upamā divi saṁrājā sarpir-āsuti | 10. Archanta eke mahi sāma manvatu tena sūryam arochayan |

<sup>62</sup> Soma, as the moon, according to the commentator. M. Langlois thinks the sun is meant. Dr. Aufrecht thinks the troop of Maruts, Marud-gana, may be meant, to whom, he remarks, the epithet babhrū, “dark-brown, tawny,” is as applicable as it is to their master, Rudra, to whom it is frequently given.

This verse is considered by Dr. Aufrecht to contain an allusion to some myth (also referred to in R. V. i. 61, 7), in which Vishṇu appears to have been represented as carrying off cattle, a hog and other provisions for the use of Indra. Compare Professor Wilson's note (d) on R. V. i. 61, 7. The same story may be alluded to in R. V. vi. 17, 11, above, p. 70.

This verse is quoted, and thus explained in the Nirukta-pariśiṣṭa, ii. 12: Somaḥ pavate | somaḥ sūryaḥ prasavanāt | janitā matinām prakāśa-karmanām āditya-raśmīnām divo dyotana-karmanām āditya-raśmīnām prithivyā prathana-karmanām āditya-raśmīnām Agner gati-karmanām āditya-raśmīnām Sūryasya svīkaraṇa-karmanām āditya-raśmīnām Indrasya aiśvaryya-karmanām āditya-raśmīnām Vishnor vyūpti-karmanām āditya-raśmīnām ity adhidaivatam | atha adhyātmanam | soma ātmā 'py etasmād evendriyānām janitā ity arthaḥ | api vā sarvābhir vibhūtibhir vibhūtata (?) ātmā ity ātma-gatim āchashṭe | "Soma purifies. Soma is sūrya (the sun), from generating (prasavanāt). He is the generator of hymns (or thoughts), i.e. of those solar rays whose function it is to reveal; of the sky, i.e. of those solar rays whose function it is to shine; of the earth, i.e. of those solar rays whose function it is to spread; of Agni, i.e. of those solar rays whose function it is to move; of Sūrya, i.e. of those solar rays whose function it is to appropriate (svīkaraṇa); of Indra, i.e. of those solar rays whose function is sovereignty; of Vishnu, i.e. of those solar rays whose function is diffusion: such is the mythological explanation. Now follows the spiritual interpretation, i.e. that which refers to soul. Soma is also the soul; and for this cause he is the generator of the senses: such is the meaning. Or, he thus declares the course of the soul, that it is variously modified by all its changing manifestations."

The preceding passages are all, or nearly all, which the Rig-veda contains regarding Vishṇu. In my remarks on R. V. i. 22, 16 ff. (above p. 55 ff.), I have quoted the opinions of two of the most ancient interpreters of the Veda, Śākapāṇi and Aurnavābha, on the character of Vishṇu. The former regards him as a god who, in his three strides, is manifested in a threefold form, as Agni on earth, as Indra or Vāyu in the atmosphere, and as the Sun in heaven. The second writer, Aurnavābha, on the other hand, interprets Vishṇu's three strides as the rising, the culmination, and the setting of the sun. These three strides are also noticed, as we have seen above, in R. V. i. 154, 1, 2, 3, 4; i. 155, 4, 5; vi. 49, 13; vii. 100, 3, 4; viii. 29, 7; while in other places (R. V. ii. 1, 3; iii. 54, 14; iv. 3, 7; iv. 18, 11; viii. 89, 12; v. 3, 3; v. 87, 4; viii. 9, 12; viii. 66, 10; x. 1, 3) the epithet "wide-stepping," or "wide-striding," is either applied to this deity, or, at least, some allusion is made to this function, or to this god's station in the heavens. In R. V. vi. 69, 5, and vii. 99, 6, Indra is associated with Vishṇu as taking vast strides. Some other acts of even a higher character are attributed to Vishṇu. In R. V. i. 154, 1, 2; vii. 99, 2, 3, he is said to have established the heavens and the earth, to contain all the worlds in his strides; in R. V. vi. 69, 5, and vii. 99, 4, to have, with Indra, made the atmosphere wide, stretched out the worlds, produced the sun and the dawn; in R. V. i. 156, 4, to have received the homage of Varuṇa; and in R. V. vii. 99, 2, to be beyond mortal comprehension. The attributes ascribed to Vishṇu in some of these passages are such that, if these hymns stood alone in the Rig-veda, they might lead us to suppose that this deity was regarded by the Vedic Rishis as the chief of all the gods. But, as we have already seen, Indra is associated with Vishṇu even in some of those texts in which the latter is most highly magnified (as R. V. i. 155, 1 ff.; vi. 69, 1 ff.; vii. 99, 4 ff.; viii. 15, 10); nay, in one place (R. V. viii. 12, 27), the power by which Vishṇu takes his three strides is described as being derived from Indra; in two other texts (R. V. viii. 15, 9, and x. 113, 2) Vishṇu is represented as celebrating Indra's praises; while, in R. V. ix. 96, 5, Vishṇu is said to have been generated by Soma.

It is also a fact, notorious to all the students of the Rig-veda, that the hymns and verses which are dedicated to the praises of Indra, Agni, Mitra, Varuṇa, the Maruts, the Aśvins, etc., are extremely numerous; whilst the entire hymns and separate verses in which Viṣṇu is celebrated are much fewer, and have all, or nearly all, been adduced in the preceding pages.

The reader will also have noticed that, in a large number of shorter passages which I have cited, Viṣṇu is introduced as the subject of laudation among a great crowd of other divinities, from whom he is there in no way distinguished as being in any respect superior. From this fact, we may conclude that he was regarded by those writers as on a footing of equality with the other deities.

Further, the Rig-veda contains numerous texts in which the Rishis ascribe to Indra, Varuṇa, and other gods, the same high and awful attributes and functions which are spoken of in the hymns before cited as belonging to Viṣṇu. I shall quote a sufficient number of these texts to shew that, in the Rig-veda, Viṣṇu does not hold a higher rank than several of these other divinities. If, on the other hand, we look to the large number of texts, in which, as I have just stated, some of the other gods are celebrated, and to the comparatively small number of those in which Viṣṇu is exclusively or prominently magnified, we shall come to the conclusion that the latter deity occupied a somewhat subordinate place in the estimation and affections of the ancient rishis.

I shall first adduce a number of passages in which divine attributes and functions of the highest character are ascribed to Indra.

R. V. i. 7, 3—Indro dīrghāya charase ā sūryam rohayad divi ityādi | “Indra has raised up the sun in the sky to be seen from afar,” etc.

R. V. i. 52, 8.— . . . . ayachyathāh bāhvor vajram āyasam adhārayo divi ā sūryam dṛiṣe | . . . . 12. Tram asya pāre rajaso vyomanah svabhūty-ōjāh avase dhṛishan-manah | chakṛiṣhe bhūmim pratimānam ojaso 'paḥ svah paribhūr eshi ā divam | 13. Tram bhuvah pratimānam prithivyā rishva-vīrasya brihataḥ patir bhūh | viśvam āprā antariṣam mahitvā satyam addhā nakir anyas tvārān | 14. Na yasya dyāvā-prithivī anu vyacho na sindhavo rajaso antam ānāsuh | nota sva-viśvīm made asya yudhyata eko anyach chakṛiṣhe viśvam ānushak |

“Thou hast grasped in thine arms the iron thunderbolt; thou hast placed the sun in the sky to be viewed . . . 12. [Dwelling] on the further side of this atmospheric world, deriving thy power from thyself, daring in spirit, thou, for our advantage, hast made the earth, the counterpart<sup>64</sup> of [thy] energy; encompassing the waters and the sky, thou reachest up to heaven. 13. Thou art the counterpart of the earth, the lord of the lofty sky, with its exalted heroes. Thou hast filled<sup>65</sup> the whole atmosphere with thy greatness. Truly there is none other like unto thee.<sup>66</sup> 14. Whose vastness neither heaven and earth have equalled, nor the rivers of the atmosphere have attained its limit,—not when, in his exhilaration, he fought against the appropriator of the rain; thou alone hast made everything else in due succession.”

R. V. i. 55, 1.—Divas chid asya varimā vi papratho Indraṁ na mahnā prithivī chana prati | “His vastness is extended even beyond the sky: the earth is not comparable to Indra in greatness.”

R. V. i. 61, 9.—Asya id eva praririche mahitvaṁ divas prithivyāḥ pari antarixāt ityādi | “His greatness transcends the sky, the earth, and surpasses the atmosphere,” etc.

R. V. i. 81, 5.—Ā paprau pūrthivaṁ rajo badbadhe rochanā divi | na tvāvān Indra kaśchana na jāto na janishyate ati viśvaṁ vavaxitha | “He has filled the terrestrial region: he has fastened the luminaries in the sky. No one like thee, Indra, hath been born, or shall be born: thou hast transcended the universe.”

R. V. i. 102, 8.—Trivishti-dhātu pratimānam ojasas tisro bhūmīr nripate trīṇi rochanā | ati idaṁ viścam bhuvanaṁ vavaxitha aśatrur Indra janushā sanād asi | “The three worlds, o king, the three luminaries are a triple counterpart of [thy] energy. Thou hast transcended this whole universe. By nature, Indra, thou art of old without an enemy.”<sup>67</sup>

R. V. i. 103, 2.—Sa dhārayat prithivīm paprathachcha vajreṇa hatvā nīr apah sasarjja | ahann Ahiṁ ityādi | “He established the earth and stretched it out; smiting with the thunderbolt, he let loose the waters. He slew Ahi,” etc.

R. V. viii. 51, 2.—Ayujō asamo nribhir ekah kṛishtir ayāsyah | pūrvīr ati pravāṛidhe viśvā jātāny ojasā ityādi | “Without a fellow, unequalled by men, [Indra] alone, unconquered, has surpassed in power former generations,<sup>79</sup> and all creatures.”

R. V. viii. 59, 5 (=S. V. i. 278).—Yad dyāvu Indra te śataṁ śatam bhūmīr uta syuh | nā tvā vajrīn sahasraṁ sūryāh anu na jātam aṣṭa rodasī | “If, Indra, a hundred skies, and a hundred earths were thine, a thousand suns could not equal thee, thunderer, nor could the two worlds attain to thee, when thou hadst been born.”

This verse is quoted and briefly commented on in the Nirukta Parisiṣhta i. 1, ff: Athemā atistutaya ity ācharate 'pi vā sampratya eva syād mahābhāgyād devatāyāḥ | . . . Yadi te Indra śataṁ divaḥ śatam bhūmayāḥ pratimānāni syur na tvā vajrīn sahasram api sūryā na dyāvā-prithivyāv apy abhyaśnurvītām iti | “Now these [which follow] are what are called exaggerated praises; or they may be expressions of perfect faith owing to the grandeur of the Deity.” Then, after citing passages referring to Agni and Varuṇa, the writer quotes the verse before us, and thus paraphrases it: “If, Indra, a hundred skies, a hundred earths be the counterparts [with which thou art compared], not even a thousand suns, o thunderer, nor heaven and earth can equal thee.”

R. V. viii. 67, 5.—Nakīm Indro nikarttave na Sakrah pariśaktave viśvaṁ śṛṇoti paśyati | “Indra is not to be overcome, Śakra is not to be overpowered. He hears and sees all things.”<sup>80</sup>

R. V. viii. 77, 4.—Yoddhā 'si kratvā śavasota dāṁsanā viśvā jātā abhi majmanā | ā tvā ayam arka ūtaye vavarttati yaṁ Gotamā ajījanan | 5. (S. V. 1, 312.) Pra hi ririce ojasā dico antebhyas<sup>81</sup> pari | na tvā viśvācha raja Indra pāṛthivam anu svadhām vacaxitha |

“A warrior, thou surpassest all creatures in power, in vigour, in exploits, in strength. This hymn, which the Gotamas have generated, incites thee to succour us. 5. For by thy might thou hast overpassed

R. V. viii. 78, 5 (=S. V. ii. 779 f.)—Yaj jāyathā apūrvaṃ Maghavan Vṛittrā-hatyāya | tat prithivīm aprathayas tad astabhnā uta dyām | 6. Tat te yajño ajāyata tad arka uta haskritih | tad visvam abhibhūr asi yaj jātaṃ yachcha jantram | <sup>83</sup>

"When thou, o unrivalled Maghavan (Indra), wast born for the destruction of Vṛittra, then thou didst spread out the earth, and then thou didst establish the sky. Then was thy sacrifice produced; then thy hymn and thy song of praise. Then thou didst transcend all things that have been born, and shall be born."

R. V. viii. 82, 11.—Yasya te nū chid ādiṣaṃ na minanti svarājyaṃ na devo na adhrigur janah | "Whose command, and empire, no one,—whether god, or audacious mortal,—can resist."

R. V. viii. 86, 9.—Na tvā devāsa āsata na martyāso adrivaḥ | visvā jātāṃ śavasā abhibhūr asi ityādi | 10. (S. V. i. 370): Viśvāḥ pritanā abhibhūtaram naraṃ<sup>84</sup> sajūs tataxur Indraṃ jajanus cha rājase | kratvā varishtaṃ vare<sup>85</sup> āmurim utogram ojishthaṃ tavasam<sup>86</sup> tarasvinam |

"Thee, o hurler of rocks, neither gods nor mortals have overcome. Thou transcendest in power all creatures, etc. 10. They, united, have formed and generated for dominion the heroic Indra, the vanquisher of all armies, eminent in power to bless (?), destroyer, fierce, strong, vigorous, and swift."

R. V. viii. 87, 2.—Tvam Indra abhibhūr asi traṃ sūryam arochayaḥ | viśvakarmā viśvadevo mahān asi | "Thou, Indra, art the most powerful; thou hast kindled the sun; thou art great, the architect of all things, and the lord of all."

R. V. x. 43, 5 (=A. V. 20, 17, 5; Nir. 5, 22).—Kṛitaṃ na śvaghñī vicinoti devane saṃvargaṃ yad Maghavā sūryaṃ jayat | na tat te anyo anu vīryaṃ śakad na purāṇo Maghavan na uta nūtanah | "When Maghavan

V. x. 48, 3.—Mahyañ Trashtā vajram ataxad āyasam mayi devāso avrijann api kratum | mama anikañ sūryasya iva dustaram mām āryanti kṛitena kartvena cha | "Tvastri fashioned for me (Indra) an iron thunderbolt; into me the gods have infused force. My splendour is unsurpassed, like that of the sun. Men praise me for what I have done and shall do."

R. V. x. 86, 1 (=A. V. xx. 126, 1).— . . . viśvasmād Indrah uttarah | (Repeated at the close of every verse of this hymn.) "Indra is superior to every other."

R. V. x. 111, 1.—Manishinaḥ pra bharadhvam manishām yathā yathā matayaḥ santi nṛinām | Indram satyair erayāmā kṛitebhiḥ sa hi viro girvanasyur vidānaḥ | 2. Ṛitasya hi sadaso dhītir adyaut sañ gāreṣṭeyo vṛishabho gobhir ānaḥ | ud atishṭhat tavishṇa ravena mahānti chid sañvivyāchā rajāñsi | 3. Indrah kila śrutyai asya veda sa hi jishnuḥ pathikṛit sūryāya | ād menām kṛinann achyuto bhuvad goḥ patir divaḥ sanajā apratitaḥ | 4. Indro mahnā mahato arnavasya vratā aminād Angirobhir grīṇanaḥ | purāni chid ni tatāna rajāñsi dādḥāra yo dharunañ satyatātā | 5. Indro divaḥ pratimānam prithivyā viśvā veda savanā hanti Sushnam | mahīm chid dyām ā atanot sūryeṇa chāskambha chit skambhanena skabhīyañ |

"Sages, present the prayer, according as are the various thoughts of men. Let us by our sincere rites bring hither Indra, for he is a hero, he loves our hymns, and he is wise. 2. The intelligent [god] has shone forth from the abode of sacrifice. The bull, offspring of a heifer, has approached the cows; he has arisen with a loud bellowing; he has pervaded the vast regions. 3. Indra surely knows the fame of this. For he, victorious, immoveable, forming a path for the sun, and creating the female of a bull (?), became, in consequence, the eternal and matchless lord of the sky (compare R. V. i. 51, 13; i. 121, 2). 4. Celebrated by the Angirases, Indra has destroyed the labours of the great streaming [cloud-demon];<sup>89</sup> he has stretched out many worlds, he who has laid a foundation by truth. 5. Indra, [who is] the counterpart of the heaven and of the earth, knows all sacrifices, slays Śushṇa; with the sun, he has extended the vast sky, and, [being] a strong supporter, he has supported it with a support."<sup>90</sup>

R. V. x. 133, 2 (=S. V. ii. 1151).—Tvaṁ sindhūn avāsrijāḥ adharācho ahaṇn Ahim | aśatrur Indra jajñishe viśvam pushyasi vāryam ityādi | "Thou hast let loose the streams to flow downwards; thou hast slain Ahi. Indra, thou hast been born without a foe; thou possessest all that is desirable," etc.

R. V. x. 134, 1 (=S. V. i. 379).—Ubhe yad Indra rodasī āpaprātha ushā,iva | mahāntaṁ tvā mahinām samrājāṁ charshanīnām | devī janitṛi ajījanad bhadra janitṛi ajījanat<sup>91</sup> | "When thou, Indra, like the dawn, didst fill both the worlds, a divine mother bore thee, the mighty monarch of mighty creatures,—a gracious mother bore thee."

How great soever the attributes assigned to Indra may be, we see that here he is not regarded as a self-existent being, but as the son of a mother.

The two following texts refer to Indra in conjunction with another god:

R. V. vi. 72, 2.—Indrā-Somā vāsasyatha ushāsam ut sūryaṁ nayatho jyotiṣhā saha | upa dyāṁ skambhathuḥ skambhanena aprathamam prithivīm mātaraṁ vi | "Indra and Soma, ye cause the dawn to appear, ye make the sun to rise with the light. Ye have propped up the sky with a support,<sup>92</sup> ye have spread out the earth, the mother."

R. V. vii. 82, 5.—Indrā-Varuṇā yad imāni chakrathur viśvā jātāni bhuvanasya majmanā ityādi | "Indra and Varuṇa, since ye have made all these creatures of the world by your power," etc.

The passages next following celebrate the divine attributes of Varuṇa :

R. V. i. 24, 8.—Uruṁ hi rājā Varuṇas̄ chakāra sūryāya panthām anu-etavai u ityādi | “King Varuṇa hath made a broad path for the sun to follow,” etc.

R. V. ii. 27, 10.—Tvaṁ viśveshāṁ Varuṇas̄i rājā ye cha devā asura ye cha marttāḥ | “Thou, divine Varuṇa, art king of all, both of those who are gods, and of those who are men.”—Quoted in Müller's Anc. Sansk. Lit., p. 534.

R. V. vi. 70, 1.—Ghṛitavalī bhuvanānām abhis̄riyā ūrvī pṛithvī madhu-dughe supesāsā | dyāvū-pṛithivī Varuṇasya dharmaṇā vishkabhite ajare bhūri-retasā | “Full of fatness, the common abodes of creatures, wide, broad, dropping sweetness, beautiful in form, heaven and earth are held asunder by the support of Varuṇa, undecaying, abundant in fertility.”

R. V. vii. 86, 1.—Dhīrā tu asya mahinā janūṁshi vi yas tastambha rodasī chid ūrvī | pra nākam rishraṁ nunude bṛihantāṁ devitā nazatram paprathach cha bhūma | “Wise are his creations who by his power propped asunder the two vast worlds. He raised up the high and wide firmament, and spread out apart the stars and the earth.”—This hymn is translated in Müller's Sansk. Lit., pp. 540 f.

R. V. vii. 87, 1.—Radat patho Varuṇas̄ sūryāya pra arṇāṁsi samudriyā nadinām | sargo na s̄rishto arvatir̄ rītāyan chakāra mahir̄ avanir̄ ahabhyah̄ | 2. Ātmā te vāto rāja ā navīnot̄ paśur̄ na bhūrnir̄ yavase savān̄ | antar mahī bṛihatī rodasīme viśvā te dhūma Varuṇa priyāni |

“Varuṇa has opened out paths for the sun, and the aerial courses of the rivers. Like a troop of horses let loose, following the mares, he has made great channels for the days. 2. The wind is thy breath, which has agitated the atmosphere, like an impetuous beast grazing in a pasture. Within [thee?] are these two great and vast worlds; all thy realms, o Varuṇa, are beloved [or, unlimited].”<sup>23</sup>

R. V. viii. 42, 1.—Astabhnād̄ dyām Asuro viścavedā amimita vari-mānam̄ pṛithivyāḥ | āsīdad̄ viśvā bhuvanāni samrūd̄ viśvā it tāni Varu-nasya vratāni | 2. Evā vandasvā Varuṇāṁ bṛihantāṁ namasyā dhīram̄ amṛitasya gopdām | sa naḥ śarma trivarūthāṁ viyāṁsad̄ ityādi |

“The omniscient Spirit (Asura) has propped up the sky; he has measured<sup>94</sup> the expanse of the earth; he has pervaded all the worlds, the monarch: all these are the achievements of Varuṇa. 2. Reverence, then, the mighty Varuṇa, bow down before the wise guardian of immortality. May he impart to us triple prosperity," etc.

The next texts refer to the Sun (Sūrya, Aditya, or Savitṛi):

R. V. i. 50, 7.—Vi dyām eshi rajas prithv āhā mimāno aktubhiḥ | paśyan janmāni Sūrya | "Thou traversest the sky, the broad expanse, measuring (forming?) the days with thy rays; beholding created things, o Sun."

R. V. i. 160, 4.—Ayaṁ derānām apasām apastamo yo jajāna rodasī viśvaśambhuvā | vi yo mame rajasī sukratūyayā ajarebhiḥ skambhanebhiḥ samānriche | "He, the most active of the active gods, who produced the heaven and earth which are beneficent to all; who from a desire to benefit [men] measured (constructed?) the worlds, with their undecaying supports,—he has been lauded [by us]."<sup>95</sup>

R. V. viii. 90, 11, 12 (=S. V. ii. 1138, 9).—Bad mahān asi Sūrya bad Āditya mahān asi | mahas te sato mahimā panasyate addhā deva mahān asi | Baṭ Sūrya śravasā mahān asi satrā deva mahān asi | mahnā devānām asuryaḥ purohito vibhu jyotir adābhyam |

"Verily, Sūrya, thou art great; verily, Āditya, thou art great. The majesty of thee who art great is celebrated: certainly, god, thou art great. 12. Verily, Sūrya, thou art great in renown: o god, thou art very great; through thy greatness thou art the divine leader of the gods, the pervading, irresistible luminary."

R. V. x. 149, 1.—Savitā yantraiḥ prithivīm aramṇād askambhane Savitā dyām adriṁhat | āscam iva adhuzad dhunim antarikṣam atūrte baddham Savitā samudram | 2. Yatra samudraḥ skabhito vi-aunad apām napāt Savita tasya veda | ato bhūr ata ā utthitāṁ rajo ato dyāv-pri-thivī aprathetām |

"Savitṛi has established the earth by supports; Savitṛi has fixed the sky in unsupported space;<sup>96</sup> Savitṛi has milked the atmosphere,

<sup>96</sup> In later times, as is well known, the earth is represented in Hindu mythology as resting on the head of the serpent Śeṣha, or on some other support. Thus it is said in the Vishṇu Pur. ii. 5, 19 (Wilson, p. 206): Sa bibhrat śekharaibhūtam aśeṣhaṁ xiti-maṇḍalam | āste pātāla-mūla-śhaḥ Śeṣho 'śeṣha-sūrārchitaḥ | "Śeṣha, worshipped by all the gods, supports the whole region of the earth like a diadem, and is restless (or noisy) as a horse, [or, Savitṛi has extracted from the atmosphere the ocean, etc., restless as a horse],—the ocean fastened in the impassable expanse. 2. Savitṛi, the son of the waters, knows the place where the ocean, supported, issued forth. From him the earth, from him the atmosphere arose; from him the heaven and earth extended.”

The first of the preceding verses is quoted by Yāska (Nir. x. 32), and illustrated as follows: Savitā yantraiḥ ppithivīm aramayat | anārambhane'ntarixe Savitā dyām adṛimhad āsvam iva adhuxad dhunim antarixe megham baddham atūrtle baddham atūrṇe iti vā 'tvaramāṇe iti vā Savitā samuditūram iti | kam anyam madhyamād evam araxyat | Ādityo 'pi Savitā uchhyate. “Savitri by supports has caused the earth to rest; Savitri has fixed the sky like a horse in the place which has no resting place (?)—the atmosphere. Savitri has milked the watery cloud fastened in the atmosphere, the impassable, or the unhastening. What other god than the intermediate one (i.e. the deity residing in the atmosphere) would he have thus described? The sun also (whose place is in the sky) is called Savitri.”

the foundation of Pātāla.” The Siddhāntas, or scientific astronomical works of India, however, maintain that the earth is unsupported. Thus it is said in the Siddhānta-Siromaṇi, iii. 2: Bhūmeḥ pīṇḍaḥ śasūṅka-jūa-kavi-ravi-kuṇḍyārki-nakṣatra-kakā-ṛittair vṛitaḥ san mṛid-anila-salila-vyoma-tejomayo'yam | nūnyādharāḥ sva-śaktyaiva viyati nīyatam tiṣṭhati ityādi . . . 4. Mūrtto dhartā ched dharitṛyās tad-anyaś tasyāpyanyo 'syaivam atūṇavasthā | antye kalpyā chet sva-śaktiḥ kim ūdye kim no bhūmīr ityādi | which is thus translated by the late Mr. L. Wilkinson in the Bibl. Indica (new series), No. 13: “2. This globe of the earth formed of [the five elementary principles] earth, air, water, the æther, and fire, is perfectly round, and encompassed by the orbits of the Moon, Mercury, Venus, the Sun, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn, and by the constellations. It has no [material] supporter; but stands firmly in the expanse of heaven by its own inherent force. On its surface throughout subsist [in security] all animate and inanimate objects, Danujas and human beings, gods and Daityas.” . . . 4. If the earth were supported by any material substance or living creature, then that would require a second supporter, and for that second a third would be required. Here we have the absurdity of an interminable series. If the last of the series be supposed to remain firm by its own inherent power, then why may not the same power be supposed to exist in the first—that is, in the earth? For is not the earth one of the forms of the eight-fold divinity, i.e. of Ś'iva?” Aryya Bhatta, one of the most ancient of Indian scientific astronomers, even maintained that the alternation of day and night is the result of the rotation of the earth on its own axis. His words, as quoted by Mr. Colebrooke (Essays, ii. p. 392) are these: Bha-panjarah sthiro bhūḥ evēṛityāṛityā prātidairasikāv udayāstamayau sampādayati nakṣatra-grahāṇām | “The starry firmament is fixed. It is the earth, which, continually revolving, produces the rising and setting of the constellations and planets.”

Prof. Roth (Illust. of Nir., p. 143) thus translates the verse: "Savitri has fixed the earth with supports, he has fastened the heaven in unsupported space; he has milked the atmosphere shaking itself like a horse, the stream which is confined within limits which cannot be over-passed." (In his Lexicon, however, Prof. Roth gives to dhuni the sense of "sounding.") He then observes: "According to Yāska the Savitri who is here mentioned must be the intermediate one, on account of his function in causing rain."

The following passages refer to Agni:

R. V. i. 59, 5.—Divas chit te bṛhato Jātavedo vaiśvānara pra ririche mahitram | rājā kṛishṭinām asi mānushīnām yudhā devebhyo varivaś chakartha | "Jātavedas, present with all men, thy greatness surpasses even that of the vast sky. Thou art the king of human creatures; by battle thou hast obtained an ample space for the gods."

R. V. i. 67, 3.—Ajo na xām dādihāra prithivīm tasthambha dyām mantrebhiḥ satyair ityādi | "Like the moving [sun, or the unborn] he upheld the broad earth; he supported the sky with true hymns," etc.

The next verses celebrate the greatness of Parjanya:

R. V. vii. 101, 4.—Yasmin viśvāni bhuvanāni tasthus tisro dyāvas tredhā sasur āpa ityādi | 6. Sa retodhā vṛishabhāḥ śasvatīnām tasminn ātmā jagataś tastushaścha | (Compare R. V. i. 115, 1). "He in whom all the worlds abide, and the three heavens, and [by whom] the waters flowed in three directions, etc. 6. He is the bull that impregnates all the cows: in him is the soul of the moving and stationary world."

This next passage refers to the god called Gandharva:

R. V. x. 139, 5.—. . . Divyo Gandharvo rajaso vimānaḥ | "The divine Gandharva, measurer of the world," etc.

The last set of passages which I shall adduce celebrate the greatness of Soma:

R. V. ix. 61, 16 (=S. V. 1, 484).—Paramāno ajījanad divas chitraṁ na tanyatum | jyotir vaiśvānaram bṛihat | "The purifier [Soma] has generated the great light which is common to all mankind, like the wonderful thundering of the sky."

R. V. ix. 86, 28.—Taremaḥ prajā divyasya retasas traṁ viśvasya bhuvanasya rājasi | athedaṁ viśvam pavamāna te vaśe traṁ Indo prathamam dhāmadhā asi | 29. Traṁ samudro asi viśvarit kave taremāḥ pañcha pradiśo vidharmani | traṁ dyām cha prithivīm chāti jabhṛishe tava

jyotīṁśhi pavamāna sūryaḥ | 30. Tvam pavitre rajaso vidharmanī devebhyāḥ soma pavamāna pūyase | tvām Uśijaḥ prathamā agrībhnata tubhyemā viśvā bhuvanāni yemire |

"All these creatures spring from thy divine seed; thou art the lord of the whole universe. All this, purifier, is under thy control; thou, Indu, art the first sustainer of the regions. Thou, sage, art an omniscient ocean; all these five quarters of the world are upheld by thee. Thou hast transcended the sky and the earth; thine, o purifier, are the luminaries and the sun. In the filter which is the support of the world, thou, pure Soma, art purified for the gods. The Uśijes first gathered thee. In thee all these worlds are contained."

R. V. ix. 89, 6.—Viśvāmbho divo dharunaḥ prithivyā viśvā uta xitayo haste asya ityādi | "He is the supporter of the sky, the upholder of the earth: all men are in his hand."

R. V. ix. 96, 5, which has been quoted above (p. 81), should be again referred to here.

R. V. ix. 97, 24.—Pavitrebbhiḥ pavamāno nrichaxāḥ rājā devānām uta marttyānām ityādi | "[Soma], purified by filters, the beholder of men, is the king of gods, and of mortals," etc.

R. V. ix. 100, 8.—Pavamāna mahi śravaś chitrebbhir yāsi raśmibhiḥ<sup>97</sup> | śarddhan tamāṁsi jighnase viśvāni dākusho grihe | 9. tvām dyāṁ cha mahivrata prithivīm chāti jabhrishe ityādi | "Thou, pure [Soma], marchest onward to great renown, by thy varied rays; daring, thou wilt destroy all darkness in the house of thy worshipper. 9. Thou, achiever of great deeds, hast transcended heaven and earth," etc.

R. V. ix. 107, 7.—. . . tvām kavir abhavo deva-vītamah ā sūryam rohaya divi | "Thou art a sage most pleasing to the gods; thou hast caused the sun to rise in the sky."

R. V. ix. 109, 4 (=S. V. ii. 591).—Parasva soma mahān samudrah pītā devānām viśvā abhi dhāma | "Purify all abodes, Soma, [who art] a great ocean, the father of the gods," etc.

The preceding texts are amply sufficient to show that Vishṇu is not the only god to whom the highest divine functions are ascribed in the Veda, but that, on the contrary, the same attributes are assigned, and with far greater frequency, to several of the other deities. ✓

The following passage from Professor Müller's Ancient Sanskrit

<sup>97</sup> Compare R. V. ix. 4, 1: Sanū cha Soma jeshi cha pavamāna mahi śravaḥ | and ix. 83, 5: Jayan śravo brihat |

Literature (p. 532 f.) shews that all the principal Vedic deities are, in their turn, addressed by their worshippers as supreme :

“When these individual gods are invoked, they are not conceived as limited by the power of others as superior or inferior in rank. Each god is to the mind of the supplicants as good as all the gods. He is felt, at the time, as a real divinity, as supreme and absolute, in spite of the necessary limitations which, to our mind, a plurality of gods must entail on every single god. All the rest disappear for a moment from the vision of the poet, and he only who is to fulfil their desires stands in full light before the eyes of the worshippers. ‘Among you, o gods, there is none that is small, none that is young: you are all great indeed,’<sup>98</sup> is a sentiment which, though, perhaps, not so distinctly expressed as by Manu Vaivasvata, nevertheless, underlies all the poetry of the Veda. Although the gods are sometimes distinctly invoked as the great and the small, the young and the old (R. V. i. 27, 13), this is only an attempt to find the most comprehensive expression for the divine powers, and no where is any of the gods represented as the slave of others. It would be easy to find, in the numerous hymns of the Veda, passages in which almost every single god is represented as supreme and absolute. In the first hymn of the Second Maṇḍala, Agni is called the ruler of the universe,<sup>99</sup> the lord of men, the wise king, the father, the brother, the son, and friend of men;<sup>100</sup> nay, all the powers and names of the others are distinctly ascribed to Agni. The hymn belongs, no doubt, to the modern compositions; yet, though Agni is thus highly exalted in it, nothing is said to disparage the divine character of the other gods. Indra is celebrated as the strongest god in the hymns as well as in the Brāhmaṇas, and the burden of one of the songs of the Tenth Book<sup>101</sup> is: Vīśvasmād Indra uttarah | ‘Indra is greater than all.’ Of Soma it is said that he was born great, and that he conquers every one.<sup>102</sup> He is called the king of the world,<sup>103</sup> he has the power to prolong the life of men,<sup>104</sup> and in one sense he is called the maker of heaven and earth, of Agni, of Sūrya, of Indra, and of Vishnu.<sup>105</sup> If we read the next hymn, which is addressed to Varuṇa

(ōpavós), we perceive that the god here invoked is, to the mind of the poet, supreme and almighty. Nevertheless, he is one of the gods who is almost always represented in fellowship with another, Mittra; and even in our hymn there is one verse, the sixth, in which Varuṇa and Mittra are invoked in the dual. Yet what more could human language achieve, in trying to express the idea of a divine and supreme power, than what our poet says of Varuṇa: 'Thou art lord of all, of heaven and earth.' Or, as is said in another hymn (ii. 27, 10), 'Thou art the king of all; of those who are gods, and of those who are men,' etc., etc.

SECT. III.—Vishṇu as one of the Ādityas.

In the hymns of the Veda the Ādityas, or sons of Aditi, are alluded to as being seven or eight in number; but only six deities, of whom Vishṇu is not one, are specified by name as belonging to this class.<sup>106</sup> The following are the only texts which I consider it necessary to cite on this subject:

R. V. ii. 27, 1 (Nir. xii. 36).—Imā girāḥ Ādityebhyo ghrītasnūḥ sanād rājabhyo juhvā juhomi | śṛinotu Mitro Aryamā Bhaganoḥ tuvijāto Varuṇo Daxo Amśaḥ | "With my tongue I offer up these praises, dropping with butter, to the Ādityas, who have been kings for ever: may Mitra, Aryaman, Bhaga, the mighty Varuṇa, Daxa, Anśa, hear us." Yāska makes tuviajātaḥ to be=bahujātaś cha Dhātā, thus understanding it to designate Dhātṛi.

R. V. ix. 114, 3.—Sapta diśo nānā-sūryāḥ sapta hotāra ritvijāḥ | devā Ādityā ye sapta tebhīḥ Somābhiraṇa naḥ | "The seven points of the compass, with their respective suns, the seven hotṛi priests, and the seven gods, the Adityas,—with these, o Soma, protect us."

In another text (R. V. x. 72, 8, 9), which has already been quoted in p. 10 f., it is said that Aditi had eight sons, though she only presented seven of them to the gods, and cast out Mārttāṇḍa, the eighth.

In his explanation of the first text, which I have now quoted (R. V. ii. 27, 1), Sāyana observes of the Adityas: Te cha Tvittirīye 'ushtau

<sup>106</sup> See Boehtlingk and Roth's Lexicon under the word Āditya: and Prof. Roth's dissertation on the Adityas in his paper "on the principal gods of the Arian nations," Journal of the German Oriental Society, vol. vi., pp. 68 ff. Sūrya (the Sun) is however called Āditya in R. V. x. 88, 11 (Nir. vii. 29).

putrāso Aditer' ity upakramya spashṭam anukrāntāḥ | 'Mitraścha Varuṇāścha Dhātācha Aryamācha Aṁśuścha Bhagaścha Indraścha Vivasvāś cha ete' iti | "They (the Ādityas) are distinctly specified in the passage of the Taittirīya, beginning with the words 'The eight sons of Aditi,' as 'these, Mitra, Varuṇa, Dhātri, Aryaman, Anśu, Bhaga, Indra, and Vivasvat.'"

In a passage of the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (iii. 1, 3, 3 ff.) quoted above (p. 12, f.), the Ādityas are alluded to as eight in number in conformity with the text of the R. V. x. 72, 8, 9. In other texts of the same Brāhmaṇa mention is made of twelve Ādityas:

Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, vi. 1, 2, 8.—Sa manasaiva vācham mithunam samabhavat sa dvādaśa drapsān garbhy abhavat | te dvādaśa Ādityā asriyanta tūn divy upādadhāt | "With his mind he [entered] Speech. There became a pair. He became pregnant with twelve drops. They were created the twelve Ādityas. Them he placed in the sky."

Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, xi. 6, 3, 8 (=Bṛih. Ar. Up. iii. 9, 5, p. 646). Katame Ādityā iti | dvādaśa māsūḥ saṁvatsarasya ete Ādityāḥ | ete hi idāṁ sarvam ādadānā yanti | te yad idāṁ sarvam ādadānā yanti tasmād Ādityā iti | "How many Ādityas are there? There are twelve months of the year. These are the Ādityas. For they go taking (ādadānāḥ) all this. Since they go taking all this, they are called Ādityas."

The Nirukta, ii. 13, speaks thus of the Ādityas: Ādityaḥ | kasmād | ādatte rasān | ādatte bhāsān jyotishām | ādīpto bhāsā iti vā | Aditeḥ putraḥ iti vā | alpaprayerogaṁ tu asya etad ārchābhyāmnāye sūkta-bhāk "sūryam āditeyam" Aditeḥ putram | evam anyāsām api devatānām Āditya-pravādāḥ stutayo bhavanti | tad yathā etad | Mitrasya Varuṇasya Aryamṇo Daxasya Bhagasya Aṁśasya iti |

"The Āditya: whence [so called]? He takes up the fluids.<sup>107</sup> He takes up the light of the luminaries; he is illuminated (ādīptaḥ) by light; or, he is the son of Aditi. But this [appellation] is seldom applied to him in the text of the Rigveda. Sūrya Āditeya, Surya the son of Aditi, is mentioned in a hymn.<sup>108</sup> In the same way there are praises of other deities, addressed to them as Ādityas; as in the case of Mitra, Varuṇa, Aryaman, Daxa, Bhaga, Anśa.”

In the following texts from the Mahābhārata and Purāṇas, the Ādityas, though their names are not always uniformly given, are stated or understood to be twelve in number, except in one case where only eleven are specified. Viṣṇu is always named as one of them, and as by the time when these works were written, his dignity had become enhanced in general estimation, he is declared to be the greatest of the twelve.

Mahābhārata, i. 2,519, 2,522 ff.—*Marīcheḥ Kaśyapaḥ putraḥ Kaśyapāt tu imāḥ prajāḥ | prajājñire mahābhāgā Daxa-kanyās trayodaśa | . . . 2,522. “Kaśyapa was the son of Marīchi; and from Kaśyapa these beings were born. There were thirteen eminent daughters of Daxa . . . 2,522. I will recount to thee, by name, king of the race of Bharata, the twelve Ādityas, lords of the world, who were produced from Aditi; Dhātṛi, Mitra, Aryaman, Śakra (Indra), Varuṇa, Anśa, Bhaga, Vivasvat, Pūshan, and Savitṛi the tenth; the eleventh is Tvaṣṭṛi, and the twelfth is called Viṣṇu, who, though the latest born, surpasses all the Ādityas in his attributes.”

Mahābhārata, i. 2,598.—Marīcheḥ Kaśyapaḥ putraḥ Kaśyapasya Surāsuraḥ | jajñire nṛipa-sārddūla lokānām prabhavaś tu saḥ | . . . 2,600. Dvādaśaivāditeḥ putraḥ Śakra-mukhyā narādhipa | teshām avarajo Viṣṇur yatra lokāḥ pratishṭhitāḥ |

<sup>108</sup> Dr. Aufrecht conjectures that the word sūkta-bhōk should be read asūkta-bhōk “has not a hymn devoted to him;” as he appears to be only mentioned in one verse, R. V. x. 88, 11 (Nir. vii. 29). Durga, however, as quoted by Roth (Illust. p. 21), says: sūkta-bhōg eva chaitad abhūdhanām na havirbhōk | “This appellation has a hymn devoted to it, but no oblation is ordained [to be offered to the god under this name].” By “hymn” Durga may only mean part of a hymn.

beings sprang. . . . 2,600. Aditi had twelve sons, beginning with Sakra. The youngest of them was Vishnu, on whom the worlds are supported."

Mahābhārata, xiii. 7,092 f. — Amśo Bhagaścha Mitraścha Varuṇaścha īśvaraḥ | tathā Dhātā 'ryamā chaiva Jayanto Bhāskaras tathā | Tvashtā Pūshā tathaivendro drādaśo Vishnur uchyate | ity ete dvādaśa-dityāḥ Kāśyapeyā iti śrutiḥ |

"Anśa, Bhaga, Mitra, Varuṇa, lord of the waters, Dhātṛi, Aryaman, Jayanta, Bhāskara, Tvashtṛi, Pūshan, Indra, and Vishnu who is called the twelfth: these are the twelve Ādityas, the sons of Kāśyapa, according to tradition (or the Veda, śruti)."

Mahābhārata, v. 3,501 ff. — Axayaś chāvyayaś chaiva Brahmā lokapitāmahaḥ | tathaiva bhagavantau tau Nara-Nārāyaṇāv riṣhī | Ādityānām hi sarveshām Viṣṇur ekaḥ sanātanaḥ | ajayyaś chāvyayaś chaiva śūsvataḥ prabhur īśvaraḥ | nimitta-maraṇās chānye chandra-sūrya-mahī-jalam | Vāyur agnis tathā "kāśaṁ grahās tārā-gaṇās tathā | te cha xayānte jagato hitvā lokā-trayaṁ sadā | xayam gachhanti vai sarve sṛjyante cha punaḥ punaḥ | mukūrta-maraṇās te anye mānuṣhā mṛiga-paṇīṇaḥ | "Brahmā, the parent of the world, is undecaying and imperishable; and so too are the venerable Rishis, Nara, and Nārāyaṇa. Vishnu alone of all the Ādityas is eternal, invincible, imperishable, everlasting, potent, the lord. Other beings perish on some occasion, [as at the end of a Kalpa],—<sup>109</sup> the moon, the sun, the earth, water,<sup>110</sup> air, fire, the æther, the planets, and the stars. At the dissolution of the universe, all these invariably abandon the three worlds, and perish, and are created again and again. Other [creatures], men, beasts, and birds, die after a brief interval (mukūrta)."

Vishnu Purāṇa, 1, 15, 90 ff. (p. 122 of Wilson's translation)—Pūrvamanvantare śreshṭhā dvādaśūsan surottamāḥ | Tushitā nāma te 'nyonyam ūchur Vaivascate 'ntare | upasthite 'tiyaśasas Chāxushasyāntare Manoh | samavāyīkṛitāḥ sarve samāgamyā paraṣparam | Āgachhata drutaṁ devāḥ Aditiṁ sampravṛiṣya vai | Manvantare prasūyāmas tan naḥ śreyo bhaved iti | evam uktvā tu te sarve Chāxushasyāntare Manoh | Mārīchāt Kāśya-

“In the former Manvantara there were twelve eminent and renowned deities called Tushitas; who, being assembled together, said to each other in the Chāxusha Manvantara, when the Vaivasvata Manvantara was approaching, ‘Come quickly, deities, let us enter into Aditi, and be born in the [next] Manvantara: this will be for our welfare.’ Having thus spoken in the Chāxusha Manvantara, they were all born from Kaśyapa, son of Marichi, and Aditi, daughter of Daxa. In this way Vishṇu, and Śakra (Indra) were again born, and Aryaman, Dhātri, Tvashṭri, Pūshan, Vivasvat, Savitri, Mitra, Varuṇa, Aṁśa, and the energetic Bhaga: these are known as the twelve Ādityas. Those who formerly in the Chāxusha Manvantara were called the Tushitas, are known as the twelve Ādityas in the Vaivasvata Manvantara.”

The same story is repeated in very nearly the same words in the Harivaṁśa, verses 171 ff.

The following is another passage from the Harivaṁśa, verses 11,548 ff: *Adityām jajñire rājann Ādityāḥ Kaśyapād atha | Indro Vishṇur Bhagās
Tvashṭā Varuṇo 'ṁśo 'ryamā Raviḥ | Pūshā Mitraścha varado Manuḥ
Parjanya eva cha | ity ete dvādaśādityā varishṭhās tridivaukasāḥ |*
“From Kuśyapa and Aditi were born the Ādityas, Indra, Vishṇu, Bhaga, Tvashṭri, Varuṇa, Aṁśa, Aryaman, Kavi, Pūshan, Mitra, the bestower of boons, Manu, and Parjanya,—these are the twelve Ādityas, most eminent celestials.”

In the same work, verses 12,456 f., we read: *Aryamā Varuṇo
Mitraḥ Pūshā Dhātū Purandaraḥ | Tvashṭā Bhago 'ṁśaḥ Savitā Par-janyaścheti visrutāḥ | Adityām jajñire devāḥ Kaśyapāl loka-bhāvanāḥ |*
“The gods, creators of the worlds, known as Aryaman, Varuṇa, Mitra, Pūshan, Dhātri, Purandara (Indra), Tvashṭri, Bhaga, Aṁśa, Savitri, and Parjanya, were sprung from Kaśyapa and Aditi.”

Only eleven names occur in this list.

The next is another legend on the same subject from the same work. Here quite a different origin is assigned to the Ādityas, who are said to have sprung from the face of Vivasvat or Mārtanda, the Sun.

Harivaṁśa, 589 ff.—Tato nirbhāsitaṁ rūpaṁ tejasū saṁhatena vai | kāntāt kāntataraṁ drashtum adhikaṁ śuśubhe tadā | mukhe nirvarttitaṁ rūpaṁ tasya devasya gopateḥ | tataḥ-prabhṛiti devasya mukham āsit tu lohitaṁ | mukha-rāgantū yat pūrvam Mārttaṇḍasya mukha-chyutam | Ādityā dvādaśaiveha sambhūtā mukha-sambhavāḥ | Dhātā 'ryamā cha Mitraścha Varuṇo 'mśo Bhagas tathā | Indro Virasvān Pūshā cha Parjanya daśamas tathā | tatas Tvashṭā tato Vishnur ajaghanyo jaghan-yajagh | harshaṁ lebhe tato devo dṛishṭvā "dityān sva-deha-jān | "Then his appearance, illuminated with concentrated lustre, shone forth more brilliantly, fairer than the fairest to behold. This appearance was produced in the face of that god, the lord of rays. Henceforward the face of the god was red. From the previous colour of the face which fell from the countenance of Mārttaṇḍa were produced twelve face-born Adityas: Dhātṛi, Aryaman, Mitra, Varuṇa, Anśa, Bhaga, Indra, Vivasvat, Pūshan, Parjanya the tenth, then Tvashṭṛi, then Vishnu not the last, though the last born. The god then rejoiced, beholding the Ādityas, sprung from his own body."

This story is not only in opposition to the ordinary account of the Adityas being sons of Aditi, but it contradicts itself. Vivasvat is one of the Ādityas, who is produced from Vivasvat; and Tvashṭṛi was already existing, and playing a part in the former part of the legend. (See Langlois's note 7, p. 50 of his French version of the Harivaṁśa). The Vishnu Purāṇa tells the same story about Vivasvat, but says nothing of the birth of the Ādityas. (See Wilson's translation, p. 266).

Bhāgavata Purāṇa vi. 6, 24 f.—*S'ṛiṇu nāmāni lokānām mātṛiṇām saṁkarāṇi cha | atha Kāśyapa-patnīnām yat-prasūtam idaṁ jagat | Aditir Ditiṛ ityādi | . . . . 36 f. SECT. IV.—Legends regarding Vishnu from the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, the Taittīrīya Āraṇyaka, the Pañchariṃśa Brāhmaṇa, the Rāmāyaṇa, the Mahābhārata, and the Purāṇas.

The following legend from the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (in which Vishnu is represented as a dwarf, and as having, under the form of sacrifice, conquered the whole earth) may contain the germ of the story of the Dwarf Incarnation :

Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, i. 2, 5, 1 ff.—*Devāścha vā Asurāścha ubhaye prājāpatyāḥ paspridhire | tato devā anuṣyam iva āsur | atha ha Asurā menire 'āsmakam eva idaṃ khalu bhuranam' iti | 2. “The gods and Asuras, who were both sprung from Prajāpati, strove together. Then the gods were, as it were, worsted, and the Asuras thought, ‘this world is now certainly ours.’ 2. Then they spake, ‘Come let us divide this earth, and having divided it, let us subsist thereon.’ They accordingly went on dividing it with ox-hides from west to east. 3. The gods heard of it, [and] said, ‘The Asuras are dividing this earth; come, we shall go to the spot where they are dividing it. Who shall we become (i.e. what shall become of us), if we do not share in it?’ Placing at their head Vishṇu, the sacrifice, they proceeded [thither], 4. and said ‘put us in possession of this earth; let us also have a share in it.’ The Asuras, grudging as it were, answered, ‘We give you as much as this Vishṇu can lie upon.’<sup>111</sup> 5. Now, Vishṇu was a dwarf. The gods did not reject that offer; [but said among themselves], ‘They have given us much, [these Asuras], who have given us what is co-extensive with sacrifice.’ Then having placed Vishṇu to the east, they surrounded him with metres; [saying], on the south side, ‘I surround thee with the Gāyatrī metre;’ on the west, ‘I surround thee with the Trisṭubh metre;’ on the north, ‘I surround thee with the Jagatī metre.’ 7. Having thus surrounded him with metres, they placed Agni (fire) on the east, and thus they went on worshipping and toiling. By this they acquired the whole of this earth; and since by this they acquired (samavindanta) it all, therefore [the place of sacrifice] is called vedi (from the root vid, ‘to acquire’). Hence men say, ‘as great as is the altar, so great is the earth;’ for by it (the altar) they acquired the whole of this [earth]. Thus he who so understands this, conquers all this [earth] from rivals, expels from it rivals. 8. Then this Vishṇu, being wearied, surrounded by metres, with Agni to the east, did not advance; but then hid himself among the roots of plants. 9. The gods then exclaimed, ‘What has become of Vishṇu? what has become of the sacrifice?’ They said, ‘Surrounded by metres, with Agni to the east, he does not advance; search for him here.’ So digging, as it were, they searched for, and found him at a depth of three fingers; therefore let the altar [have a trench] three fingers deep; therefore, also, Pāñchi<sup>112</sup> made an altar of this description for the soma sacrifice. 10. But let no one do so," etc.

The next legend from the same work relates how Vishṇu became pre-eminent among the gods, and how he lost his head. Here also he is identified with sacrifice :

“The gods, Agni, Indra, Soma, Vishṇu the Sacrifice, and all the [other] deities, excepting the Aśvins, were present at a sacrifice. 2. Kuruxetra was the place of their divine worship. Hence, men say that Kuruxetra is the country where the gods sacrifice. Consequently, to whatever part of Kuruxetra a man goes, he looks upon it as a place for divine worship, since it was the spot where the gods worshipped. 3. They were [there. They said], ‘May we attain prosperity, become famous, and eat food.’ And in the very same way these [men] attend a sacrifice [saying], ‘May we attain prosperity, become famous, and eat food.’ 4. Then [the gods] said, ‘Whoever among us, through exertion, austerity, faith, sacrifice, and oblations, first comprehends the issue of the sacrifice, let him be the most eminent of us: this [shall be] common to us all.’ [To this they consented, saying], ‘Be it so.’ 5. Vishṇu first attained that [proposed object]. He became the most eminent of the gods: wherefore men say, ‘Vishṇu is the most eminent of the gods.’ 6. He who is this Vishṇu is sacrifice; he who [is] this sacrifice is the Āditya. Vishṇu could not support this fame.<sup>113</sup> And the same is the case now, that every one cannot support fame. 7. Taking his bow and three arrows, he departed. He stood, resting his head on the end of his [bended] bow. Being unable to overcome him, the gods sat down all around him. 8. Then the ants said to them (now the ants were the same as upadikas), ‘What will you give to him who gnaws the bowstring?’ [The gods replied], ‘We will give him the enjoyment of food, and he shall find waters even in the desert; so shall we give him every enjoyment of food.’ 9. [The ants, then], approaching, gnawed his bowstring. When that was divided, the ends of the bow, starting asunder, cut off the head of Vishṇu. 10. It fell, making a sound (ghrin). That having fallen, became that Aditya. Then the rest of him became extended towards the east. Since the head fell with the sound of ghrin, hence gharma, ['the sacrificial kettle,' received its name]; and since he became extended, (prāvṛjyata), the pravargya [received its appellation]. 11. The gods then said, 'A great hero (mahān vīrah) of ours has fallen.' Hence arose the name of mahāvīra (a sacrificial vessel).<sup>114</sup> They wiped (sammamṛijuh) with their hands the fluid (blood) which flowed from him. Hence arose the name of samrāt. 12. The gods touched (?) him (Vishṇu), as men wishing to know property (?) do. Indra first reached him. He came into contact with him limb by limb. He embraced him. Having embraced him, he became this fame, which Indra is. He who so knows this becomes fame. 13. That Vishṇu was indeed sacrifice (makha). Hence Indra became the possessor of sacrifice (makhavān). He is Makhavān: they call him Maghavān transcendently; for the gods love what is transcendental (lit. beyond the reach of the senses). 14. They (the gods) gave food to those ants. All food is water; for with water men, as it were, moisten the food which they eat: as the common saying is. 15. Then they divided into three portions this Vishṇu, the sacrifice. . . . . With that headless sacrifice (see above), the gods went on worshipping and toiling."

<sup>113</sup> It seems as if there were a play of words here, the word yaśaḥ, “fame,” having reference to the words sa yaḥ sa Vishṇuḥ, etc., sa yaḥ sa yajñah, etc. “He who [is] this Vishṇu,” etc. “He who [is] this sacrifice,” etc.

I am indebted to Professor Weber for the next two passages; the first from the Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, and the second from the Pāñchaviṃśa Brāhmaṇa, which both relate the same legend which has just been given from the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa.

"The gods, desirous of fame, were attending a sacrifice complete in every respect. They said 'whatever fame first comes to us, that shall be common to us all.' Kuruxetra was their altar. Khaṇḍava was its southern, Tūṛghna its northern, and Paṛiṇah its hinder section. The Marus were the earth dug from it. 2. Fame came to the Sacrifice derived from Viṣṇu [Makha Vaishṇava] among their number. This fame he eagerly desired; with it he departed. The gods followed him, seeking to obtain [this] fame. From the left [hand] of him while thus followed, a bow was produced, and from his right hand arrows. Hence a bow and arrows have a holy origin, for they are sprung from sacrifice. 3. Though many, they could not overcome him, though he was only one. Therefore many men without bows and arrows cannot overcome one hero who has a bow and arrows. He smiled, 'Though they are many, they have not overcome me who am only one.' Virile strength issued from him as he continued to ~~smile~~. This the gods put upon the plants. They became śyāmāka grain. For they are smilers (smayākāḥ). 4. Hence this grain derives its name. Wherefore a person who has been consecrated should smile with reserve, that he may retain his virility. He stood leaning on his bow. The ants said [to the gods], 'let us choose a boon; and after that we shall subdue [or kill him]. Wherever we dig, let us open up water.' Hence wherever ants dig, they open up water. 5. For this was the boon which they chose.<sup>115</sup> They gnawed his (Vishnu's) bowstring. His bow, starting asunder, hurled his head upwards. It travelled through heaven and earth. From its so travelling (prāvarṭata), the pravargya derives its name. From its falling with the sound of ghrām, gharma obtained its name. Virile energy (or seed, vīryam) fell from the mighty one (mahataḥ): hence the mahāvīra got its name. 6. From their making a collection (samabharan) of it<sup>116</sup> (what?) the samrāt obtains its appellation. The gods divided him when prostrate, into three parts; Agni [took] the morning oblation; Indra the midday oblation, and the Viśvedevas the third oblation. Sacrificing with this headless sacrifice, they (the gods), neither obtained blessings, nor conquered heaven. 7. The gods said to the Aśvins, 'Ye two are physicians, replace this head of the sacrifice.' They said 'Let us ask a boon, let our graha (libation of Soma) be received here also. [The gods accordingly] received this [libation] to the Aśvins for them. [The Aśvins] replaced this head of the sacrifice, which is the pravargya. Sacrificing with this sacrifice with a head, they obtained blessings, they conquered heaven. When one spreads out the pravargya, then he replaces the head of the sacrifice. Sacrificing with this sacrifice with a head, a man obtains blessings, and conquers heaven. Hence this pravargya is principally concerned with oblations to the Aśvins."

<sup>115</sup> The word thus translated is vārevritam, as written in the copy (in Roman letters) sent to me by Prof. Weber. If, however, one may judge from the two following passages of a similar nature from the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, the true reading must be varavritam, which I have adopted in the text:—Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, 1, 7: Yajño vai devebhya udakrūmat | te devā na kīncanāsaknuvan kartum | . . . na prājānans te 'bruvann Aditīm 'tvayemaṁ yujnāṁ prajñāmeti' | sū tathety abravīt | sū vai varam vṛjā iti | vṛjīṣkeeti | satam eva varam avṛjita | matprāyaṇā yajñāḥ santu mad-udayanā iti | tatheti | tasmād ādityaḥ charuḥ prāyaṇīyo bhavaty | āditya udayaniyo | varavrito hy asyāḥ. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, 2, 3: Agnīṣomābhyām vā Indro Vritram ahaṁś tāv enam abrutām | āvūbhyām vai Vritram avadhīr varam te vṛjāvahā iti | 'Vṛjāthām' iti | tāv etam eva varam avṛjātām | śvāhsutyūyām paśam | su enayor esho 'ch'yuto | varavrito hy enayoh.

“Desirous of fame, the gods, Agni, Indra, Vāyu and Makha (Sacrifice) were attending a sacrifice. They said, ‘whatever fame comes to us that shall be common to us. Fame came to Makha among their number. Taking it, he departed. The others wished to take their share in it. They followed [or, strove with] him. He stood leaning on his bow. The end of his bow, springing upwards, cut off his head. He became the pravargya. Makha is sacrifice. When men spread out the pravargya, they replace the head of Makha.”

The Aitareya Brāhmaṇa has these two passages relating to Vishṇu, 1, 1: “Agnir vai devānām avamo | Vishṇuḥ paramas | tadantarena sarvā anyā devatāḥ. “Agni is the lowest, Vishṇu the highest among the gods; between them both are placed all the other deities.” In his Anc. Sansk. Lit., p. 390, note, Prof. Müller remarks that “this passage proves nothing as to the relative dignity of Agni and Vishṇu.” Again, 1, 30, on quoting R. V. 1, 156, 4, the Aitareya says: Vishṇur vai devānām dvārapaḥ | sa evāsmā etad dvāraṃ vīṛiṇoti. “Vishnu is the door-keeper of the gods; he opens for him that door.”

The following passage from the Rāmāyaṇa gives the legend of the dwarf incarnation in its later form:

“Rāmāyaṇa (Schlegel's Ed.), i. 31, 2 ff.—2. Iha Rāma mahābāho Vishṇur deva-namaskṛitah | tapaś-charaṇa-yogārtham uvāsa sa mahātapaḥ | 3. Esha pūrvāsramo Rāma vāmanasya mahātmanah | siddhāśrama iti khyātah siddho yatra mahātapaḥ | 4. Abhibhūya cha devendram purā Vairochanir Balih | trailokya-rājyam bubhuje balotseka-madānvitah | 5. Tato Balau tadā yajñāṃ yajamāne bhayārditah | Indrūdayaḥ suraganā Vishṇum ūchur ihāśrame | 6. “Balir Vairochanir Vishṇo yajato 'sau mahābalaḥ | kāma-daḥ sarva-bhūtānām maharddhir asurādhipaḥ | 7. Ye chainam abhivarttante yāchitūra itastataḥ | yachcha yatra yathāvachcha sarvaṃ tebhyah prayachchhati | 8. Sa traṃ sura-hitārthāya māyū-yogam upāśritah | vāmanatvaṃ gato Vishṇo kuru kalyāṇam uttamam” | 9.<sup>117</sup>

polated. A comparison of verse 8 with verse 17 clearly shows that the latter must originally have followed immediately after the former. Compare the versions of the story given below from the Mahābhārata and the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, where the dwarf is said to have been the son of Kāśyapa and Aditi. This is also the parentage of Viṣṇu as one of the twelve Adityas.—See above, pp. 103 ff.

The following is a translation of the passage according to Schlegel's edition :

Viśvāmitra speaks : " 2. In this place, o large-armed Rama, Viṣṇu, the great ascetic, revered by the gods, dwelt for the purpose of performing austerity, and contemplation. 3. This, Rama, was the former hermitage of the magnanimous dwarf, renowned as the ' Hermitage of the Perfect,' where the great ascetic was perfected. 4. Formerly, Bali, the son of Virochana, after conquering the chief of the gods (Indra) enjoyed the empire of the three worlds, intoxicated with the increase of his power. 5. When Bali was then celebrating a sacrifice, Indra and the other gods, disturbed with apprehension, addressed Viṣṇu in this hermitage. 6. 'That mighty Bali, son of Virochana, o Viṣṇu, is now performing sacrifice,—he who grants the desires of all creatures, the prosperous lord of the Asuras. 7. Whatever suppliants wait upon him from whatever quarter, he bestows on them all whatever, wherever, and in whatever manner [they wish]. 8. Do thou, o Viṣṇu, assuming a magical state for the benefit of the deities, take the shape of a dwarf, and bring about our highest welfare.' [9. At this period, o Rama, the divine Kasyapa, luminous as fire, glowing, as it were, with splendour, attended by the goddess Aditi, 10. having completed an act of austerity which had lasted for a thousand years of the gods, celebrated [thus] the praises of the boon-bestowing Madhusūdana : 11. 'Through intense austerity I behold thee the supreme Spirit, whose essence is austerity, who art a congeries of austerity, the impersonation of austerity, whose wealth is austerity. 12. In thy body, lord, I behold this whole universe; thou art unbeginning and ineffable; to thee I have resorted as my refuge.' 13. Then Hari, gratified, spake to Kaśyapa, whose taint of sin had been purged away : 'Ask a boon; may good attend thee; thou art regarded by me as deserving a boon.' 14. Hearing these words of his, Kaśyapa, son of Marīchi, replied : 'Sinless lord, become the son of Aditi and myself. 15. Slayer of the Asuras, become the younger brother of Sakra (Indra). Thou oughtest to succour the gods who are oppressed with grief.' 16. Vishṇu, of mighty energy, was accordingly born of Aditi, shaded by an umbrella, in the form of a mendicant, resplendent with a drinking gourd, and a lock of hair on his crown]. 17. Thus addressed by the deities, Vishṇu took the form of a dwarf, and approaching the son of Virochana, begged three of his own paces. 18. Having obtained three paces, the thrice-stepping Vishṇu assumed a miraculous form, and with three paces took possession of the worlds. For with one step he occupied the whole earth, with a second the eternal atmosphere, and with a third the sky, o Rāghava. Having then assigned to the Asura Bali an abode in Pātāla (the infernal region), he gave the empire of the three worlds to Indra, after removing his enemy.

As the text of Gorresio's edition varies somewhat from that of Schlegel, I shall subjoin a translation of those parts of it which are different.

"2. This, Rāma, is the former hermitage of the magnanimous dwarf, called the 'Hermitage of the Perfect,' where the illustrious Vishṇu was perfected, 3. when performing a great act of austerity in the form of a dwarf, [at the time] when the empire of the three worlds had been taken away from Indra by Bali. [Verses 4-6 correspond word for word with those of Schlegel's edition]. 7. 'Now thou shouldst go in the form of a dwarf, and beg three paces, o large-armed; 8. For, proud of his valour and strength, after his victory over the lord of the world (Indra), he, when supplicated, will certainly give these three paces to thee [appearing] in the form of a dwarf. 9. For that lord of the Asuras fulfils the desires of all those persons who supplicate him with that view. 10. Thou, lord of the world, oughtest to give us back the empire of the three worlds which has been taken away from us, after thou hast conquered it by three vast strides. 11. This which is called the hermitage of the perfect, (or fulfilled), shall be [a place] where this work is fulfilled, when this work has been accomplished by thee, o possessor of real might.' Thus addressed by the deities, Vishṇu assumed the form of a dwarf, and approaching the son of Virochana, begged for three paces." (The rest corresponds with Schlegel's edition).

Mahābhārata, Śāntiparva, vv. 1294, 3 ff.—Virochanasya balavan

*Baliḥ putro mahāsuraḥ | abadhyaḥ sarva-lokānām sa-devāsura-rāxasām |

Vishṇu says to Narada: "The great Asura Bali, the strong son of Virochana, shall be indestructible by all beings, including gods, Asuras, and Rāxasas. He shall oust Sakra (Indra) from his kingdom. When the three worlds have been taken by Bali, and the lord of Sachi (Indra) has been put to flight, I shall be born as the twelve Adityas, the son of Kāśyapa and Aditi. I shall then restore his empire to Sakra of boundless energy; shall reinstate the gods in their several positions; shall place Bali in Pātāla, and [make] the eminent Dānava Bali indestructible by all the gods."

Having attained to the sky and the æther, and occupied the abode of the Ādityas, thou, o soul of all beings, hast overpassed the sun by thine own force. In these thousands of thy manifestations, o all-pervading Kṛishṇa, thou hast slain hundreds of Asuras who delighted in iniquity."

The next passage is a short notice of the same incarnation from the Vishṇu Purāṇa :

Vish. Pur. iii. 1 (p. 265 of Wilson's translation).—*Manvantare tu

Purandarāya trai lokyaṁ dattaṁ nihata-kaṇṭakam | “So when the Vaivasvata manvantara was arrived, Vishṇu was born as a dwarf, the son of Aditi and Kaśyapa. By this great being, after he had conquered these worlds by three paces, the three worlds were given to Purandara (Indra), their enemy being destroyed.”

The legend of Vishṇu’s incarnation as a dwarf is told in a greatly developed form in the fifteenth and following sections of the eighth Book of the Bhāgavata Purāṇa. As the whole narrative is too long to be quoted here in extenso, I shall give an abstract of the contents of these sections, translating in full some of those portions which appear the most important. The story commences thus :

Bhāgavata Purāṇa, viii. 15, 1.—Baleḥ pada-trayam bhūmek kasmād Harir ayūchata | bhūtvēśvaraḥ kṛpāṇa-val labdārtho ’pi babandha tam | 2. Etad veditum icchāmo mahat kautūhalaṁ hi naḥ | yajñēśvarasya pūrnasya bandhanaṁ chāpy anāgasah |

The king asks: “Why did Hari, the lord, whose wishes were satisfied, ask, like a poor man, three paces of land from Bali? and why did he bind him? 2. This we desire to know; and we have a great curiosity;—and also why an innocent being was bound by the perfect lord of sacrifice?” The sage Suka replies (verses 3 ff.) that after Bali had been deprived of life by Indra, he was restored by the Brāhmanas of the race of Bhrigu, who consecrated him for supreme dominion, and celebrated for him a viśvajit sacrifice, which had the virtue of enabling him to conquer all his enemies. He then sets out (verse 11) attended by a host of Daityas, to attack the capital of Indra, which is described with all its splendours and attractions. When Bali had invested the city (verse 23), Indra enquires of his spiritual preceptor how it is that his enemy has acquired this tremendous power, which appears altogether irresistible.

The preceptor replies (verses 15, 28 ff.): Jñāmi Maghavan śator unnater asya kāraṇam | śishyāyopabhṛtaṁ tejo Bhrigubhir brahma-vādibhiḥ | 29. Bhavad-vidho bhavān vāpi varjayitveśvaraṁ Harim | nāsyā śaktāḥ puraḥ sthātum kṛtāntasya yathā janāḥ | 30. Tasmād nilayam utsriḡya yūyaṁ sarve trivishṭapam | yāta kalam pratix-anto yataḥ śator viparyayah | 31. Esha vipra-balodarkah sampraty arjita-vikramah | teshām evāvamānena sānubandho vinānyo

to be the might imparted to their pupil by the Bhṛigus, the utterers of the Veda. 29. No one such as you, nor even you yourself, [nor any one] excepting only Hari the lord, is able to stand before him, as men [are unable to confront] death. 30. Wherefore do ye all, abandoning heaven, your abode, depart, expecting time, from which [shall come] the overthrow of your enemy. 31. He now reaps the fruits of Brahmanical power, and thus his prowess has become augmented. Through contempt of these same Brahmins, he shall perish with all his dependants."

(The prophecy here uttered in regard to the fall of Bali as a result of his disregard of the Brahmins, will hereafter be found to be fulfilled. See below, sect. 20, vv. 14 ff., p. 125).

Following the advice of their preceptor, Indra and the other gods abandoned heaven, and Bali took possession of the celestial capital, when the Bhṛigus celebrated for him a hundred āśvamedhas, (or horse-sacrifices).

The sixteenth section opens with an account of the distress of Aditi, the mother of the gods, at the discomfiture of her sons by the Daityas. She receives a visit from her husband the Prajāpati Kaśyapa, who makes various conjectures about the cause of her apparent unhappiness, of which (verse 15 f.) he receives an explanation. He then replies:

(Sect. 16, vv. 18 ff.)—Evam abhyarthito 'dityā Kaś tām āha smayann iva | aho māyā-balaṁ 'Vishnoḥ sneha-baddham idaṁ jagat | 19. Kva deho bhautiko 'nātmā kva chātmā prakṛiteḥ paraḥ | kasya ke pati-puttrādyā moha eva hi kāraṇam | 20. Upatishṭhasva Puruṣam bhagavantaṁ Janārdanam | sarva-bhūta-guhāvāsaṁ Vāsudevaṁ jagad-gurum | 21. Sa vidhāsyati te kāmān Harir dīnānukampanaḥ | amoghā bhagavad-bhaktir netereti matir mama |

18. "Being thus entreated by Aditi, Ka<sup>119</sup> (Kaśyapa) answers her, as it were smiling, 'O, the power of Vishnu's illusion! this world is bound by affection. 19. Where is this elemental body, which is not soul? and where is soul, which is superior to matter? (i.e. how great is the superiority of soul to the body!)<sup>120</sup> Who are the husband, or the sons, or other relatives, of any person?<sup>121</sup> (i.e. there are no such things as real relations); delusion alone creates them. 20. Betake thyself to Purusha, the divine Janārdana, who dwells in the heart of all creatures, Vāsudeva, the preceptor of the world. 21. Hari, who compassionates the afflicted, will fulfil thy desires: devotion to the lord, and that alone, is never fruitless; such is my opinion."

Aditi then asks how she is to worship Vishṇu in such a way as to obtain her desires, and receives from Kaśyapa an account (extending to the end of the section) of the milk ceremonial (payo-vrata) which she is to perform.

She accordingly celebrates the prescribed rite (sect. 17 ff.), when Hari, the primeval Purusha, appears to her in yellow vesture, with four arms, bearing his shell, discus, and club. She implores his succour, and receives an assurance that he has been gratified by her service, which shall not remain unfruitful. He goes on to say:

(Sect. 17, vv. 18 ff.)—Trayārchitāś chāham apatyā-guptaye payo-vratenānugūṇaṁ samīditāḥ | svāmśena putratvam upetya te sūtān gop-tāsmi Mārīcha-tapasy adhishṭhitāḥ | 19. Upadhāva patim bhadre prajāpatim akalmasham | mām cha bhārayatī patyāv evaṁrūpam avasthitam | 20. Naitat parasmā ākhyeyam prishṭayā 'pi kathañchana | sarvaṁ sam-padyate devi deva-guhyāṁ susaṁvṛitam | 21. Sūka uvācha | etāvad uktvā bhagavāṁs tatraivāntaradhiyata | Aditir durlabhaṁ labdhvā Harer janmātmāni prabhoḥ | upādhāvat patim bhaktyā parayā kṛitā-kṛitya-vat | 22. Sa vai samādhi-yogena Kaśyapas tad abudhiyata | pravishṭam ātmāni Harer aṁśaṁ hy avitatheṣaṇaḥ | 23. So 'dityāṁ vīryāṁ ādhatta tapasā chira-sambhṛitam | samāhita-manā rājan dūruny agniṁ yathā 'nilaḥ |

" 'Worshipped by thee with the milk ceremonial for the deliverance of thy offspring, and lauded according to my attributes, I shall, with a portion of myself, become thy son, and deliver thy children, presiding over the austerity of Mārīcha (Kaśyapa). 19. Wait, virtuous female, upon thy husband, the sinless Prajāpati, meditating on me, who in this form abides within him. 20. This must not in any way be disclosed by thee to any one, even though thou art asked. The secrets of the gods, o goddess, issue in good [only] when they are kept concealed.' 21. When the deity had said so much, he disappeared on the spot. Aditi, having obtained the [son], so hard to obtain, that Hari, the lord, should be born of her, waited on her husband with the greatest devotion, like one who had obtained her object. 22. Kaśyapa with certain intuition understood by the power of contemplation that a portion of Hari had entered into him. 23. With contemplative mind, he impregnated Aditi with the generative fluid which he had accumulated by long austerity, as the wind forces fire into wood."

I have already observed that Vishnu, in his character as one of the Ādityas, also, was the son of Kāśyapa and Aditi (see above, p. 115). The connection with the old legend is therefore here preserved.

The eighteenth section relates how Hari was born of Aditi, to the great delight of all creatures, and how he then took the form of a dwarf:

(Sect. 18, v. 12).—Yat tad vapur bhāti-vibhūṣaṇāyudhair avyakta-chid vyaktam adhārayad Hariḥ | babhūva tenaiva sa vāmano vaṭuḥ sam-paśyator divya-gatir yathā nataḥ | "While Hari, the invisible spirit, was invested with that body, which was manifested by splendour, by its ornaments, and by weapons, he, whose ways are supernatural, became with that very body, while [his parents] were looking on, a young dwarf, as an actor [changes his character]."

He afterwards went to attend the āsvamedha sacrifices celebrated for Bali by the Bhṛigus on the banks of the river Narmadā.<sup>122</sup> Bali welcomes the young Brahman dwarf with respect, offers him a seat, and washes his feet. The narrative then proceeds:

(Sect. 18, v. 28 ff.).—Tat-pāda-sauchaṁ jana-kalmashūpahaṁ sa dharma-vid mūrḍhny adhāt sumangalam | yad deva-devo Girīśaś chandra-maulir dadhāra mūrḍhnā parayā cha bhaktyā | 29. Balir uvācha | svāgataṁ te namas tubhyam brahman kiṁ karavāma te | brahmarshīnāṁ tapaḥ sākṣud manye tv ārya vapur-dharam | . . . . 32. Yad yad vaṭo vāñchasi tat pratīchha me tvām arthinam vipra-sutānutarkaye | gāṁ kāñchanaṁ guṇavad dhāma mṛṣiṣṭāṁ tathā 'nna-peyam uta vā vipra-kanyām | grāmān sampriddhāṁs turagān gajān vā rathāṁs tathā 'rhattama sampratīchha | 28. "Acquainted with duty, he placed upon his head the auspicious water with which the Brahman's feet had been washed, which removes the sins of men, and which Girīśa (Śiva), the god of gods, who wears the moon for a frontal ornament, bore on his head, with supreme devotion. 29. Bali said: 'Welcome to thee, reverence to thee, Brahman, what can we do for thee? honourable man, I regard thee as the visible, impersonated austerity of Brahman-sages. . . . .

32. Ask of me, youth, whatever thou desirest, (son of a Brahman, I conclude that thou art a suppliant), ask, most respectable man, a cow, pure gold, an embellished house, food and drink, or a Brahman's daughter, flourishing villages, horses, or elephants, and carriages.'"

In section nineteenth the dwarf answers Bali in a speech complimentary to himself and his ancestors, and craftily ends with the seemingly moderate demand of three paces of ground :

(Sect. 19, v. 16 ff.)—*Tasmāt tvatto mahīm īśhad vṛiṇe 'haṁ varadar-shabhāt | padāni trīṇi daityendra sammitānī padū mama | 17. "Wherefore I ask from thee, the chief of the bountiful, a small portion of ground, three paces, lord of the Daityas, measured by my step. 17. I desire nothing more from thee, the generous lord of the world. A wise man incurs no sin when he asks [only] as much as he needs. 18. Bali answered : 'Thy words, son of a Brahman, are such as be seem an old man. Thou art a youth, with the mind of a stripling, and like one ignorant regarding his own interest. 19. He is not wise who, having by words revered me, the sole lord of the worlds, asks me, the bestower of continents, for three paces of ground. 20. It is not fit that a man should come to me and make repeated requests : wherefore freely ask me for ground sufficient for thy subsistence.' 21. The deity replied : 'All the desirable objects in the three worlds cannot, o king, satisfy the man whose senses are unsubdued. 22. He who is not contented with three paces of ground will not be satiated even with a continent, and its nine varshas, since he will desire the gift of the seven continents.<sup>123</sup> 27. Wherefore I desire from thee, who art the chief of the bountiful, only three paces of ground. With so much as suffices for my maintenance I am complete.' Being thus addressed, Bali said, smiling, 'take what thou desirest;' and with the view of giving the land to the dwarf, he took a vessel of water."

Uśanas, however, Bali's priest and preceptor, recognizing Vishṇu in the dwarf, and knowing the god's designs, here interposes, and warns the monarch against granting the ground solicited :

(Sect. 19, v. 29 ff.)—Vishṇave xmām pradāsyantam Uśanā asure-śvaram | jānanś chikīrshitam Vishṇoḥ śishyam prāha vidām varaḥ | 30. Sukrāchāryya uvācha | Esha Vairochane sūxād bhagavān Vishṇur avyayaḥ | Kaśyapād Aditer jāto devānām kārya-sādhakah | 31. *Pratiśrutam
tvayaitasmai yad anartham ajānatā | na sādhu manye daityānām mahān
upagato 'nayaḥ |* 32. *Esha te sthānam aiśvaryyam śriyam tejo yaśaḥ
śrutam | dāsyaty āchhidya Sakrāya māyā-mānavako Hariḥ |* 33. *Tribhiḥ
kramair imān lokān viśva-kāyaḥ kramishyati | sarvasvām Vishṇave dattvā
mūḍha varttiśhyase katham |* 34. *Kramato gām padaikena dvitīyena
divam vibhoḥ | kham cha kāyena mahatā tārtyasya kuto gatiḥ |* 35. *Nishthām te narake manye hy apradūtuḥ pratiśrutam | pratiśrutasya yo
'nīśaḥ pratipādayitum bhavān |* 36. *Na tad dānam praśaṁsanti yena
vṛttir vipadyate | dānam yajñas tapaḥ karma loka vṛttimato yataḥ |*

29. "Uśanas, chief of the wise, knowing Vishṇu's intention, thus addresses his pupil, the chief of the Asuras, who was about to give the land to that deity: 30. 'This, o son of Virochana, is manifestly the divine, undecaying Vishṇu, born of Kaśyapa and Aditi, the fulfiller of the purposes of the gods. 31. That ill-advised promise which thou, unknowingly, hast made to him, is not, I consider, to the advantage of the Daityas;—a great error has been committed. 32. This illusory dwarf having bereft thee of thy place, dominion, prosperity, splendour, renown, and sacred knowledge, will give them to Sakra. 33. He whose body is the universe, will traverse these worlds in three strides; fool, where shalt thou abide, when thou hast given all thy possessions to Vishṇu? 34. Where shall there be room for the third pace of the all-pervading being when he has traversed the earth with one pace, the sky with a second, and [filled] the atmosphere with his vast body? 35. I think that thy abode shall be in hell, when thou art unable to give all that thou hast promised, since thou shalt not be master (so as to carry it out) of what thou hast promised. 36. Men do not approve that gift by which [the donor's] livelihood is ruined : for [it is understood] in the world that gifts, sacrifices, austerities, ceremonies, are only performed by those who have the means."

In the verses which follow it is apparently the preceptor's object to show that the monarch may consider himself as absolved by the necessities of the case from fulfilling his promise already given to the dwarf.

Bali, however, refuses (sect. 20, vv. 2 ff.) to break his promise, whatever consequences to himself may result. He is thereupon cursed by his preceptor for his disobedience :

(Sect. 20, vv. 14 ff.)—Evam āsraddhitaṁ śishyam anādeśa-karaṁ guruḥ | śasāpa daiva-prahitaḥ satyasandham manasvinam | 15. Dṛḍham paṇḍita-māny ajñāḥ stabdho 'sy asmad-upexayā | mach-ḥhāsanātigo yas tvam achirād bhraśyase śriyaḥ | 16. Eṣāṁ śaptaḥ sva-guruṇā satyād na chalito mahān | vāmanāya dadāv enām architvodaka-pūrvakam | 17. Vindhyāvalis tadā "gatya patnī jālaka-mālinī | ūninye kalaśaṁ haimam avanejany apām bhṛitam | 18. Yajamānaḥ svayaṁ tasya śrīmat-pāda-yugaṁ mudā | avanijyāvahad mūrdhni tad-apo viśca-pūvanīḥ |

14. "The preceptor, impelled by fate, cursed his disciple, thus devoid of faith and disobedient, yet wise and true to his promise; [saying], 15. 'Though thou regardest thyself as extremely learned, thou art ignorant and stubborn in thy contempt of us: but thou who transgressest my commandment, shalt soon fall from thy prosperous state.' 16. Though thus cursed by his preceptor, this great [monarch], not-departing from truth, gave this [earth] to the dwarf, after making an obeisance and pouring water [on his hand]. 17. Then his wife Vindhyāvali, wearing a necklace of pearls, approaching, brought a golden vessel filled with water for ablution. 18. Then the offerer of the sacrifice, after himself washing with delight the blessed feet [of the Brahman], bore upon his head the world-purifying water which had been so employed."

* This magnanimous act of Bali is applauded by the celestials, and rewarded by them with a shower of flowers, and by strains of music. Immediately, however, the body of the dwarf begins to expand :

(Sect. 20, v. 21).—Tad vāmanam rūpam avardhatādbhutam Harer anantasya guna-trayātmakam | bhūh kham diśo dyaur vivarāḥ payodhayaḥ tiryāṇ-nṛi-devā ṛishayo yad āsata | “That dwarfish body of the infinite Hari, consisting of the three qualities, increased miraculously, [that body] which composed the earth, the air, the points of the compass, the sky, the abysses, the oceans, brutes, men, gods, and rishis.”

A further account of this vast body, of the effect which the appearance of it produced on the Asuras, and other beings, is given in verses 22–32; and at length the strides of the deity are thus described :

(Sect. 20, v. 33).—Xitim padaikena Baler vichakrame nabhaḥ śarīrena diśascha bāhubhiḥ | padam dvitīyaṁ kramatas trivishṭapaṁ na vai tṛitīyāya tadīyam anv api | urukramasyūṅhrir upary upary atho maharjanābhyām tapasaḥ param gataḥ | “He traversed the earth of Bali with one pace; and [filled] the air with his body and the points of the compass with his arms. His second pace, as he strode, [occupied] the heaven; and not even the minutest fraction of it remained for a third pace. The foot of the wide-striding deity rose upwards and upwards, and then reached beyond the Mahar-, Jana-, and Tapo-lokas.<sup>124</sup>

The gods assemble (Sect. 21) to do homage to Hari on his victory, which they celebrate with great rejoicing, and which is proclaimed by the King of the bears :

(Sect. 21, vv. 8 ff.)—*Jāmbavān ṛixa-rūjas tu bheri-śabdair manojavah | vijayaṁ dixu sarvasu mahotsavam aghoshayat | 9. Mahīm sarvām hṛitām dṛishṭvā tri-pada-vyāja-yūchñayā | ūchuḥ sva-bharttur asurā dīxitasatyamarshitāḥ | 10. Na vā ayam brahma-bandhur Vishnur māyāvinām varah | dvija-rūpa-praticchanno deva-kāryyaṁ chikīrshati | 11. 8. “Jāmbavat, King of the bears, swift as thought, proclaimed this victory, the occasion of great festivity, with sound of kettledrums, in all the regions. Beholding the whole earth taken from their master

when consecrated for sacrifice, by an artful request for three paces of ground, the Asuras greatly incensed, exclaimed: 10. 'This is certainly not a petty Brahman, but Vishṇu, the chief of magicians; disguised under the form of a twice-born man, he seeks to accomplish the purposes of the gods. By this enemy in the form of a stripling suppliant, has been taken all the property of our master, who had laid down his sceptre on the sacrificial grass. 12. Untruth cannot be uttered by one who is always devoted to truth—especially when he is consecrated,—by one who is the friend of Brahmins, and compassionate. 13. Wherefore it is our duty to slay him, and obey our master;—so saying, the Asuras, followers of Bali, seized their weapons. 14. Against the wish of Bali, they all ran, infuriate, pikes and axes in hand, to slay the dwarf."<sup>125</sup>

This attack of the Asuras is, however, derided by the followers of Vishṇu, who kill some of them, and they are at length restrained by Bali, who points out that time and fate are at present unfavourable to his cause. Bali is then bound in the chains of Varuṇa, and reproached by Vishṇu for failing to fulfil his promise:

(Sect. 21, v. 26).—*Atha Tārxa-suto jñātvā Virāṭ prabhu-chikīrshitam | babandha Vāruṇaiḥ pāsair Baliṁ sautyē 'hani kratau | 27. <sup>125</sup> It will be observed that here the dwarf is still represented as having that shape, though he had been above described as assuming a superhuman form and filling all the worlds. Yet though he is spoken of as a Brahman dwarf, he is said to have had followers who easily defeated the Asuras of Bali.

the lord, bound Bali with the bonds of Varuṇa<sup>126</sup> at the sacrifice on the day of the Soma libation. 28. A great lamentation arose in all the quarters of the two worlds (heaven and earth), when the Lord of the Asuras was seized by the puissant Viṣṇu. 28. Him bound with the bonds of Varuṇa, whose prosperity was destroyed, but whose understanding was firm, and whose renown was vast, the divine dwarf thus addressed: 29. 'Asura, three paces of ground were given to me by thee: with two paces the entire earth has been traversed: find a place for the third. 30. This earth of thine extends as far as that [sun] warms with his beams, as far as the moon shines with the stars, as far as Parjanya rains. 31. With one pace I traversed the region of the earth, and [occupied] the air and regions with my body; and whilst thou wast looking on, I [traversed] the sky with a second [pace, filling] thy possessions with myself. 32. As thou hast not given what was promised, it is my pleasure that thou shalt dwell in the infernal regions; enter therefore thither, with the approbation of thy preceptor. 33. That man's desires are frustrated, and he falls downward, far from heaven, who after promising to a Brahman, does not deliver to him what he had solicited. 34. I have been deluded by thee, thinking thyself wealthy, when thou saidst 'I give.' Endure the infernal regions for some years as the penalty of that deceit.' "

Bali answers as follows (Sect. 22):

• (Sect. 22, v. 2).—*Yady uttama-śloka bhavān mameritaṁ vacho vyatīkaṁ sura-varyya manyate | karomy ritaṁ tad na bhavet pralambhanam pūdaṁ tṛtīyaṁ kuru śirśhaṁ me nijam | 3. 2. "If, renowned chief of the gods, you consider the word which I uttered to be deceitful, I [now make it true, or] I do what is sincere, and can be no deception,—place your third step on my head. 3. Fallen from my position, I fear not the infernal regions, nor binding in bonds, nor misfortune difficult to escape, nor loss of wealth, nor your restraint, so much as I am afflicted by a bad name."

• He then goes on to express his sense of his conqueror's superiority,

and submission to his fate. He is now visited and consoled by his grandfather Prahrāda. His wife Vindhyāvali next worships Viṣṇu; and then Brahmā intercedes in behalf of the Asura monarch. Viṣṇu, after making some general reflections, replies as follows :

(Sect. 22, v. 28).—*Īsha dānava-daityānām agraṇiḥ kīrtti-vardhanaḥ | ajaishīd ajayām māyām sīdān api na muhyati | 29. 28. "This chief of the Dānavas and Daityas, and enhancer of their renown, has conquered unconquerable Delusion : though dispirited, he is not bewildered. 29. Having lost his prosperity, fallen from his place, cast down and bound by his enemies, abandoned by his relations, involved in suffering, 30. reprehended and cursed by his preceptor, still, faithful to his obligation, he has not abandoned truth. [Though] duty has been inculcated by me in a deceitful fashion, this truthful being does not swerve from it. 31. He has [therefore] been elevated by me to a position to which even the immortals with difficulty attain : he shall be the Indra, supported by me, of the Sāvarni Manvantara. 32. Meanwhile let him occupy Sutala, formed by Viśvakarman, where, by my will, neither mental nor bodily pains, nor fatigue, nor weariness, nor discomfiture, nor diseases afflict the inhabitants."

(Sect. 23, v. 2).—Bali replies thus: Aho praṇāmāya kṛitaḥ samud-yamaḥ prapanna-bhaktārtha-vidhau samāhitaḥ | yallokapālais tvad-anugraho 'marair alabdha-pūrcō 'pasade 'sure 'rpitaḥ | 3. "O, even the effort made to adore thee succeeds in effecting the object of the devout man who seeks thee; seeing that thy favour, such as has not been before attained by the immortal guardians of the worlds, has been bestowed on me, a degraded Asura.' 3. Having thus spoken, and bowed down to Hari, to Brahmā, and to Bhava (Siva), Bali, being released, entered Sutala with joy, along with the Asuras. Viṣṇu now addresses Uśaniś the priest of Bali :

(Sect. 21, v. 13).—Athāhośanasam rājan Harir Nārdayaṇo 'ntike | āśnam pītvijām madhye sadasi brahma-vādinām | 14. Brahman santanu śishyasya karma-chhidraṁ vitanvataḥ | yat tat karmasu vaiśhāmyam brahma-dṛṣṭaṁ samam bhavet | 15. Sukra uvācha | Kutas tat-karma-vaiśhāmyaṁ yasya karmesvaro bhavān | yajñeśo yajñapurushaḥ sarva-bhāvena pūjitaḥ | 16. Mantratas tantrataś chhidraṁ deśa-kālārha-vas-tutaḥ | sarvaṁ karoti niśchhidram anusankīrttanaṁ tava | 17. Tathāpi vadato bhūman karishyāmy anuśāsanam | etach chhreyāḥ param puṁsām yat tavājñānupālanaṁ | 18. Suka uvācha | abhinandya Harer ājñām Uśanā bhagavān iti | yajña-chhidraṁ samādhatta Baler viprarshibhiḥ saha | 19. Evam Baler mahīm rājan bhixitvā vāmano Hariḥ | dadau bhrātre Mahendrāya tridivāṁ yat parair kṛitaṁ | 13. “Hari Nārāyaṇa then approaching Uśanas sitting among the priests, in an assembly of reciters of the Veda, thus addressed him: 14. ‘Brahman, rectify the irregularities of thy pupil in performing the ceremonial: whatever fault there is in any rite is removed if it be seen by a Brahman.’ 15. Sukra (Uśanas) replied: ‘How can there be any irregularity in that ceremony of which you are the lord, the lord of sacrifice, the sacrificial male [or victim], adored in every aspect? 16. Whatever defects there may be in respect of texts, of order, of place, of time, of persons, or of materials,—the mere celebration of thee obliterates them all. 17. Nevertheless, great being (?), I shall fulfil the injunction which thou utterest: this is the highest happiness of men, to obey thy commands.’ 18. Having assented to the order of Hari, the divine Uśanas with the Brahman-rishis, rectified the irregularities of Bali’s sacrifice. 19. Having in this manner begged the earth from Bali, the dwarf Hari gave [back] to his brother Mahendra<sup>127</sup> the heaven which had been taken from him by his enemies.”

Though the whole tenor of this legend, and, indeed, of the entire Bhāgavata Purāṇa, represents Vishṇu, of whom the dwarf was an incarnation, as the supreme deity, it is now rather strangely said that Brahmā and the other deities made the dwarf governor of all things:

"Brahmā, the lord of the Prajāpatis, together with the gods, rishis, Pitris, with Daxa, Bhṛigu, Aṅgiras, and other lords of the earth, with Kumāra, and Bhava, 21. with a view to the gratification of Kaśyapa and Aditi, and the good of all creatures, made the dwarf master of the worlds and of the guardians of the worlds. 22, 23. He made Upendra (Vishṇu) master of the Vedas, of all the gods, of righteousness, renown, prosperity, blessings, and ceremonies, and lord of heaven and final liberation, in order that he might have command of all things. Then all creatures rejoiced exceedingly."

The section concludes with the verse I have already quoted above (p. 62) in glorification of Vishṇu, followed by a statement of the benefits resulting from hearing the legend of the dwarf incarnation. ✓

From the passages adduced in the preceding pages, it is clear that Vishṇu is not regarded as the supreme god either in the Rig-veda, or in the Brāhmanas. In these ancient works he is considered only as one of the gods, and not as superior to the rest. It is also manifest from the passage I have cited from the Nirukta (xii. 19) in p. 55 that neither Yāska himself, nor Sākapūṇi and Aurnavābha the ancient interpreters of the Veda, whose opinions he quotes, assigned to Vishṇu any higher rank than they did to the other members of the Indian Pantheon. From another text of the Nirukta (vii. 5) which I have cited in p. 56, it appears that the old expounders of the Veda regarded the deities worshipped in the Veda as mainly represented by three gods of primary importance, and that of these Vishṇu is not one. As the passage from which this extract was made is of great interest and importance, I shall quote it here at length :

4. "We shall now enquire who are the deities in those hymns in which no deity is indicated. They are addressed to the god to whom the sacrifice or part of a sacrifice [in which they are employed] belongs. The hymns which are unconnected with a sacrifice are, according to the ritualists (yājñikāḥ), addressed to Prajāpati; according to the etymologists (nairuktāḥ), they are spoken in praise of men.<sup>128</sup> Or in such cases the deity may be an optional one, or a class of deities: for it is a very prevalent practice to [classify rites] as those which have a god, a guest, or a progenitor, respectively, for their deity. In reference to what has been said that hymns are either (1) sacrificial, or (2) addressed to a god, [it is remarked that] beings other than gods are lauded as gods, as e.g. the objects beginning with horses and ending with herbs (see Nighaṇṭu, 5, 3, and Nir. ix. 1-28), and also the eight pairs (see Nighaṇṭu, 5, 3, and Nir. ix. 35 ff.) But let him [the student] not regard any matters relating to the gods as if they were accidental: this may be clearly seen. Owing to the greatness of the deity, the one Soul is lauded in many ways. The different gods are members of the one Soul. And [the learned] say that the rishis address their hymns according to the numerous natures of the [celestial] existences; and [further] from the universality of the definition of their nature [these existences] are produced from each other, and possess the natures of each other (compare Nir. xi. 23, quoted above, p 11); they are produced from the ceremonial; they are produced from soul. It is soul that is their car, soul their steeds, soul their weapon, soul their arrows, soul is a god's all.

5. There are three deities according to the etymologists (nairuktāḥ), viz. Agni, whose place is on earth, Vāyu, or Indra, whose place is in the atmosphere, and Sūrya (the Sun), whose place is in the sky. These [deities] receive many designations in consequence of their greatness, or from the diversity of their functions, as [the appellations of] hotṛi, adhvaryu, brahman, and udgātṛi, are applied to one and the same person. Or the gods in question may all be distinct, for the praises addressed to them, and also their appellations, are distinct. As [regards the view that] this [diversity of appellation] arises from difference of function [and not from distinctness of personality, it may be objected that] a plurality of individuals also may each fulfil their separate allotted functions. In this latter case, a community of locality, and of possession, must be remarked. Thus, men, beasts, and gods, occupy the earth; here is community of place. Community of possession, too, is seen in such instances as that of the joint occupation of the earth both by Parjanya, and by Vāyu, and Āditya, and of the rest of the world by [Vāyu, Āditya, and] Agni. Here the case is like that of a kingdom and its inhabitants, (i.e. the one realm is occupied by different classes of persons [?]).

6. We have now to consider the forms of the gods. One [mode of representation in the hymns makes] them resemble men: for they are praised and addressed as intelligent beings. They are also celebrated with members such as those of men. (An instance is here given where Indra is so introduced.) They are also [celebrated] with the accompaniment of possessions such as those of men; . . . and with functions of a similar character to the human. . . .

7. Another [mode of representation makes them] unlike men. But further, that which is seen [of them] is unlike what is human, as Fire, Air, Sun, Earth, Moon. As [regards the assertion] that 'they are praised as intelligent beings,'—it is also true that senseless things are in like manner praised, as the objects beginning with dice and ending with herbs (Nigh. 5, 3; Nir. 3, 7 ff.) Again, as [regards the remark] that the gods are 'celebrated with members such as those of men,'—the same thing is done in the case of senseless objects, as stones are celebrated in the words, 'they cry with their green mouths' (R. V. x. 94, 2). Further, the same is the case as [regards the remark] that the gods are [celebrated] 'with the accompaniment of possessions such as those of men;' for a river is praised in the words, 'Sindhu has yoked his beautiful car drawn by steeds' (R. V. x. 75, 9). And the same thing applies to the remark that the gods are described with 'functions similar to those of men;' for stones are lauded in the words, 'even before the priests they eat food of melted butter' (R. V. x. 94, 2). Or the gods may be described under both forms (either as having, or as not having, a human form). Or, again, when they are described as similar to men, this may be merely in their character of actors in a particular function, as sacrifice is only the [temporary] act of the man who offers it. This is the condition of all narrations.<sup>129</sup>

8. It has been declared above (par. 5) that there are three deities. We shall now declare the various objects which are associated with their worship. Now these which follow are connected with Agni's worship: viz. this world, the morning oblation, spring, the gāyatri metre, the trivṛt stoma, the rathantara sâma, the classes of gods who in the Nighaṇṭu are enumerated in the first sphere, with the goddesses Agnāyī, Prithivī, and Ilā. Then Agni's function is to carry away the oblations, and to bring the gods: and whatever has reference to things visible (?)

is the work of Agni. Then the deities who are lauded along with him are Indra, Soma, Varuṇa, Parjanya, and the seasons. There is an oblation made to Agni and Vishṇu in common; but in the ten books [of the R. V.] there is no rich which praises these two gods together. There is also an oblation made to Agni and Pūshan in common, but no conjoint laudation. . . . .

10. The following are the objects connected with Indra's worship: viz. the atmosphere, the midday oblation, summer, the trishtubh metre, the pañchadaśa stoma, the bṛihat sâma, the classes of gods and the females who are enumerated in the second sphere. Indra's function is to bestow moisture, to slay Vṛitra: and all exertions of force are the work of Indra. The deities lauded along with him are Agni, Soma, Varuṇa, Pūshan, Bṛhaspati, Brahmanaspati, Parvata, Kutsa, Vishṇu, and Vāyu. Further, Mitra is lauded along with Varuṇa, Soma with Pūshan and Rudra, Pūshan with Agni, and Parjanya with Vāta.

11. The following are the objects connected with Āditya's (the Sun's) worship: heaven, the third oblation, the rainy season, the jagati metre, the saptaśadaśa stoma, the vairūpa sâma, the classes of gods and the females who are enumerated in the highest sphere. The function of Āditya is to draw up moisture, and to retain it by his rays: and whatever is mysterious is the work of Āditya. He is praised along with the Moon, the Air (Vāyu), and the Year.

[The student] is to class the remaining seasons, metres, stomas, and priṣṭhas, as objects connected with the service of the different gods, under [one or other of the three] spheres as above arranged. Autumn, the anushtubh metre, the ekaviṃśa stoma, and the vairāja sâma, belong to the sphere of earth. The early winter, the pankti metre, the triṇava stoma, and the śākvara sâma, belong to the atmospheric sphere. The later winter, the aticchandas metre, the trayastrinśa stoma, and the raivāta sâma, are connected with the celestial worship."<sup>130</sup>

It will be observed that in the preceding classification of the gods, the principal places are assigned to Agni, Vāyu, or Indra, and Sūrya, who appear therefore to have been regarded in the time of Yāska, as the triad of deities in whom the supreme spirit was especially revealed. Vishṇu is only alluded to as one of the deities who were worshipped conjointly with Indra; and Rudra is only mentioned as worshipped along with Soma. The conjunction of Brahmā, Vishṇu and Rudra as the triple manifestation of the deity (trimūrti) would therefore appear to have been unknown to Yāska.

It is true that his object in the passage I have cited, as well as in other parts of his work, is to classify the Vedic deities; and it may be urged that the Puranic mythology (of which the trimūrti of Brahmā, Vishṇu and Siva is a part) might have grown up along with the Vedic. It may, however, I think, be objected to this view, that if Yāska had been cognizant of any other than the Vedic mythology (at least if he had attached any authority to any other), he would not have failed to make some reference to the latter, and would have endeavoured to blend and reconcile it with the former. As we find no attempt of this kind in his work, we must conclude either that the Puranic mythology had no existence in his day, or that he regarded it as undeserving of any attention.

The following passages from the Bṛihaddevatā, in which the views of Yāska are repeated, are derived from Weber's Ind. Stud. i. 113 f.:

Bṛihaddevatā, i. 13.—Bhavad-bhūta[sya bha]vyasya jaṅgama-sthāvarasya cha | asyaike sūryam evaikam prabhavam pralayaṁ viduḥ | asataś cha sataś chaiva yonir esha Prajāpatiḥ | yad axaram cha vāchyaṁ (?) cha yathaiva Brahma śāsvatam | kṛitvaisha hi tridhā "tmānam eshu lokeshu tishṭhati | Ibid. i. 14 . . . tisra eveha devatāḥ | etāsām eva mähātmyād nāmānyatvaṁ vidhiyate | tach cha sthāna-vibhāgena tatra tatreha drīsyate | i. 13: "Some consider Sūrya (the Sun) to be the only cause of the production and destruction of this [universe] present, past, and future, moving and stationary. And this lord of creatures (Prajāpati) is the source of nonentity and entity, which is undecaying and describable (?) like the eternal Brahma. He, having made himself threefold, abides in these worlds. i. 14: . . . There are but three deities; and from their greatness, a variety of names is assigned [to each of them]. This is seen in different instances according to the distinction of places."

From the passage cited above (p. 26 f.) from Manu, it appears that the word Nārāyaṇa is there applied to Brahmā and that no mention whatever is made of Vishṇu, as contained in the question. In fact Vishṇu is only once mentioned<sup>131</sup> by Manu, viz. in the following verse xii. 121:

Manasindum diśaḥ śrotre krānte Viṣṇum bale Haram | vāchy Agnim Mītram utsarge prajāne cha Prajāpatim | “ [He may contemplate] in his mind the Moon (Indu), in his hearing the regions, in his going Viṣṇu, in his strength Hara, in his voice Agni, in excretion Mitra, and in procreation Prajāpati.” Viṣṇu is not spoken of here as in any way superior to the other gods with whom he is associated.

In the text quoted above (p. 29) from the older recension of the Rāmāyaṇa too, it is Brahmā who is spoken of not only as the creator, but also as the god who raised up the earth from the bottom of the ocean.

Again, those texts of the Mahābhārata and Purāṇas (see above, pp. 103 ff.) where Viṣṇu is described as one of the twelve Ādityas, confirm the conclusion that he must have been originally looked upon as a deity of no more elevated rank than the other sons of Aditi; and the circumstance that he is in some of those passages distinguished from the rest of the gods by epithets expressive of some higher characteristics is easily explicable, as I have already remarked, by the supposition that those passages have been composed or modified at a period when his superiority had come to be recognized.

In some of the earlier passages of the Rāmāyaṇa also, where Viṣṇu is introduced, though he is treated as a deity of higher rank than Indra and others (with whom he had been originally, at most, on a footing of equality), yet he is not designated by the same sort of epithets which are applied to him in the Viṣṇu and Bhāgavata Purāṇas, and in some parts of the Mahābhārata, or identified with the supreme deity, as in these last named works. In proof of this I adduce the following passage from the Rāmāyaṇa, i. 14, 1 ff. (Schlegel's edition):

"Then that sage, skilled in the Veda, having meditated for a little on

to the king: 'I shall perform for thee another sacrifice, celebrated according to rule with the texts enjoined in the Atharva-śiras, to obtain for thee a son. The self-subdued son of Vibhāṇḍaka, desiring the king's welfare, then began to perform the sacrifice for the attainment of his desire. The gods, with the Gandharvas, Siddhas, and Munis, had previously come thither to receive their portions [of the sacrifice], both Brahmā, lord of the deities, Sthānu (Maḥādeva), the lord Nārāyaṇa<sup>132</sup> (Vishṇu), and the divine Indra in visible presence, surrounded by the host of Maruts. He (Rishyasringa thus) supplicated the gods who had come, desiring their shares, to the great āsvamedha sacrifice [described in the preceding section] of that high-souled king: 'This King Daśaratha, desiring a son, has performed austerity, and possessed with faith, has worshipped you with an āsvamedha. Longing for a son, he is also prepared to celebrate another sacrifice. Ye ought, therefore, to show favour to him, who is anxious for a son; and with joined hands, I entreat you all on his behalf. Let him have four sons, renowned in the three worlds.' The gods said to the rishi's son whose hands were joined, 'So be it. Thou, Brahman, art deserving of honour from us, and so especially is the king. The lord of men shall obtain the highest object of his desire by means of this sacrifice.' Having thus spoken, the gods, headed by Sakra (Indra), then disappeared.

"Having duly assembled in that abode,<sup>133</sup> these gods then addressed a word to Brahmā, the creator of the world: 'A Rāxasa named Rāvaṇa, having obtained a boon from thee, o Brahmā, in his pride harasses us all, and the great rishis devoted to austerity. For, o lord, a boon was formerly granted to him voluntarily by thee when well-pleased, viz. Thou shalt be indestructible by gods, Dānavas or Yaxas. Obedient to thy words, we endure everything at his hands. This lord of the Rāxasas vexes the three worlds by his acts of cruelty . . . 19. We are therefore in great fear of this Rāxasa of horrible aspect. Thou, lord, oughtest to imagine some device for his slaughter.' Being thus addressed by all the deities, [Brahmā], after reflection, thus spoke to them: 'O, this device has been imagined [by me] for the slaughter of that malignant being. He said, *Let me be indestructible by Gandharvas, Yaxas, gods, Dā-

<sup>133</sup> It seems as if there was something left out here, as no "abode" has been mentioned before. Vishṇu, too, ought to have been among the gods, as he is not said to have separated from the others, and yet his arrival is afterwards mentioned below.

avas and Rāxasas;" when I replied, "Be it so." But despising men, the Rāxasa made no mention of them. He must therefore be slain by a man: no other death is possible for him.' Having heard this acceptable word spoken by Brahmā, the gods, headed by Śakra, were altogether delighted. In the meantime the glorious Viṣṇu arrived, bearing in his hand the shell, discus, and club, in yellow garments, lord of the world, mounted on Garuḍa, like the Sun on a cloud, with an armlet of refined gold, adored by the chief of the deities. After lauding him with prostrations, all the gods said: 'Thou, Madhusūdana, art he who removes the affliction of the afflicted worlds. Wherefore we, afflicted, beseech thee be our refuge, o Achyuta (unfalling).' Viṣṇu said to them, 'Tell me what I shall do.' Hearing this answer of his, the gods again said: 'A king named Daśaratha has performed great austerity, and celebrated an aśvamedha sacrifice, desirous of offspring, for he is childless. Do thou, Viṣṇu, according to our appointment, take upon thee his sonship. Making thyself fourfold, do thou become the offspring of his three wives who resemble Hṛī, Śrī, and Kīrtti (Modesty, Prosperity, and Renown). Having then become man, do thou slay in battle Rāvana, the powerful enemy of the worlds, who is indestructible by the gods. . . . 34. Thou, god, vexer of thy foes, art the highest refuge of us all; resolve to destroy in the world of men the enemies of the deities.' The manifested lord Nārāyaṇa, being thus appointed by the gods," replies by asking for further explanations in regard to the occasion which demanded his intervention. This explanation the gods give and say, that he alone of all the celestials can kill the wicked one (tvatto hi nānyas tam pāpāṁ śakto hantuṁ divaukasām). Viṣṇu, then, "the lord of the gods" (devēśa), "the most excellent of the immortals" (tridaśa-puṅgava), "adored by all the worlds" (sarva-loka-namaskṛita), reassures the deities, promises to slay Rāvana, and to reign on earth for eleven thousand years.

I have said that the representation given of Viṣṇu in the preceding passage is of a different character from that which we find in writings of a later age. But it is not certain that even this passage formed part of the Rāmāyaṇa, as it originally existed. I extract the following remarks from "Lassen's Indian Antiquities," vol. i. p. 488, in regard to the interpolations which he supposes to have been made in the Rāmāyaṇa and Mahābhārata:

“It is true that in the Epic poems Rāma and Krishna appear as incarnations of Vishnu, but they at the same time come before us as human heroes, and these two characters (the divine and the human) are so far from being inseparably blended together, that both of these heroes are for the most part exhibited in no other light than other highly gifted men,—acting according to human motives and taking no advantage of their divine superiority. It is only in certain sections which have been added for the purpose of enforcing their divine character that they take the character of Vishnu. It is impossible to read either of these two poems with attention, without being reminded of the more modern character of such sections as ascribe a divine character to the heroes, and of the unskilful manner in which these passages are often introduced; and without observing how loosely they are connected with the rest of the narrative, and how unnecessary they are for its progress.”<sup>134</sup>

In p. 489, note, he remarks more particularly: “As regards the Rāmāyaṇa, Mr. von Schlegel has often observed to me that the chapters in which Rāma is conceived of as an incarnation of Vishnu, might be entirely omitted without injuring the connexion of the story. In fact, at the point where the incarnation of Vishnu in the four sons of Dasaratha is described (Rām. i. 14 ff.), the proper great sacrifice is already concluded, and the priests have all been presented with gifts at its close, when the new sacrifice is commenced, at which the gods appear, then withdraw, and now for the first time propose to Vishṇu to become incarnate. If this had been an original portion of the story, the gods would certainly have considered the matter sooner, and the ceremonial of sacrifice would have proceeded without interruption. In the same book, ch. 74, 75, a scene with the earlier [or Paraśu-] Rāma is suddenly interpolated, in order that he may be made to declare the new Rāma to be Vishṇu."—p. 469.

An examination of the earlier portions of the Rāmāyana seems to confirm the opinion of Schlegel that the 14th and following sections which describe the miraculous births of Rāma and his brothers as incarnations of Vishṇu, are additions interpolated at a later date in the original poem. It appears from various passages which I shall cite from the 8th and following sections, that the aśvamedha or horse-sacrifice was instituted for the express purpose of procuring progeny for Daśaratha. But if this be so, what necessity was there for celebrating the fresh ceremony, alluded to at the beginning of section 14 as a putrīyā ishti, for the same purpose? The passages to which I allude are the following :

Rām. i. 8, 1 ff.—Tasya tv evam-prabhūvasya dhūrmikasya mahātmanah | sūtārtham tapyamānasya nāsīd vaṁśa-karah sutaḥ | tasya chintayato buddhir utpanneyam mahāmataḥ | sūtārtham vāji-medhena kimarthaṁ na yajāmy aham | suniśchitām matiṁ kṛitvā yashṭarye vasudhādhipaḥ | “But a son to prolong his race was not born to this king so mighty, and righteous, and great, though he performed intense austerities for that purpose. As this wise man reflected, the idea arose in his mind, ‘why do I not celebrate a horse-sacrifice to obtain a son?’ Having then formed this fixed opinion that he ought to sacrifice, the king, etc.”

Again, in Sect. 11, 1, it is said: Atha kālē vyatikrānte śisīre tad-anantaram | vasanta-samaye prāpte rājā yashṭum mano dadhe | tataḥ prasādyā śirasā taṁ vipraṁ deva-varchasam | yajñāya varayāmāsa sātānārthaṁ kulasya vai | “Then when the winter had passed, and the spring had arrived, the king set his mind upon sacrificing. Having then propitiated, by [bowing] his head, that Brahman of divine splendour, he solicited him to [perform] a sacrifice for the prolongation of his race.”

Then after calling his spiritual advisers, Vāmadeva, Javali, Vasishṭha, etc., he says to them (v. 8): Mama tātāpyamānasya putrārthaṃ nāsti vai sukham | tad ahaṃ haya-medhena yajeyam iti me matiḥ | tad-arthaṃ yashtum ichhāmi haya-pūrveṇa karmaṇā | “I get no satisfaction, though I perform intense austerity for a son. It is therefore my resolution to celebrate a sacrifice in which a horse is the first victim.”

We are again told (v. 20):

Tātaḥ sa gatvā tāḥ patnīr narendro hṛdayaṅgamāḥ | uvācha dīxām viś-ata yajye 'haṃ suta-kāraṇāt | “Then going to his beloved wives, the king said to them, ‘Enter upon a course of consecration; I am about to sacrifice for a son.’”

And at the beginning of the 12th section it is said: Punaḥ prāpte vasante tu pūrṇaḥ saṃvatsaro 'bhavat | prasavārtham gato yashtum haya-medhena vīryavān | “Then, when the spring arrived, a year had elapsed, and the heroic king went to celebrate a horse-sacrifice for the sake of offspring.”

Preparations are then made for the sacrifice (sect. 12), and it is duly celebrated (sect. 13). The queen, Kauśalya, “through desire of a son,” remains in close contact with the slaughtered horse for one night (13, 36: Patatrinā tadā sārddham susṭhītena cha chetasā | avasād rājanīm ekām Kauśalyā putra-kāmyayā), and the other two queens beside her (v. 3, 7).<sup>135</sup>

The conclusion of the sacrifice is thus recorded at the end of section 13, vv. 54 ff.:

Daxiṇāḥ parigrihyātha supṛīta-mānasā dvijāḥ | ūchur Daśarathaṃ tatra kāmāṃ dhyāyeti vai tadā | tato 'bravīd Rishyaśṛṅgaṃ rājā Daśarathas tadā | kulasya vārddhanaṃ tat tu karttum arhasi suvrata | tatheti sa cha rājanam uvācha dvija-sattamaḥ | bhaviṣhyanti sutā rājānś chat-vāras te kulodakah | “Having received the gifts with great gratification, the Brahmans then said to Daśaratha, ‘Think of the object, you desire.’ The king then said to Rishyaśṛṅga, ‘Thou oughtest, saint, to effect that increase of my race.’ The most excellent of Brahmans replied, ‘So be it; king, there shall be to thee four sons, the continuators of thy race.’”

(p. 138), that Rishyaśringa, after thinking over the preceding reply, offers to celebrate another sacrifice with texts from the Atharva-śiras, in order to procure offspring for the king; and proceeds accordingly to do so, though, in striking contrast to the particular description given of the aśvamedha, no details of this additional ceremony are supplied. We are then told (verse 4) that the gods had previously come to the aśvamedha sacrifice, to obtain their shares of the oblations, and that Rishyaśringa now tells them that the king had performed austerity in order to obtain offspring, that he had also celebrated an aśvamedha sacrifice, and was now about to perform another rite. The necessity for this second sacrifice does not appear; it seems strange that a ceremony of such importance as the aśvamedha should be insufficient; there appears to be no reason why the gods should not have been told at first, on that occasion, that the king was anxious for a son, since that was the very object for which the first sacrifice was offered; and that this communication should have been reserved till the commencement of the second sacrifice.

In section 15 we are told that Viṣṇu, considering how he shall fulfil his promise to the gods, makes himself fourfold, and chooses Daśaratha for his human parent. He then, after respectfully addressing Brahmā, disappears from heaven, and when Daśaratha is offering the second sacrifice for progeny, the god issues forth from the fire in the form of a glorious being, calling himself a son of Prajāpati (prajāpatiyaṁ naram), and bearing a large vessel full of nectar. This nectar he desires Daśaratha to administer to his wives, who would then bear sons. Viṣṇu then disappears.

In section 19 the birth of Daśaratha's sons, twelve months after the conclusion of the sacrifice, is related (tato yajñe samāpte tu ritūnām śhaṭ samatyayuh | tataścha dvādaśe māse ityādi). After specifying the month, day, and planetary influences under which Rāma was born, the writer proceeds: . . . . . *Jagannāthaṁ sarva-loka-namaskṛitam | Kauśalyā 'janayat Rāmaṁ divya-laxaṇa-saṁyutam | Kauśalyā sūsubhe tena putren-āmita-tejasā | yathā 'dhipena devānām Aditir Vājra-pūṇinā | [* bhavāya sa hi lokānām Rāvanasya badhāya cha | Viṣṇor vīryārddhato yajñe Rāmo rājīva-lochanah | Bharato nāma Kaikeyyām yajñe satya-parākramah | sāsād Viṣṇoś chaturbhūgaḥ sarvaiḥ samudita-guṇaiḥ | atha Laxmaṇa-Satrughṇau Sumitrā 'janayat sutau | d. . . . bhakti mahotsāham . . .*

sārpe jātau tu Saumitrī kulire 'bhyadīte ravau |*

“Kauśalyā bore Rāma, the lord of the universe, adored by all worlds, distinguished by divine marks. Kauśalyā derived lustre from that son of boundless might, as Aditi did from the Thunderer, the lord of the gods. [*For the lotus-eyed Rāma was produced from the half of Vishṇu's virile power, for the good of the world and the slaughter of Rāvaṇa. Bharata, of genuine valour, was born of Kaikeyī, manifest as the fourth part of Vishṇu, endowed with all virtues. Then Sumitrā brought forth two sons, of strong devotion and great energy, Laxmaṇa and Śatrughna, possessing (each) the half (of the fourth part) of Vishṇu]. Now Bharata, of clear understanding, was born under Pushya (the eighth lunar mansion) under the sign of the fishes; while the sons of Sumitrā were born under the [ninth] lunar mansion of the serpents, when the sun had entered into Cancer.”

If the supposition of Schlegel that the 13th and following sections are interpolated, be correct, it is quite conceivable that the verses of the section before us describing Daśaratha's sons as portions of Vishṇu, which I have marked with an asterisk and included in brackets, may also have been interpolated, as they can be spared without detriment to the connexion; and if they are retained, the births of Bharata, Laxmaṇa, and Śatrughna, are related twice. In that case the epithets “lord of the universe,” and “adored by all worlds,” which occur in the first of the verses I have quoted, may have been afterwards substituted for some of a less magnificent character which stood there before. And in fact, if Rāma was originally regarded as an incarnation of Vishṇu, it does not appear so suitable to compare his birth to that of Indra (a personage of less dignity than Vishṇu), as is done in one of the verses which I name to be ancient, and genuine.

In the section of the Rāmāyaṇa, i. 75, we are told that Rāma was born to Kaśyapa, who related to him a fight which had taken place between Vishṇu and Mahādeva. Two celestial bows, he says, were given to him, the one by Śivakarmaṇ, of which one was given by the gods to Mahādeva, the other to Vishṇu. The narrative then proceeds (14 ff.):

Vishṇoś cha balābala-nirixat | abhiprāyaṁ tu viṇāya devatānām Pitā-
mahah | virodhāṁ janayāmāsa tayoh satyavatām varah | virodhe tu mahad*

yuddham abhavad roma-harshanam | Sitikanṭhasya Viṣṇoś cha paraspara-jayaishinoh | tadā tu jrimbhitam śaivaṁ dhanur bhīma-parākramam | hūṅkāreṇa Mahādevaḥ stambhito 'tha trilochanaḥ | devais tadā samāgamyā sarshi-saṅghaiḥ sa-chāranaiḥ | yāchitau praśamaṁ tatra jagmatus tau surottamau | jrimbhitam tad dhanur dṛishṭvā śaivaṁ Viṣṇu-parākramam | adhikam menire Viṣṇuṁ devāḥ sarshi-gaṇās tathā | dhanū Rudras tu saṅkruddho Videheshu mahāyaśāḥ | Devarātasya rājarsher dadau haste sa-sāyakam | idam tu Vaiṣṇavaṁ Rāma dhanuḥ para-puraṇjayaṁ | Richike Bhārgave prādād Viṣṇuḥ sa nyāsam uttamam | "The gods then all made a request to Brahmā, desiring to find out the strength and weakness of Sitikanṭha (Mahādeva) and Viṣṇu. Brahmā, most excellent of the true, learning the purpose of the gods, created enmity between the two. In this state of enmity a great and terrible fight ensued between Sitikanṭha and Viṣṇu, each of whom was eager to conquer the other. Śiva's bow of dreadful power was then relaxed, and the three-eyed Mahādeva was arrested by a muttering. These two eminent deities being entreated by the assembled gods, rishis, and Chāranas, then became pacified. Seeing that the bow of Śiva had been relaxed by the prowess of Viṣṇu, the gods and rishis esteemed Viṣṇu to be superior. Then the illustrious Rudra, incensed, gave the bow and arrows into the hand of the royal rishi Devarāta [who dwelt] among the Videhas. But this, Rāma, is the bow of Viṣṇu, which vanquishes hostile cities. Viṣṇu gave this excellent deposit to Richika, the descendant of Bhṛigu." From him it came to Jamadagni, father of Paraśurāma, from whom the latter got it. Paraśurāma asks Rāma to bend it, if he can. Rāma bends the bow, fits an arrow on the string, and tells Paraśurāma that he will not shoot at him, because he is a Brahman. Paraśurāma confesses Rama's superiority (sect. 76, vv. 17 ff.)

In whatever light the author of these lines may really have looked upon Viṣṇu, whether as identical with the supreme Spirit, the passage itself contains no epithet or expression which necessitates interpretation. At the same time it is to be observed that in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa (see Wilson's trans. pp. 594 ff.) the Harṣa Purāṇa (see Wilson's trans. pp. 183 and 184), and the Bhāgavata Purāṇa (x., 64th and 65th sections), which indubitably regard Viṣṇu as the supreme Deity, also relate a combat between him and Mahādeva. There is no doubt, however, that the 119th section of the Yuddha Kāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa, which I now proceed to quote from the text of the recently published Calcutta edition, distinctly speaks of Rāma as an incarnation of the supreme Spirit. This Calcutta text, though it follows the Devanāgarī recension of Upper India, does not, in this section, differ materially, except in the arrangement of the verses, from that of Gorresio. I should judge from the nature of the epithets which are here applied to Viṣṇu, that this chapter, as it now stands, could not have formed part of the original Rāmāyaṇa. In the preceding part of the poem it had been related that Sītā, after being recovered by Rāma on the defeat and death of Rāvana, had been suspected of unchastity by her husband, and had in consequence entered the fire. The 119th section then goes on thus :

“Then the righteous Rama, dejected, on hearing the words of those who thus spoke, meditated for a moment, with his eyes disturbed by tears. Then King Kuvera, and Yama with the Pitris, and Indra, lord of the gods, and Varuṇa, lord of the waters, and the glorious three-eyed Mahādeva, whose ensign is a bull, and Brahmā, the creator of the whole world, the most eminent of the knowers of the Veda; [*and that King Daśaratha, moving in the air on a celestial car, arrived in that region, equal in lustre to the king of the gods]; these all having come ~~as bright~~ brilliant as the sun, and arrived in the city of Lankā, came near to Raghava (Rāma). Then these most eminent gods, holding the large arms of Rāma, adorned with armlets, addressed him as he stood with joined hands: ‘How dost thou, the maker of the whole universe, the most eminent of the wise, the pervading, disregard Sītā throwing herself into the fire? How dost thou not perceive thyself to be the chief of the host of the gods? [Thou

Thou, vexer of thy foes, art seen in the end and at the beginning of created things. And yet thou disregardest Sītā like a common man.' Being thus addressed by these guardians of the world, Rāma, the lord of the world, chief of the supporters of righteousness, said to the most eminent gods, 'I regard myself as a man,<sup>138</sup> Rāma, son of Daśaratha; do you, divine being, tell me who and whence I am.' Brahmā, chief of the knowers of the Veda, replied to Kākutstha (Rāma) thus speaking: 'Hear my true word, thou, o being of genuine power. Thou art the god, the glorious lord, Nārāyaṇa, armed with the discus. Thou art the one-horned boar, the conqueror of thy foes, past and future, the true, imperishable Brahma, both in the middle and end. Thou art the supreme righteousness of the worlds, Visvakṣena, the four-armed; the bearer of the bow Sārṅga, Hṛishikeśa (lord of the senses), Puruṣa (the male), the highest of Puruṣas, the unconquered, sword-wielding, Viṣṇu, and Krishna<sup>139</sup> of mighty force, the general, the leader, the true. <sup>138</sup> In the parts of the Mahābhārata where Krishna is identified with the supreme Deity, he is always represented as perfectly conscious of his true character. The commentator explains away this eleventh verse in the following manner: Atha Brahmānugrahād eva Brahma-vidyānāmukhyasya śruty-ādi-siddhatayā tad-añmukhyasya "ātmānam nāvabudhyase" iti Brahmanāiva kṛtatrāt taj-jñāsur iva svīyāya svarūpa-bodhanāya Brahmānam gurum ajña iva upāsati ity āha "ātmānam" iti | "As it is established by the Veda, etc., that the aspiration after the science of Brahma comes only from the grace of Brahmā, and since Brahmā had just prompted that aspiration by the words 'how dost thou not perceive thyself?' Rāma, assuming the appearance of a desire to know, applies to Brahmā, as an ignorant student to his teacher, to explain his own nature, and says 'I regard myself,' etc."

<sup>139</sup> If this means, as it seems to do, Krishna the son of Devakī, it must, if not an anachronism, be regarded as prophetic. The commentator makes it mean merely the "black-coloured" (krishṇas tad-varṇah).

Men know not who thou art, the source of being, or the destroyer. Thou art seen in all creatures, in Brahmans and in cows, in all the regions, in the mountains and rivers, thousand-footed, glorious, hundred-headed, thousand-eyed. Thou sustaineest creatures, and the earth with its mountains; thou art seen, Rāma, at the extremity of the earth, in the waters, a mighty serpent supporting the three worlds, gods, Gandharvas, and Dānavas. I am thy heart, Rāma, the goddess Sarasvatī is thy tongue. The gods have been made by Brahmā the hairs on thy limbs. The night is called the closing, and the day the opening, of thine eyes. The Vedas are thy thoughts.<sup>140</sup> This [universe] exists not without thee. The whole world is thy body; the earth is thy stability. Agni is thine anger, Soma is thy pleasure, o thou whose mark is the Śrīvatsa. By thee the three worlds were traversed of yore with thy three paces, and Mahendra was made king after thou hadst bound the terrible Bali. [*That which is known as the chiefest light, that which is known as the chiefest darkness, that which is higher than the highest,—thou art called the highest Soul. It is thou who art hymned as that which is called the highest, and [is] the highest. Men call thee the highest source of continuance, production, and destruction]. Sītā is Laxmī, and thou art Viṣṇu, the divine Kṛishṇa, the lord of creatures, who hast entered a mortal body for the slaughter of Rāvaṇa,' " etc.

In the same way as Viṣṇu is associated with Rāma in the Rāmāyana, so is he connected with Krishna in the Mahābhārata, the Viṣṇu, Bhāgavata, and Brahma-vaivartta Purāṇas, and other Vaishnava works of a later date. In the two first-named Purāṇas though Krishna is sometimes spoken of as a partial incarnation of Viṣṇu (see the passage from the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, x. 33, 27, quoted above, p. 42, and another from the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, which will be adduced below), he is generally regarded as a perfect manifestation of that deity, who, again, is identified with the supreme Spirit. In the Mahābhārata—which, as we have

<sup>140</sup> The commentator explains saṁskārāḥ thus: Saṁskriyante bodhyante ebhīr lokāḥ iti saṁskārāḥ pravṛtti-nivṛtti-nyavasthā-bodhakāḥ | "Sanskāras are the things by which people are instructed, the things which prescribe the rules of acting and forbearing to act." seen, contains a vast collection of heterogeneous materials originating in different ages, and embodying the opinions of various sects—we shall find that Krishna is diversely represented in different parts of the work. I have already (p. 142) quoted some remarks of Professors Wilson and Lassen on this subject. According to these authors Krishna, in so far as he is introduced as an actor in the events of the poem, is generally made to play a merely human part, and to manifest no superhuman power in succouring friends, or overcoming enemies; while, as professor Wilson remarks, his divine character is frequently disputed. In the Chhândogya Upanishad he is spoken of simply as the son of Devakī. In various parts of the Mahābhārata he is described as rendering homage to Mahādeva, and as receiving from him boons of various kinds. In many passages he is identified with the rishi Nārāyaṇa, while his friend Arjuna appears as one with the rishi Nara, the inseparable companion of the former. In these various passages, however, Krishna is by no means regarded in general as an ordinary mortal. He receives various divine weapons from Mahādeva; in his character as the rishi Nārāyaṇa, he lives through successive ages, and displays superhuman faculties. Even while acting as the ally of the Pandus, he destroys Śiśupāla supernaturally with his discus. And in numerous passages he is identified in the clearest manner with Vishṇu, who again, as I have said, is commonly assumed to be one with the supreme Spirit. I shall now proceed to adduce a variety of passages illustrative of these various assertions.

I. The following short passage from the Chhândogya Upanishad (pp. 220 ff. of the Bibl. Ind.) is, I believe, the oldest text yet known in which Krishna the son of Devakī is mentioned. It is extremely unfortunate that it is so brief; that it leaves us without any particulars of a personage about whom we should have been glad to possess the fullest details, who in after times became so famous as to obtain the honour of deification,—except the meagre information that he was the son of Devakī, the pupil of a teacher named Ghora,<sup>141</sup> and that he was so enthusiastically devoted to the pursuit of mystical lore as to become indifferent to every thing else :

apipāsa eva sa babhūca so 'nta-velāyām etat-trayam pratipadyeta "axitam asy achyutam asi prāṇa-saṁśītam asi" iti | "Ghora, the descendant of Angiras, having declared this [the preceding mystical lore] to Krishna the son of Devakī, said to him that [which, when he heard], he became free from thirst [i.e. desire], viz. : 'let a man at the time of his death have recourse to these three texts, Thou art the undecaying, thou art the imperishable, thou art the subtle principle of breath.'"

Tad ha etad yajña-darśanaṁ Ghoro nāmata Āngiraso gotrataḥ Kṛishṇāya Devakī-putrāya śishyāya uktrā uvācha tad "etat trayam" ityādi-vyavahitena sambandhaḥ | sa cha etad darśanaṁ śrutvā apipāsa eva anyābhya vidyābho babhūca | itthaṁ cha viśiṣṭā iyaṁ vidyā yat Kṛishṇasya Devakī-putrasya anyāṁ vidyām prati trid-rikkheda-karī iti puruṣa-yajña-vidyām stauti | Ghora Āngirasaḥ Kṛishṇāya uktrā imāṁ vidyāṁ kim uvācha iti tad āha | sa evaṁ yathokta-yajña-vid anta-velāyām maraṇa-kāle etan-mānta-trayam pratipadyeta japed ity arthaḥ | . . . prāṇa-saṁśītam prāṇasya saṁśītaṁ samyak tanūkritaṁcha sūx-maṁ tattvam asi . . . | "A person, Ghora by name, and an Āngirasa by family, having declared this doctrine of sacrifice to Krishna the son of Devakī, his pupil, then said, etc. The connection of the last word 'said,' is with the words which occur some way below, 'these three,' etc. And having heard this doctrine, he became free from desire for any other kinds of knowledge. In this manner he praises this knowledge of the Puruṣa-sacrifice by saying that it was so distinguished that it destroyed all thirst in Krishna, the son of Devakī, for any other knowledge. He now tells us what Ghora Āngirasa said after declaring this knowledge to Krishna. It was this: 'Let him who knows the afore-said sacrifice, at the time of his death have recourse to, mutter, these three texts . . . prāṇa-saṁśītam means, 'thou art the very minute, subtle principle of breath.' "

II. I shall next quote some passages of the Mahābhārata in which Krishna is represented as rendering homage to Mahādeva, and consequently, to all appearance, as acknowledging his own inferiority to that deity. It is related in the Vana-parva (vv. 1513-1656) in a passage which I shall quote further on, that Arjuna goes to supplicate Mahādeva for celestial weapons, and obtains from him the Pāśupata.

At a later stage of the poem (Drōṇa-parva, v. 2838) Arjuna is advised by Krishna to apply again to Mahādeva for the same Pāsūpata weapon, as if the author (if indeed he is the same by whom the earlier passage was written) had forgotten that he had already got it. Arjuna, it appears, had vowed (vv. 2681 ff.) to slay Jayadratha on the following day, though all the inferior deities should stand forward as his protectors. Subsequently, however, he becomes dejected, reflecting that the enemy's leaders would do their utmost to preserve Jayadratha, and that he would thus be unable to fulfil his promise (vv. 2830 ff.). Krishna hereupon advises Arjuna to supplicate Mahādeva for the Pāsūpata weapon with which that god himself had formerly destroyed all the Daityas, and with which he (Arjuna) would be able to slay Jayadratha on the morrow (vv. 2838 ff.). Arjuna and Krishna then arrive (it does not clearly appear whether mentally or bodily) with the speed of the wind, at the mountain on the summit of which Mahādeva abode, where they obtain a vision of that deity, with Pārvatī and his attendant Bhūtas (demons). On seeing him Vāsudeva (Krishna) bows down to the earth:

Mahābhārata, Droṇa-parva, vv. 2862 ff.—Vāsudevas tu taṁ drīṣṭvā jagāma śirasā xitim | Pārthena saha dharmātmā grīṇan brahma sanātanam | lokādiṁ viśva-karmāṇam aḥam īśānam aryaḥ | manasaḥ paramāṁ yoniṁ khaṁ vāyuṁ jyotiṣhāṁ nidhim | śraṣṭāraṁ cāridhūrāṇāṁ bhuvascha prakṛitīm parāṁ | deva-dānava-yacāṇāṁ mānavānāṁ sādhanam | yogānāṁ param brahma triptam brahma-vidāṁ nidhim | charācharasya śraṣṭāraṁ pratiharttāraṁ eva cha | kāla-kopam mahātmānaṁ śakra-sūrya-guṇodayam | vacande taṁ tadā Kṛiṣṇo vāṇ-mano-buddhi-karmabhiḥ | yam prapadyanti vidvāṁsaḥ sūxmādhyātma-padaishināḥ | tam aḥam kīraṇ-ātmanāṁ jagmatuḥ śaraṇam Bhavam | Arjunaś cāpi taṁ devam bhūyo bhūyo 'py arandata | jñātvā taṁ sarva-bhūtādīm bhūta-bharya-bhavo-dbhavam | tatas tāv āgatau drīṣṭvā Nara-Nārāyaṇāv ubhau | suprasanna-manāḥ Sarvaḥ provācha prahasann ira | āgataṁ vāṁ nara-śreṣṭhāḥ uttiṣṭhetāṁ gata-klamau | kīṇcha vāṁ īpitaṁ vīrau manasaḥ xipram uchyatām | yena kāryeṇa samprāptau yuvāṁ tat sādhayami kim | vṛiyatām ātmanāḥ śreyas tat sarvam pradadāmi vām |

“The righteous Vāsudeva (Krishna) then, together with the son of Prithā (Arjuna), reciting the eternal Veda, bowed his head to the ground, beholding him, the source of the worlds, the maker of the universe, the unborn, the imperishable lord, the supreme source of mind, the sky, the wind, the abode of the luminaries, the creator of the oceans, the supreme substance of the earth, the framer of gods, Dānavas, Yaxas, and men, the supreme Brahma of meditative systems, the satisfied, the treasure of those who know Brahma, the creator of the world, and also its destroyer, the great impersonated destructive Wrath, original of the attributes of Indra and Sūrya. Krishna then revered him with voice, mind, understanding, and act.<sup>142</sup> Those two [heroes] had recourse to Bhava (Mahādeva) as their refuge,—to him whom the wise, desiring the subtle and spiritual abode, seek after,—to him the unborn cause. Arjuna, too, again and again revered that deity, knowing him to be the beginning of all beings, the source of the past, the future, and the present. Beholding those two, Nara and Nārāyana, arrived, Sarva (Mahādeva) then greatly gratified, said, as if smiling: ‘Welcome, most eminent of men, rise up freed from fatigue, and tell me quickly, heroes, what your mind desires. Shall I accomplish for you the object for which you have come? Choose what is most for your welfare. I will give you all.’ ”

Krishna and Arjuna then recite a hymn in honour of Mahādeva, in the course of which he is designated as the “soul of all things, the creator of all things, and the pervader of all things” (viśvātmane viśva-sriṣe viśvam āvṛitya tiṣṭhate). Arjuna then, after reverencing both Krishna and Mahādeva, asks the latter for the celestial weapon. They are thereupon sent by Mahādeva to a lake where he says he had formerly deposited his bow and arrows. They there saw two serpents, one of which was vomiting flames, and approached them, bowing to Mahādeva and uttering the Satarudriya.<sup>143</sup> Through the power of Mahādeva, the serpents change their shape and become a bow and arrow (v. 2899), which Krishna and Arjuna bring to Mahādeva. Eventually Arjuna receives as a boon from Mahādeva the Pāśupata weapon, with the power of fulfilling his engagement to slay Jayadratha (vv. 2906 ff.); after which they both return to their camp.

The Anuśāsana-parva also contains several sections in which the

<sup>142</sup> In a passage from the Śāntiparva, which I shall quote further on, Krishna explains away the worship which here and elsewhere he is said to have rendered to Mahādeva, by saying that it was done for the sake of example to others, and was in reality offered to himself, Mahādeva being one of his manifestations. But Mahādeva himself is here, and in the next passage, identified with the supreme Deity (Brahma).

praises of Mahādeva are celebrated at considerable length, and in which he is declared to have been worshipped by Kṛishṇa. At v. 588 of that book Yudhishtira asks Bhīṣma to declare the names of that deity, when the latter replies as follows (vv. 590 ff.):

Āśakto 'hañ guṇān vaktum Mahādevasya dhīmataḥ | yo hi sarva-gato devo na cha sarvatra dṛśyate | Brahma-Vishṇu-sureśānām vrashtā cha prabhur eva cha | Brahmādayaḥ Piśāchāntā yañ hi devā upāsate | prakṛitīnāṃ paratvena puruṣasya cha yaḥ paraḥ | chintyate go yoga-vidbhīr rishibhis tattva-darśibhiḥ | azaram paramam Brahma asacheha sad-asachha yat | prakṛitīm puruṣaṇchaiva xobhayitvā sa-tejasā | Brahmānam aṣṛijāt tasmād deva-devaḥ prajāpatiḥ | ko hi śakto guṇān vaktum deva-devasya dhīmataḥ | garbha-janma-jarā-yukto martyo mṛityu-samanvitāḥ | ko hi śakto Bharaṇ jñātum mad-vidhaḥ Parameśvaram | rite Nārāyaṇāt puttra śaṅkha chakra-gadā-dharāt | esha vidvān guṇa-śreṣṭho Viṣṇuḥ parama-durjayaḥ | divya-chakur mahātejā vīryate [vīryate?] yoga-charuṣhā | Rudra-bhaktiḥ tu Kṛishṇena jagad vyāptam mahātmanā | tam prasādyā tadā devaṃ Badaryyām kila Bhārata | arthāt<sup>144</sup> priyataratvaṃ cha sarvalokeshu vai tadā | prāptavān eva rājendra suvarṇāxād Maheśvarāt | pūrṇaṃ varṣa-sahasraṃ tu taptavān esha Mādhaḥ | prasādyā varadāṃ devaṃ charāchara-guruṃ Śivam | yuge yuge tu Kṛishṇena toshito vai Maheśvaraḥ | bhaktiḥ parāmāyā chaiva pritaśchaiva mahātmanāḥ | aīsvaryyāṃ yādṛiṣāṃ tasya jagad-yoner mahātmanāḥ | tad ayaṃ dṛiṣṭavān sāvāt putrārthe Harir achyutaḥ | tasmāt parataraṇchaiva nānyam paśyāmi Bhārata | vyākhyātum deva-devasya śakto namūny aśeshataḥ | esha śakto mahābāhur vaktum bhagavato guṇān | vibhūtiṇchaiva kārtsnyena satyāṃ māheśvariṃ nṛipa |

Having agitated matter and spirit by his power, this god of gods and lord of creatures (Prajāpati) thence created

Brahmā. What human being like me, who has been subject to gestation in the womb, and to birth, and is liable to decay and death, can declare the attributes of Bhava, the supreme lord,—[who can do this] except Nārāyana, the bearer of the shell, the discus, and the club? This Viṣṇu, wise, eminent in qualities, very hard to overcome, with divine insight, of mighty power, beholds<sup>145</sup> [him] with the eye of contemplation. Through his devotion to Rudra, the world is pervaded by the mighty Krishna. Having then propitiated that deity (Mahādeva) at Badari, he (Krishna) obtained from the golden-eyed Maheśvara the quality of being in all worlds more dear than wealth (?). This Mādhava (Krishna) performed austerity for a full thousand years, propitiating Śiva, the god who bestows boons, and the preceptor of the world. But in every mundane period (yuga) Maheśvara has been propitiated by Krishna, and has been gratified by the eminent devotion of that great personage. This unshaken Hari (Krishna), when [seeking] for offspring, has beheld distinctly of what character is the glory of that great parent of the world. Than him (Mahādeva ?) I behold none greater. This long-armed [Krishna] is able to recount fully the names of the god of gods, to describe the qualities of the divine [being], and the real might of Maheśvara in all its extent."

Bhīṣma then calls upon Krishna (whom he designates as Viṣṇu, and as the divine teacher of gods and Asuras) to celebrate Mahādeva's greatness. Krishna accordingly says (vv. 610 ff.):

pramukhā devāḥ sendrā maharshayaḥ | na vidur yasya bhavanam Ādityāḥ
sūxma-darśināḥ | sa katham nara-mātrena śakyo jñātuṃ satām gatiḥ | tasyāham asura-ghnasya kāmśchid bhagavato guṇān | bhuvatām kīrtta-yishyāmi vrataśāya [vrataśasya ?] yathātatham |* "The course of the deeds of Īśa (Mahādeva), cannot be really known. He whose essence neither the gods headed by Hiranyagarbha, nor the great rishis with Indra, nor the Ādityas the perceivers of the minutest objects, understand,—how can he, the refuge of saints, be known by any mere man?
I shall declare to you exactly some of the attributes of that divine slayer of the Asuras, of the lord of religious ceremonies."

Krishna then relates how he had formerly seen Mahādeva. It appears that his wife Jāmbavatī (v. 616), daughter of the king of the monkeys<sup>146</sup> (kapindra-putrī, v. 629), had come to him desirous of a son; she says (vv. 619 f.):

Na hi te 'prāpyam astiha trishu lokeshu kiñchana | lokān sṛjēs tram aparān ichhan Yadu-kulodraha | trayā dēdāśa-varshāni vratibhūtena śuśhyatā | ārādhya paśubharttārām Rukmīnyām janitāḥ sutāḥ | "For there is nothing in these three worlds unattainable by thee (Krishna). Thou, scion of the race of Yadu, couldst create other worlds. By thee after twelve years' fasting and mortification,<sup>147</sup> and worship of the nourisher of beasts (Mahādeva), sons were begotten on Rukminī (another of his wives)."

Krishna promises to bring about the accomplishment of Jāmbavatī's wishes. The story proceeds that he was then conveyed by the celestial bird Garuḍa to the Himālaya (v. 632), where he sees the delightful hermitage of the saint Upamanyu, which is described at length (vv. 634-652).<sup>148</sup> Krishna enters and is reverentially saluted by Upamanyu (v. 655), who tells him that after propitiating Mahādeva by austerities, he shall obtain a son equal to himself (v. 658).<sup>149</sup> The saint then goes on to celebrate the greatness of Mahādeva, who, he said, had given boons to various beings, and to Vishnu his discus (vv. 662 ff.):

<sup>147</sup> This twelve years' austerity performed before for the sake of progeny is alluded to further on in the Anuśāsana-parva, v. 6397, and the birth of a son is mentioned, v. 6889. As Krishna is represented in that passage in a higher character than he is in the one before us, it will be more appropriately quoted further on.

“Hiranyakaśipu, the Dānava, the shaker of mount Meru, obtained from Sarva (Mahādeva) the sovereignty of all the immortals for a hundred million years. He had an eminent and renowned son, called Mandara, who by the grace of Mahādeva fought with Indra for a hundred million years. Formerly both the dreadful discus of Vishṇu and the thunderbolt of Akhaṇḍala (Indra) were shattered against the limbs of Graha (Rāhu). That discus, resplendent and fiery, which was formerly given to thee by the god after slaying the marine monster, and the Daitya, proud of his strength, was produced by Mahādeva.<sup>150</sup> Bestowed upon thee by the god, resistless, and wonderful in its potency, it could not be looked upon by any other than Pinākin (the bearer of the bow, i.e. Mahādeva). It then received from Bhava (Mahādeva) the name of Sudarśana, and by that name it is celebrated in the world. That discus was shattered against the limbs of Graha. On the body of the wise and very powerful Graha, who had received a boon, no weapons, not even the discus, or a thousand thunderbolts, produce any effect. The gods being harassed by the most mighty Graha, slew on many occasions the Asuras who had received boons from Siva.”

After telling that many other persons had obtained boons by worshipping Mahādeva, the saint Upamanyu relates a story about himself, how his mother, after smelling him on the head (mūrdhany āghrāya) had fully declared to him the greatness of this deity (vv. 724 ff.) In addition to the more general attributes assigned to the god, the following are some characteristics of a more special description (some of them sufficiently horrible or disgusting), as detailed with admiration by this female devotee. He assumes many forms of gods (as Brahmā, Vishnu, Indra, Rudra), and of men, of goblins, demons, barbarians, tame and wild beasts, birds, reptiles, fishes, with many varieties of human disguises, etc. (v. 731 ff.). He is the soul of all the worlds, all-pervading, residing in the heart of all creatures, knowing all desires (v. 742 f.). He carries a discus, a trident, a club, a sword, an axe (v. 745). He has a girdle of serpents, earrings of serpents, a sacrificial cord of serpents, and an outer garment of serpents' skins (v. 746). He laughs, sings, dances charmingly, and plays various musical instruments (v. 747). He leaps, gapes, weeps, makes others weep; speaks like a madman or a drunkard, as well as in sweet tones (v. 748). He laughs terrifically (v. 749). He is both visible and invisible, on the altar, on the sacrificial post, in the fire, a boy, an old man, a youth (v. 751). He dallies with the daughters and the wives of the rishis, with erect hair, obscene appearance,<sup>151</sup> naked, with excited look (v. 742: krīḍate rishi-kanyābhir rishi-patnībhir eva cha | ūrdhva-keśo mahāśeṣho nagno vikṛita-lochanah |) He is one-faced, two-faced, three-faced, many-faced.

<sup>150</sup> In an account of Krishna's exploits in the Drona-parva, however, it is said (v. 402) that the chakra was obtained by worshipping Agni: Khūṇḍave Pārtha-sahāsa toshayitvā Hutūśanam | Āgneyam astraṁ durdharshaṁ chakraṁ lebhe mahābalaḥ | In the same passage (v. 401) he is said to have obtained his shell (śaṅkha) by conquering Panchajanya in the infernal regions.

Such is the deity, of whom, after hearing this description, Upamanyu becomes a constant devotee, and whom he gratifies by long austerities, standing for a thousand years on the tip of his left toe, during the first hundred years of which period he lives on fruits, the second hundred on withered leaves, the third hundred on water, and the remaining seven hundred on air (v. 758 ff.) Mahādeva at length appears to him in the form of Indra, and offers him his choice of a boon. Upamanyu, however, is indifferent about Indra, and declares that he cares nothing about any other god than Mahādeva, and will accept no boon however great at the hand of any other, adding many passionate expressions of devotion to this deity. And a further occasion being offered by a question of Indra, the saint again proceeds to expatiate at some length on the attributes of his favourite god (vv. 784-829), of which I shall only quote the following lines (v. 822 ff.):

muktvā Maheśvaram | archyate 'rchita-pūrvaṁ vā brūhi yady asti te śrutih | yasya Brahmā cha Viṣṇuś cha tvaṁ chāpi saha daivataih | archayethāḥ sadā lingaṁ tasmāch chhreshṭhatamo hi saḥ | na padmāṅkā na chakrāṅkā na vajrāṅkā yataḥ prajāḥ | līṅgāṅkā cha bhagāṅkā cha tasmād Māheśvarī prajā | Devyāḥ kāraṇa-rūpa-bhāva-janitā[h] sarvā bhagāṅkā[h] striyo līṅgenāpi Harasya sarvā-puruṣhāḥ pratyaxa-chik-nīkritāḥ | yo 'nyat kāraṇam īśvarāt pravadata devyū cha yad nūṅkitaṁ trailokye sa-charūchare sa tu pumān vāhyo bhaved dūrmataih | puṁlingaṁ sarvam Īśanaṁ strī-lingaṁ viddhi chāpy Umām | dvābhyāṁ tanubhyāṁ vyūptaṁ hi charācharam idaṁ jagat | "Is Īśu (Mahādeva) the Cause of causes for any other reasons? We have not heard that the linga (male organ) of any other person is worshipped by the gods. Declare, if thou hast heard, what other being's linga except that of Maheśvara is now worshipped, or has formerly been worshipped, by the gods? He whose linga Brahmā and Viṣṇu, and thou (Indra), with the deities, continually worship, is therefore the most eminent. Since children bear neither the mark of the lotus (Brahmā's), nor of the discus (Viṣṇu's), nor of the thunderbolt (Indra's), but are marked with the male and the female organs,—therefore offspring is derived from Maheśvara. All women produced from the nature of Devī as their cause, are marked with the female organ, and all males are manifestly marked with the linga of Hara. He who asserts any other cause than Īśvara (Mahādeva) or [affirms] that there is any [female] not marked by Devī in the three worlds, including all things moveable or immoveable, let that fool be thrust out. Know everything which is male to be Īśana, and all that is female to be Umā, for this whole world, moveable and immoveable, is pervaded by [these] two bodies."

 875 f. Astuvān vīridhaiḥ stotrair Mahādevaṁ surās tadā | Brahmā Bhavaṁ tadā 'staushīd rathantaram udīrayan | jyeshṭha-sāmnū cha deve-śaṁ jagau Nārāyaṇas tadā | grīṇan brahma paraṁ Sakraḥ śata-rudriyam

uttamam | Brahmā Nārāyaṇas chaiva devarājaścha Kauśikah | aśobhanta mahātmanas trayas traya ivāgnayah | 869. "On the left (right?) of the god was Brahmā, patriarch of the world, standing on a celestial car, drawn by swans, and fleet as thought. On the left was Narayana (Vishṇu) mounted on Garuḍa, bearing a shell, discus, and club. . . . 875. The gods then lauded Mahādeva with various hymns. Brahmā celebrated him, reciting the rathantara, while Nārāyaṇa hymned the god of gods with the jyeshtha sūman, and Indra, uttering that most eminent prayer, the excellent Satarudriya. Brahmā, Nārāyaṇa, and the king of the gods (Indra) the son of Kuśika,<sup>152</sup> the three mighty deities, shone like the three fires."

Upamanyu himself then lauds Mahādeva (vv. 880-923). At the conclusion of his hymn a shower of flowers falls from the sky on his head, accompanied by celestial odours, and music (v. 925 f.), and Mahādeva addresses him, offering to bestow everything he wishes. Upamanyu sheds tears of joy, falls on his knees, makes repeated prostrations, and after acknowledging with gratitude the god's condescension in granting him this vision, proceeds to say (vv. 839 ff.):

Sa esha bhagavān devaḥ sarva-sattvādir arjayah | sarva-tattva-vidhāna-jñāḥ pradhāna-purushaḥ paraḥ | yo 'srijat daśinād aṅgād Brahmāṇaṁ loka-sambhavam | vāma-pārsvāt tathā Viṣṇuṁ loka-raxārtham Īśvaraḥ | yugānte chaiva samprāpte Rudram Īśo 'srijat prabhur ity ādi | "This is the glorious god, the beginning of all existences, undecaying, who knows the formation of all principles, who is Pradhāna and Purusha (or the principal Purusha), the supreme; who, the lord, created from his right side Brahmā, the originator of the worlds, and from his left side Viṣṇu, for the preservation of the universe; and when the end of the age (yuga) had arrived, the mighty lord created Rudra," etc.

Upamanyu concludes by asking these boons, viz. that his devotion to the god may be perpetual, that he may know the past, the present, and the future, that he may always eat food cooked with milk (xīraudana) with his relations, and that they may ever enjoy the near presence (sānnidhya) of Mahādeva in their hermitage (vv. 915, ff.). The god bestows all these and many other blessings, and disappears (vv. 949 ff.).

desire that the god may vouchsafe to him a similar vision and the like favour. Upamanyu promises that Mahādeva shall appear to Kṛishṇa in six months, and bestow on him twenty-four boons, and pays him the compliment of saying that any of the gods would consider it as a highly laudable act to have an interview with such a pious, innocent, and devout person as he (Kṛishṇa) is (vv. 964 ff.). Kṛishṇa is then consecrated by the Brahman (973 ff.). Equipped with a staff, shaved, clothed with rags, anointed with ghee, and provided with a girdle, living for one month on fruits, for four more on water, standing on one foot, with his arms aloft, he at length obtained a glorious vision of Mahādeva and his wife (v. 978), whom all the gods were worshipping, and among them Indra, Viṣṇu (the delight of his mother Aditi), and Brahmā, uttering the rathantara sāma (Satakratus cha bhagavān Viṣṇus chāditi-nandanah | Brahmā rathantaraṁ sāma trayanti Bhavāntike). Kṛishṇa then describes the effect of this vision on himself (vv. 997 ff.):

Purastād dhishṭhitah Sarvo mamāsīt tridaśeśvaraḥ | purastād dhishṭhitāṁ drishṭvā mameśānanāḥ Bhārata | sa-Prajāpati-Sakrāntuṁ jagad mām abhyudaixata | ixituṁ cha Mahādevaṁ na me śaktir abhūt tadā | tato mām abravīd devaḥ “paśya Kṛishṇa vadasva cha | trayā hy ārādhitāś chāhaṁ śataśo ’tha sahasraśaḥ | tat-samo nāsti me kaśchit trishu lokeshu vai priyaḥ” | śirasā vandite deve devī prītā hy Umā ’bhavat | tato ’ham abruvam Sthānuṁ stutam Brahmādibhiḥ suraiḥ | “Before me stood Śiva the lord of the gods. Beholding, as I then did, Isāna standing before me—the world from Prajāpati to Śakra (Indra) gazed upon me (?)—I had no power to look on Mahādeva. The god then said to me, ‘Behold, Kṛishṇa, and speak. I have been adored by thee hundreds and thousands of times. There is no one in the three worlds so dear to me as thou.’ The god having been revered by obeisance, the goddess Umā was gratified. I then said to Sthānu (Mahādeva) who had been praised by Brahmā and the rest of the gods.”

Kṛishṇa proceeds to laud Mahādeva (vv. 1002–1018) as the supreme Deity. Mahādeva then says (v. 1023): Vidmaḥ Kṛishṇa parām bhaktim asmāsu tara śatruhan | vṛiyatām atmanah śreyah prītir hi trayi me parā | vṛinīshvāṣṭau varān Kṛishṇa dātāsmi tara sattama | brāhi Yādava-śārdūla yān ichhasi sudurlabhān | “We know, Kṛishṇa, slayer of foes, thy eminent devotion to us. Choose what is most advantageous to thee, for my love for thee is extreme. Choose eight boons; I will give them to thee, most excellent being. Specify, chief of the Yadus, those boons which are most difficult to obtain." Krishna then asks these eight boons: (1) steadfastness in righteousness, (2) the destruction of his foes in battle, (3) eminent renown, (4) the greatest strength, (5) abstraction (yoga), (6) amiability (priyatvam), (7) close proximity to Mahādeva, and (8) a hundred hundreds of sons,—all of which were accordingly granted by Mahādeva. Umā next offers him his choice of eight more boons, and he selects (1) the goodwill of the Brahmans, (2) the favour of his father, (3) a hundred sons, (4) eminent enjoyment, (5) the affection of his tribe, (6) the favour of his mother, (7) tranquillity of mind, and (8) ability. These boons are granted by the goddess, who superadds sixteen thousand wives whose affection he should retain, and several other blessings. Mahādeva and his spouse then disappeared, and Krishna related to Upamanyu all that had happened (v. 1034). That sage then goes on to tell him a story about a rishi called Tanḍi, who had formerly worshipped Mahādeva, in the Kṛita age, and praised him in a long hymn (which is given vv. 1049–1103) as the supreme Deity whom even Brahmā, Indra, and Vishṇu did not perfectly know (vv. 1052, and 1103–5). Tanḍi had come to Upamanyu's hermitage and recited to him the eleven thousand mystical names of Mahādeva, which Upamanyu repeated to Krishna (vv. 1144 ff.). This hymn, existing in the heart of Brahmā was, we are told (vv. 1287 ff.), declared by that deity to Indra, by him to Mṛityu (Death), by him to the Rudras, and from them it came to Tanḍi, etc.

A little further on (vv. 1358 ff.) we are told that Upamanyu expressed himself thus to Krishna :

Āśubhaiḥ pāpakarmāṇo ye narāḥ kaluṣhīkṛitāḥ | Īśānaṁ na prapadyante tamo-rājasa-vṛittayah | Īśvaraṁ samprapadyante drīḍhā bhūvita-bhāvanāḥ | sarvathā varttamāno 'pi yo bhaktah parameśvare | sadṛīṣo 'raṇyavāsānāṁ munināṁ bhāvitātmanām | Brahmatvaṁ Keśavatvaṁ cha Sakratvaṁ, na śūraiḥ saha | trilokyasyādhipatyāṁ vā tushto Rudrah prajaghnātītyādi | "Those sinful men who are soiled by unhallowed (deeds) do not seek Īśāna, living under the dark and passionate qualities. Brahmans who have meditated on the cause [of all things] seek Īśvara. The man who is devoted to Maheśvara—whatever mode of life he follows—is equal to those contemplative munis who dwell in the forests. Rudra, when he is gratified, bestows the rank of Brahma, and Keśava

In a later part of the Anuśāsana-parva, 7402 ff., Kṛishṇa relates to Yudishthira the benefits which had resulted to himself from his patient submission to the caprices and freaks of the irritable Brahman Duvāsas (an incarnation of Śiva, as it is stated below, pp. 166, 169) who, among other tricks, had yoked Kṛishṇa's wife Rukminī to his car, and had wounded her with a goad, while drawing him on the road, and as a reward of Kṛishṇa's patient endurance of all this annoyance, had offered him his choice of boons, and had promised to Rukminī that she should be eminently renowned in the world, and the most distinguished of the sixteen thousand wives of Kṛishṇa, whom she should worship. The Brahman then disappeared, and Kṛishṇa performed an Upāṅgu rite, i.e. muttered prayers, with his wife. Then entering his house he found that all the articles which Duvāsas had broken or burned, were replaced.

Yudishthira then says to Kṛishṇa (vv. 7458 ff. : Duvāsasaḥ prasādāt te yat tadā Madhusūdana | arāptam iha vijñānam tan me vyākhyātum arhasi | mahābhāgyaṅcha yat tasya nāmāni cha mahātmanah | tattvato jñātum icchāmi sarvam matimatām vara | Vāsudeva uvācha | Hanta te kīrttayishyāmi namaskṛitya Kṛipardīne | yad arāptam mayā rājan śreyo yach chārjñitān yaśah | prayataḥ prātar utthāya yad adhīye viśāmpate | prāñjalih śatarudrīyaṁ tan me nigadataḥ śṛiṇu | Prajāpatis tat saśṛje tapaso 'nte mahātapaḥ | Śaṅkaras tv aśṛjat tāta prajāḥ sthāvara-jaṅgamāḥ | nāsti kiñchit param bhūtam Mahādevād viśāmpate | iha trishu api lokeshu bhūtānāṁ pravaro hi saḥ | na chaivotsahate sthātūn kiñchid agre mahātmanah | na hi bhūtān samān tena trishu lokeshu vidyate | gandhenāpi hi saṅgrāme tasya kruddhasya śatravaḥ | viśāñjū hata-bhūyishṭhā vepante cha patanti cha | ghoraṅcha ninadān tasya Parjanya-ninadopamam | śrutvā viśṛyed hṛidayān devānān api saṁyuge | yānścha ghoreṇa rūpeṇa paśyet kruddhaḥ pināka-dhṛik | na surā nāsura loka na gandharvā na pannagāḥ | kupite sukham edhante tasminn api guhāgatāḥ | Prajāpates tu Daxasya yajuto vitale kratau | vicyādha kupite vajraṁ nirbhayaḥ tv abhayaḥ tadā | dhanushā vānam utsṛjya saghoshān vinanādā cha | tena śarme kṛtāḥ gantīn vishūdān lekṣire surāḥ | viddhe cha sahasā yajñe kupite cha Maheśvare | tena jyā-tala-ghoshena sarve lokāḥ samākulāḥ | bahavur avasūḥ Pārtha vishedaś cha surāsuraḥ | āpaś chuzubhire chaiv i chakāḥ | vāyudharā | vyadravan giriryaś chāpi dyauḥ paphāla cha

Anuśāsana-parva, v. 7458 ff.—Yudhishtīra says to Kṛishṇa : “Thou oughtest, Madhusūdāna, to expound to me that knowledge which thou then obtainedst by the favour of Durvāsas. I wish, most eminent of sages, to know exactly all the grandeur of that great Being, and his names. Vāsudeva replies : Yes, I shall declare to thee, after bowing down before the god with the braided hair (Mahādeva), the happiness which was obtained by me, and the glory which was acquired. Hear from me, o king, the Satarudrīya, which, when risen in the morning, I intently repeat with joined hands. The great devotee, Prajāpati, created that [prayer<sup>153</sup>] at the end of his austerity. Sankara has created [all] beings, stationary and moving. There is nothing, o king, which exists superior to Mahādeva; for he is the most excellent of beings in all these three worlds. And nothing can stand before this great deity : for there is no being like him in the three worlds. In battle, when he is even in the slightest degree (lit. ‘even by a scent’)

incensed, his enemies tremble and fall senseless, and mostly slain. And the heart even of the gods would be withered in battle, on hearing his dreadful voice, resembling the sound of Parjanya (i.e. of the thunder clouds). And neither gods, nor Asuras, nor Gandharvas, nor Pannagas, nor whomsoever the Holder of the bow (Mahādeva), incensed, looks upon with his direful aspect, can enjoy tranquillity when he is angry, even though they hide themselves. When the Prajāpati Daxa was sacrificing, and his ceremonial was arranged, Mahādeva in his wrath pierced the sacrifice, and was then devoid of fear, and discharging an arrow with his bow, he uttered a loud sound. The gods received from this no pleasure or tranquillity, but rather dejection. And forthwith, the sacrifice being pierced, and Maheśvara being incensed, all the worlds were disturbed at the sound of his bowstring; both gods and Asuras became helpless and cast down; the waters were troubled, and the earth shook; the mountains were dissolved; the sky was rent in all directions; enveloped in thick darkness, the worlds did not shine, and the light of the luminaries and of the sun was quenched. Being greatly alarmed, the rishis then sought to appease Mahādeva, and recited texts to avert his anger, seeking their own welfare, and that of all creatures. Rudra of dreadful power then ran up to the gods, and, in his rage, knocked out the eyes of Bhaga with a blow, and incensed, assaulted Pūshan with his foot, and knocked out his teeth, as he was eating the puroḍāśa offering. The gods trembling then made obeisance to Sankara, and he again fitted on the string (?) the glittering, well-whetted arrow. Beholding the prowess of Rudra, the gods, with the rishis, terrified, propitiated him, and with joined hands, muttered the Satarudriya. Being thus lauded by the gods, Maheśvara became pleased; and they apportioned to him a distinguished share in the sacrifice, and, through fear, resorted to him as their refuge. He then became pleased and replaced the sacrifice, and whatever was removed he restored to life as it had been before. There were in the sky three cities of the valorous Asuras, one of iron, another of silver, and a third of gold,<sup>154</sup> which Maghavan (Indra) could not demolish, with all his weapons. Then all the great gods, distressed, went to the great Rudra as their refuge, and said to him, after they were assembled: 'Rudra, there shall be beasts devoted to thee in all the sacrifices. Bestower of honour, destroy the Daityās with their cities, and deliver the worlds.' He, being thus addressed, said, 'So be it;' and making Vishṇu his arrow, Agni its barb, Yama, the son of Vivasvat, its feather, all the Vedas his bow, and the excellent Sāvitrī (the Gāyatrī) his bowstring, and having appointed Brahmā his charioteer,<sup>155</sup> he in due time pierced through these cities with a three-jointed three-barbed arrow, of the colour of the sun, and in fierceness like the fire which burns up the world. These Asuras with their cities were there burnt up by Rudra. Again, beholding him a child in the lap, with five locks (?), Umā, desiring to know, asked, 'Who is this?' And when Indra, envious, was about to smite him (the child) with the thunderbolt, he stayed the thunderbolt, and that arm resembling a club. All the gods, including Prajāpati, did not understand the lord of the worlds, [existing] in that most mighty deity [in the form of an infant?]. Then the divine Brahmā, meditating on that being of boundless glory, and knowing that he was supreme, adored the lord of Umā. Then these gods propitiated Umā and Rudra; and the arm of slayer of hosts became as before. And again, Mahādeva, becoming a powerful Brahman, by name Durvāsas, dwelt a long time in my city Dvāravatī. He practised very many perversities in my house, which, though difficult to support, I, through generosity, endured. He is Rudra, he is Śiva, he is Agni, he is Sarva, the all-conquering; he is Indra, he is Vāyu, he is the Aśvins, he is the lightning, he is the moon, he is Īśāna, he is Sūrya, he is Varuṇa, he is time, he is death the ender, he is darkness, and night, and the days, he is the months, and the half months, and the seasons, the morning and evening twilight, and the year. He is Dhātṛi, and Vidhātṛi, Viśvakarman, the all-knowing, the constellations, the planets, the regions or [points], and intermediate regions or [points of the compass]; universal-formed, immeasurable in essence, divine, of undecaying splendour. He is simple, twofold, manifold, a thousand-fold, and a hundred-thousand-fold. Such is Mahādeva, the vast (?), the divine unborn being; his qualities cannot be declared in a hundred years." Krishṇa proceeds uninterruptedly at the beginning of a new section: "Large-armed Yudishthira, understand from me the greatness of the glorious, multiform, many-named Rudra. They call Mahādeva Agni, Sthānu,

Maheśvara, One-eyed, Tryambaka, the universal-formed, and Siva. Brahmins versed in the Veda know two bodies of this god, one awful, one auspicious; and these two bodies again have many forms. The dire and awful body is fire, lightning, the sun. The auspicious and beautiful body is virtue, water, and the moon. The half of his essence is fire, and the moon is called the [other] half. The one, which is his auspicious body, practises chastity: while the other, which is his most dreadful body, destroys the world. From his being lord (īśvara) and great (mahat), he is called Maheśvara. Since he consumes, since he is fiery, fierce, glorious, an eater of flesh, blood, and marrow,—he is called Rudra. As he is the greatest of the gods, as his domain is wide, and as he preserves the vast universe,—he is called Mahādeva. From his smoky colour, he is called Dhūrjati. Since he constantly directs all men in all their acts, seeking their welfare (śiva), he is therefore called Siva,” etc. etc.

In the Bhīṣma-parva (vv. 793 ff.) Krishṇa is introduced as recommending Arjuna to worship the goddess Durgā:

*Sanjaya uvācha | Dhṛtarāṣṭram balaṁ dṛiṣṭvā yuddhāya samupa-
sthitam | Arjunasya hitārthāya Kṛiṣṇo vachanam abravīt | Sṛi-bhagavān

'rjunaḥ saṅkhye Vāsudevena dhīmatā | avatīrya rathāt Pārthaḥ stotram
āha kritāñjaliḥ |*

“Beholding the host of Dhṛitarāṣṭra come near to the conflict, Krishṇa, for the good of Arjuna, addressed to him these words: ‘Having purified thyself, o large-armed hero, standing in front of the battle, utter a hymn to Durgā for the overthrow of thine enemies.’ Arjuna, being thus addressed in battle by the wise Vāsudeva, descending from his chariot, uttered a hymn with joined hands.”

III. In the passage which I have quoted above (p. 142, note 134) from Professor Wilson, it is remarked that in some places of the Mahābhārata the divine nature of Krishṇa is disputed or denied. An instance of this denial is to be found in the following passage of the Sabhā-parva, in which Sīśupāla, prince of the Chedis, is introduced as objecting to the divine honours which had been paid to Krishṇa, and as ultimately suffering the penalty of his proud and contemptuous impiety at the hands of the incarnate deity.

Yudhisthira having proposed to perform the Rājasūya sacrifice, numerous kings assembled to witness the celebration (Sabhā-parva, 1260 ff.) On this occasion Bhīshma proposed that apart from the customary presents bestowed on all the kings, Kṛishṇa should be singled out as the most eminent of the chiefs to receive gifts indicative of his superiority (vv. 1333 ff.).

Sabhā-parva, 1333 ff.:—Esha hy eshām samastānām tejo-bala-parā-kramaiḥ | madhye tapann ivābhāti jyotishām iva bhāskarāḥ | asūryam iva sūryeṇa nirvāta[m?] iva vāyunā | bhāsitām hlāditaṁ chaiva Kṛishṇene-daṁ sado hi naḥ | tasmai Bhīshmābhyānujñātaḥ Sahadevaḥ pratāpavan | upajahre 'tha vidhivad Vārshṇeyāyārgham uttamam | pratijagrāha tat Kṛishṇaḥ śāstra-dishtena karmanā | Śiśupālas tu tām pūjām Vāsudeve na charame | “For he, by his energy, force and valour, appears shining in the midst of all these princes, like the sun among the luminaries. This assembly of ours is enlightened and gladdened by Kṛishṇa, as a sunless place is by the sun, and a windless spot is by the wind. Commissioned by Bhīshma, the majestic Sahadeva then presented in due form to Vārshṇeya (Kṛishṇa) a most excellent offering, which the latter received with the act prescribed by the śāstra.”

Śiśupāla, as I have said, could not endure that this compliment should have been paid to Kṛishṇa, and states at length a variety of objections to what had been done (vv. 1338 ff.). He urges that Kṛishṇa was a “transgressor of the injunctions of law (smṛiti), a contemptible and ill-instructed person” (v. 1340: Ayam cha smṛity atikrānto hy apageyo 'lpa-darśanaḥ); that he was not a king, or a person venerable from age, his father Vasudeva being still alive (v. 1343: Athavā manyase Kṛishṇam sthaviṛam Kurū-pungava | Vasudeve sthite vṛiddha katham arhati tat-sutaḥ |); that in other respects he was inferior to other chiefs present, and that he had unjustly killed Jarāsandha (v. 1360, compare verses 1474 ff.); and taunts him with being greatly elated with the undeserved honour that had been paid him, like a dog devouring in a secret place the leavings of an oblation which he has discovered (v. 1364: Ayuktām ātmanaḥ pūjām tram punar bahu manyase | havishāḥ prāpya nisyaṇdam prāsītā śveva nirjane |). Having thus vented his indignation, Śiśupāla leaves the assembly, followed by Yudhisthira, who endeavours to soothe him. Bhīshma then defends Kṛishṇa's claims to the honour which he had received (vv. 1377 ff.):

Na hi kevalam asmākam ayam archyatamo 'chyutaḥ | trayānām api lokānām archanīyo mahābhujah | Kṛishṇena hi jītū yuddhe bahavaḥ xatriyarshabhāḥ | jagat sarvaṁ cha Vārshṇeye nikhilena pratisthīhitam | tasmāt satsv api vṛiddhesu Kṛishṇam archāmi netarūn | . . . . 1382 : Nā kevalam vāyaṁ kāmāch Chedi-rāja Janārdanam | na sambandham puraskṛitya kṛitārthaṁ vā kathañchana | archūmahe 'rchitaṁ sadbhīr bhuvi bhūta-sukhāvaham | Yāsaḥ śauryaṁ jayaṁ chāsya vijñāyarchām prayujmahe | na cha kaśchid ihāsmābhiḥ subālo 'py aparīxitaḥ | gunair vṛiddhān atikramya Hārīr archyatamo mataḥ | jñāna-vṛiddho dvijātīnām xatriyānām balādhikah | " 1377 : This unfalling being (Achyuta) is not only deserving of the utmost worship from us, but, large of arm, he is also to be worshipped by the three worlds. For many eminent Xatriyas have been conquered by Kṛishṇa : and the whole world rests upon Vārshṇeya. Wherefore, even though there be aged men [present], I worship Kṛishṇa and not the others. . . . " 1382 : It is not therefore from interested motives, king of the Chedis, nor in consequence of our connection, nor for the sake of anything he has done for us, that we worship Janārdana, who is worshipped by the good on earth, and who promotes the happiness of creatures. But knowing his renown, heroism, and victories, we offer him our worship. Nor is there here any mere youth whom we have never tried. Hari, surpassing the aged in his virtues, is regarded by us as most worthy of worship. In knowledge he excels Brahmaṇs, and in force Xatriyas." . . . .

“There are two reasons why Govinda is worthy of honour: his knowledge of the Vedas and Vedāngas, and his superior strength. For who in the world of men is distinguished except Keśava? Generosity, ability, sacred learning, heroism, modesty, eminent renown, intelligence, humility, splendour, endurance, cheerfulness and joyousness, exist continually in Achyuta. You ought all to tolerate this teacher arisen in the world (or successful in the world), this father, preceptor, venerable, honoured, deserving of honour. Priest, preceptor, marriageable man, householder, king, beloved,—Hrishikesa is all this, and therefore he has been honoured. It is Krishna who is the origin and the destruction of the worlds: all this universe, moveable and immoveable, has come into being through (or for the sake of) Krishna.<sup>155</sup> He is undistinguishable matter (prakṛiti) and he is the eternal maker, transcending all beings: hence Achyuta is most worthy of honour. Intellect, mind, the great one (mahat), air, fire, water, sky, and earth—whatever fourfold being exists—all depends upon Krishna. . . . . 1396: The divine Keśava is chief among the worlds including the gods. But this foolish man, S'isupāla, does not know that Krishna [is] everywhere and always—and hence he speaks thus. For this king of the Chedis does not regard righteousness in the same way as an intelligent man who can distinguish eminent righteousness. Who is there, whether among old or young, or among mighty kings, who will not regard Krishna as honourable, or who will not reverence him? S'isupāla treats this honour as unduly paid. But it having been unduly paid; he should act as is befitting.”

S'isupāla afterwards renews his denunciations of Krishna, in a long harangue, of which the following is a specimen (rv. 1433 ff.):

<sup>156</sup> The grounds urged for honouring Krishna in this and the following verses are of a different character from those in the preceding lines, which do not ascribe to him any qualities of a superhuman character; whilst the succeeding ones do. It is quite possible that the whole of this description of Krishna's qualities may not be of one age, but may contain interpolations subsequently introduced.

S'isupāla answers Bhīshma: "How is it that thou, disgracing thy race, art not ashamed, old man as thou art, to terrify all the kings with many alarming [speeches]? It is very fitting [forsooth] that thou who art now existing in the neuter gender (i.e. an old man, and passionless) shouldst utter things contrary to righteousness, seeing thou art the most eminent of all the Kurus! For as a boat is tied to a boat, or as one blind man follows another, so is it with the Kurus of whom thou, Bhīshma, art the leader. Our minds have frequently been harassed by thee when detailing his (Krishṇa's) slaughter of Pūtanā<sup>157</sup> and other feats. How is it, Bhīṣma, that thy tongue, thou proud fool, is not split into a hundred pieces, when thou seekest to magnify Keśava? Thou who art ripe in knowledge, art eager to eulogise the cowherd who ought to be vilified even by the silliest of men! If in his childhood he slew Śakuni (or the bird), or the horse and bull, who had no skill in fighting, what is the wonder? If a waggon, an inanimate piece of wood, was upset by him with his foot,<sup>158</sup> what wonderful thing did he do? If the mountain Govardhana, a mere ant-hill, was held up by him for seven days,<sup>159</sup> I do not regard that as anything remarkable. Hearing that when playing on the hill-top, he had eaten a great quantity of food, these people were very much astonished. And it is no great miracle, o Bhīṣma, thou judge of duty, that he slew Kansa, the powerful king whose food he had eaten. Hast thou not heard virtuous men declaring this which I shall tell thee, who art ignorant of duty, Bhīṣma, basest of the tribe of Kurus? 'Let no one smite with his weapons women, cattle, or Brahmans, or him whose food he eats, or on whom he is dependent?' Such is the instruction which good and virtuous men always give to a virtuous [pupil]. All this, Bhīṣma, is seen by all to be falsified in thee. Thou, basest of the Kurus, eulogizing, speakest of Keśava as old in knowledge, and mature, and superior, as if I did not know him. If he, being a slayer of cattle, and of women, is to be revered,—how, Bhīṣma, can such a person merit encomium? . . . 1451. Certainly this nature of thine is base, of this there is no doubt; and hence [the nature] of these Pāṇḍavas also is shewn to be most wicked,—[these Pāṇḍavas] to whom Krishṇa is an object of the highest honour, and of whom thou art the virtuous preceptor,—thou, who art ignorant of duty, and hast gone astray from the path of good men!"

This speech excites the wrath of Bhīmasena (v. 1482), who, however, is restrained by Bhīṣma from assaulting Śiśupāla, though the latter is anxious to fight him. Bhīṣma then goes on (1494 ff.) to give Bhīmasena an account of Śiśupāla's infancy and early history. He had, it seems, been born with three eyes and four arms; and his parents, alarmed at his portentous appearance, were disposed to cast him out, but were prevented by a voice from the sky, which declared to them that the time fated for his death had not yet arrived. In answer to his mother's enquiry, the voice informed her that her son was doomed to die by the hands of the person who should take him into his lap, and by so doing should occasion his two superfluous arms to drop off, and his third eye to disappear. A part of this prediction was fulfilled when Krishna came and took him into his lap, and the infant got rid of his superfluous members.<sup>160</sup> On seeing this, his mother begged a boon from Krishna, viz., that he would forgive Śiśupāla's offences. Krishna promises to pardon a hundred. Bhīṣma then proceeds (v. 1518 ff.):

vīra Govinda-rara-darpiṭaḥ | Naishā Chedi-pater buddhir yayā tvā "hva-

"Thus this wicked king Śiśupāla, slow of understanding, proud of the boon conferred by Govinda, challenges thee, o hero. This does not shew wisdom in the lord of the Chedis, that he challenges thee who art Achyuta. For this is the fixed opinion of Krishna, the sustainer of the world, 'What king on earth, o Bhīmasena, ought to-day to revile me, deprived by destiny of his reason, like this degrader of his race?' For this large-armed (Śiśupāla) is certainly [an emanation of] the strength, and a portion, of Hari, which the pervading [deity] wishes to draw back again [into himself]; in consequence of which, o chief of the Kurus, this foolish king of the Chedis growls loudly, like a tiger, disregarding us all."

Śiśupāla here breaks in angrily (v. 1524 ff.) and asks why Kṛṣṇa should be so praised to the exclusion of all other warlike kings. Bhīṣma replies (1551), that he values not a straw all the other chiefs who were present. On hearing this, some of them became greatly incensed; and some cried out that Bhīṣma should be killed or burned. Bhīṣma replied that they might slay or burn him if they pleased, but that Kṛṣṇa, the object of his reverence, would survive, and that anyone who was desirous to incur speedy destruction should challenge him to fight. Śiśupāla hereupon challenges Kṛṣṇa; and the narrative proceeds:

“ Having heard Bhīṣma, the king of the Chedis, mighty in valour, desirous to fight with Vāsudeva, then addressed the latter: ‘ I challenge thee, approach to combat with me, Janārdana, till I slay thee with all the Pāṇḍavas. For together with thee, Kṛishṇa, I must utterly destroy the Pāṇḍavas, who, passing over kings, have honoured thee who art no king. They who, through childishness, honour thee, a fool, who art a slave, and no king, and who art unworthy, as if thou wert worthy, [they, I say,] ought in my opinion to be slain.’ Having so spoken, the chief of kings stood raging and impatient. Kṛishṇa then addressed these mild words to all the kings and the Pāṇḍavas, in their presence: ‘ This son of Sātvatī, o princes, is the bitter enemy, truculent and ill-disposed, of us the Sāttvatas, who have done him no wrong. This malignant man, our sister’s son, knowing that we had set out for the city of the Prāgyjyōtiṣas, burned Dvārakā. While the king of the Bhojas was formerly amusing himself on the Revata mountain, he slew and captured them all, and then returned home. Bent upon wickedness, to interrupt my father’s sacrifice, he carried off the horse intended as a victim, which had been let loose, attended by keepers. He in his infatuation carried off the wife of the devotee Babhru, who had set out to return to [the country of] the Sauvīras, who had gone hence, and who had no passion [for him]. Under a magical disguise, he wickedly carried off for the Kārusha the devout and virtuous Bhadrā Vaisālī, [the daughter] of my maternal uncle. For the sake of my father’s sister (Sīsupāla’s mother), I submit to great vexation. Luckily, this occurs to-day in presence of all the princes, for ye all behold the great transgression committed against me. As for the offences which have been done out of your sight, learn them now from me. I shall not to-day be able to endure this transgression of this infatuated man, who, for his presumption, deserves to be slain in the assembly of princes. He who is doomed to die, sought to gain Rukmīnī, but the fool did not obtain her, as a Sūdra is excluded from the veda.' Hearing these and such other words of Vāsudeva, all the princes together then reviled the king of the Chedis. But the mighty Śiśupāla, hearing these words, laughed a sonorous laugh, and thus spake: 'How is it that thou art not ashamed, Kṛṣṇā, thus in the assembly, and especially before the princes, to make mention of Rukmīnī, who was betrothed to me?'<sup>161</sup> For what man but thou, Madhusūdana, after reflection, would mention among respectable persons a woman who had been betrothed to another? Forgive me, Kṛṣṇa, if thou hast generosity, or refuse to forgive me. What shall happen to me from thee whether thou art well-pleased or angry?' As he thus spake, the divine Madhusūdana in his mind thought upon the discus, the humbler of the pride of the Daityas. The discus having come into his hand at that very time, the divine being, skilled in words, uttered aloud this word: 'Let the kings listen to me by whom this forgiveness has been practised. At the request of his mother, a hundred offences were to be pardoned. That request was granted by me, and it has been fulfilled, o kings. I shall now slay him, while you kings look on.' Having thus spoken, the chief of the Yadus, the vexer of his foes, incensed, instantly struck off the head of

Duryodhana, the son of Dhritarāshtra, and the principal leader of the Kurus, is represented as manifesting a similar disbelief of Krishna's divine character, or at least as maintaining a proud and contumacious resistance to his claims. In the Udyoga-parva (vv. 2523 ff.), Sanjaya unfolds the divine nature of Krishna, “who,” he says, “being distinct in nature, and self-subdued, is able, by a thought, to subject to himself the earth, the air, and the heaven” (prithivīṅchāntarīkṣaṅcha dyāṅchaiva Puruṣottamaḥ | manasaiva viśiṣṭātmā nayaty ātma-vāsaṁ vaśi |) He then goes on to say :

<sup>162</sup> We are told in the Vishnu Purāṇa (see Wilson's translation, p. 437) that S'isupala had been in a former birth the Daitya Hiranyakaśipu, who was killed by Vishnu in his man-lion incarnation. He afterwards became Ravana, who was slain by Rāma. In his character as S'isupala he evinced a greater hatred than ever towards Vishnu, “a portion of the supreme being, who had descended to lighten the burthens of the earth,” and was in consequence slain by him; but as his thoughts were “constantly engrossed by the supreme being,” S'isupala became united with him after death; for the lord gives “to those to whom he is favourable whatever they desire,” and “bestows a heavenly and exalted station even upon those whom he slays in his displeasure.” This is further explained in the next section, where we are told that Krishna as an object of hatred was ever present to S'isupala's thoughts, and that he was constantly uttering his names, and though this was done disrespectfully and in malediction, yet he at last beheld the deity in his true character when he was being slain by him, and that then all his passion and hatred ceased, and his sins were consumed by his divine adversary, with whom he became united. The attempt of S'isupala's brother, king of the Śālvas (whose capital was Saubha), to revenge his death, his assault on Dvārakā, his desire to slay Krishna, and the destruction which he thereby drew upon himself, are narrated in the Vana-parva, vv. 615-890.

“On the one side the whole world, on the other Janārdana,—in his essence Janārdana exceeds the whole world. He could by a thought reduce this world to ashes; but the whole world could not reduce him to ashes. Since he is truth, righteousness, modesty, rectitude,—therefore is he Govinda; since he is Krishna, he is therefore victory. The chief of males (or spirits), Janārdana, the soul of beings, imparts activity to the earth, air, and sky, as if in sport. He having made the Pāṇdavas a sacrifice, deluding, as it were, the world, wishes to burn up thy (Dhṛitarāshṭra's) infatuated and unrighteous sons. The divine Keśava by his own abstraction (yoga) makes the circles of time, of the world, and of the ages (yugas), continually to revolve. This divine being alone is lord of time, of death, and of things moveable and immoveable,—this I tell thee as a truth. Hari, the great contemplator, though the lord of the whole world, undertakes to perform works, like a poor peasant seeking gain. He deceives the world by this display of delusion whereby the men who seek him are bewildered. Dhṛitarāshṭra said: How dost thou know Mādhava, the great lord of the whole world? and how is it that I do not know him?—tell me that, Sañjaya. Sañjaya answered: Hear, o king, thou hast not knowledge; but to me knowledge is not wanting. He who is devoid of knowledge, and sunk in darkness, does not recognize Keśava. By knowledge I recognize Madhusūdana who exists in the three ages (yugas), the maker, the unmade, the god, the source of beings, and the cause of their destruction.” Dhṛitarāshṭra asks Sañjaya for a further explanation of his devotion to Krishna. Sañjaya proceeds: “I do not pursue a delusion, bless thee, nor do I vainly practise righteousness. Having by devotion attained to purity, I know Janārdana from the scripture (śāstra). Dhṛitarāshṭra said: Duryodhana, do thou seek Hṛishīkeśa, Janārdana: Sanjaya is to us an authoritative teacher: go to Keśava as thy refuge. Duryodhana said: If the divine son of Devakī should destroy the worlds, I should not, declaring friendship for Arjuna, resort to-day to Keśava."

Duryodhana is hereupon reproved by his father and mother for his pride, self-will, and ambition, and is told by the latter that "when he has received his death-blow from Bhīmasena, he will remember the words of his father (nihatō Bhīmasenena smṛtāsi vachanam pituḥ)."

After some further conversation, Dhṛitarāshṭra asks to be further instructed about Kṛishṇa, when Sanjaya proceeds as follows (vv. 2560 ff.):

"Sanjaya says: Thou hast heard from me the auspicious explanation of Vāsudeva's names, as far as I understand the subject; for Keśava is immeasurable. He is to be known as Vāsudeva from his dwelling (vasanāt) in all beings, from his issuing as a Vāsu from a divine womb. From his greatness (vṛihatvāt) he is called Viṣṇu. From his silence, (maunāt) contemplation, and abstraction, do thou know him to be Mād-hava. From his possessing the nature of all principles, he is Madhuhān, and Madhusūdana. The word krishi denotes 'earth,' and na denotes 'cessation' (?); Vishṇu, from containing the nature of these things, is Krishna, the Sātvata. Puṇḍarīka means the highest abode, eternal, unchangeable, undecaying: from his having that character he is Puṇḍarīkāxa. From terrifying the Dasyus he is Janārdana. Inasmuch as he does not fall from, or fail in, existence (sattva), therefore, from his existence, he is Sātrata, and from his excellence (ārshabhat) he is Vrishabhexana. As he is not generated by a father, he is the unborn, the victorious in battle. From the self-illumination of the gods, and from self-restraint (dama), the all-pervading is Dāmodara. He obtains his character as Hṛṣīkeśa from joy (harsha), pleasure, and the ease with which he rules. Sustaining the two worlds with his arms, he is called Mahābāhu (great-armed). Since he never sinks downwards (adho na xīyate) he is Adhoṛaja. From movement among men (narāṇām<sup>163</sup> ayana) he is called Nārāyana. From filling (pūrṇāt) and from abiding (śadanāt) he is Purushottama. Since he is the source and the destruction of everything (sarasya) both non-existent and existent, and since he always knows all, they call him Sarva. Krishna is based on truth (satye) and truth is based on him, and from his truth Govinda is truth, therefore he is also called Satya. The god is called Vishṇu from striding (vikramaṇāt), Jishṇu from conquering (jayanāt), Ananta from his eternity, and Govinda from the knowledge of cattle<sup>164</sup> (vedanūd gayām).

<sup>164</sup> Another explanation of this name is given in the Śantiparva, v. 13228 f.: Nashyān cha dharaṇam purāṇam acindam vai gahayatām | Govinda iti tenaham devair vāgbbir abhishṭutah | "And since I discovered the earth which had formerly been destroyed, and had sunk into the abyss, I was therefore lauded by the gods with praises as Govinda." And in the following verse, occurring in the description of the ocean, in the Ādi-parva, v. 1216, the word Govinda is thus interpreted: Gūḍo vindatā bhagavatā Govindenūmitojasā | varūha-rūpiṇā chāntur vicchhita-jalvīlam | "[That ocean] which was rendered turbid when its waters were agitated within by the divine Govinda of illimitable power, who in the form of a boar found the earth [beneath its surface]." I notice in the same passage another verse (1215) which seems to show that, at the period when it was written, the Hindūs were acquainted with the cause of the tides, or at least with the influence of the moon upon the ocean: Chandra-xiddhi-xaya-vasūd uterittormi-samākulam | "The ocean [tossed with waves which rise in obedience to the waxing and waning of the moon."

He makes the reality an unreality, and so deludes creatures. Of such a character, constant in righteousness, is the divine Madhusūdāna. For the great-armed Achyuta (or unfailing deity) will come for the abolition of cruelty."

The following is another illustration of Duryodhana's enmity to Krishnā, and of his scepticism in regard to the supernatural character of that personage, at the same time that it shews the writer's faith in the divine nature of his hero. It is related in the Udyoga-parva that Krishnā went to the Kurus, with the intention of mediating between them and the Pandus. While he was with them, Duryodhana plotted to confine him (v. 4368), but Vidura warns the plotter that his attempt would be vain, owing to the divine power of Krishnā. On the conclusion of Vidura's speech, Krishnā addresses himself to Duryodhana (4418 ff.):

Vidureṇaivam uktaḥ tu Keśavaḥ śatru-pūga-hā | Duryodhanaṁ Dhārt-tarāśhṭram abhyabhāshata vīryavān | eko 'ham iti yad mohād manyase mām Suyodhana | paribhūya sudurbuddhe grahitum mām chikīrshasi | ihaiva Pāṇḍavāḥ sarve tathairāṇḍhaka-vṛishṇayaḥ | ihādityāścha Rudrāś cha Vasavaś cha saharshābhīḥ | ecam uktvā jahāsochchaiḥ Keśavaḥ para-vīra-hā | tasya saṁsmayataḥ Saurer vidyud-rūpā mahātmanah | aṅgushṭha-mātrās tribaśā mumuchuh pāvakaṛchishah | asya Brahmā lalāṭa-stho Rudro varasi chābharaṭ | loka-pālā bhujesho āsann Agnir āsyād ajāyata | Ādityāś chaiva Sādhyāś cha Vasavo 'thāśvīnāv api | Marutaś cha sahen-drena Viśve devāś tathairā cha | babhūvus chaika-rūpāni Yava-Gandharva-Raxasām | prādūrāstaṁ tathā dorbhyām Saṅkarshaṇa-Dhanañjayau | daxiṇe 'thārjjuṇo dhanuṛ hali Rāmaś cha savyataḥ | Bhīmo Yudhisthiraś chaiva Mādri-putrau cha prishṭhataḥ | Andhakā Vṛishṇayaś chaiva Pradyumna-pramukhāś tataḥ | agre babhūvuh Kṛishṇasya samudyata-mahāyudhāḥ | śaṅkha-chakra-gadā-śakti-śārṅga-lāṅgala-nandakāḥ | adriś-yantodyatāny eva sarva-praharaṇāni cha | nānā-bāhushu Kṛishṇasya dip-yamūnāni sarvaśah | ityādi

"Being thus addressed, the heroic Keśava, slayer of hostile bands, thus addressed Duryodhana, son of Dhṛitarāshṭra: 'Since, Suyodhana, thou, in thy delusion, regardest me as if I were alone, and, o fool, seekest to overcome and confine me, [know that] here are all the Pāṇḍavas, the Andhakas, and the Vrishnis, as well as the Ādityas, Rudras, and Vasus, together with the rishis.' Having thus spoken, Keśava, slayer of hostile heroes, laughed aloud. As the mighty descendant of Sūra [Krishṇa] smiled, the gods, wearing the appearance of lightning, of the size of a thumb, and luminous as fire, issued forth from him. Brahmā occupied his forehead, Rudra was produced on his chest, the guardians of the world appeared on his arms, and Agni sprang from his mouth. The Ādityas, too, and the Sādhyas, Vasus, Aśvins, Maruts, and all the gods along with Indra were produced, and also the forms of the Yaxas, Gandharvas, and Rāxasas. Sankarshana and Dhananjaya also were manifested from his arms, Arjuna armed with a bow from his right, and Rāma with a plough from his left, Yudishthira and Bhīma, the sons of Mādri, from his back. Next Andhakas and Vrishnis, headed by Pradyumna, arose on his front, with their weapons ready. A shell, discus, club, spear, bow, plough, and sword, were seen prepared, and all weapons, gleaming in every form on the different arms of Krishṇa.”

In the next passage, taken from the Karna-parva, also, Duryodhana, and other warriors on his side, put themselves on the same level as Krishṇa (except in one place, vv. 1625 ff.). It is there related (vv. 1265 ff.) that Karna promised to Duryodhana to encounter and slay Arjuna, or be slain by him. Karna says, however, that in some respects he is inferior to Arjuna; as, for instance, in not having such a charioteer as Arjuna had in Govinda (Krishṇa); (v. 1302 : Sārathis tasya Govinda mama tādriṇ na vidyate); while in other respects he regards himself as having the advantage (v. 1304). As, then, Krishṇa, creator of the world, preserves the car of Arjuna (Kṛishṇas̄ cha sraśtū jagato ratham tam abhīṣṭati<sup>163</sup>), if, in like manner, Salya, king of the Madras, the ornament of the battle-field, who is equal to Sauri (Krishṇa) and is well skilled in horses, will act as his charioteer, Karna thinks the victory of Duryodhana's side will be certain (v. 1308 : Ayaṁ tu sadṛśaḥ Sūreḥ Salyaḥ samiti-śobhanaḥ | sārathyaṁ yadi me karyād dhruvas te vijayo bhavet | . . . 1311 : Eṣam abhyadhikaḥ Pārthāt bharishyami gunair aham | Salyo 'py abhyadhikaḥ Kṛishṇād Arjunād api chāpy aham | yathā 'śva-hṛidayāṁ veda Dāsārhaḥ para-vīra-hā | tathā Salyo 'pi jānīte

haya-jñānaṁ mahārathah |) Duryodhana then goes to Sālyā and asks him to act as charioteer to Karna, saying that he (Sālyā) was equal to Krishna, that there was no other person who could drive Karna but himself; and that Brahmā had fulfilled the same office to Mahādeva (v. 1328 f. : Sārathyaṁ rathināṁ śreṣṭha prañayāt karttum arhasi | trayi yantari Rādheyo vidriṣho me rījeshyate | abhīṣhñāṁ hi Karnasya grahītā 'nyo na vidyate | ṛite hi tvāṁ mahābhāga Vāsudeva-samāṇ yudhi | sa pūhi sarvathā Karnaṁ yathā Brahmā Mahēśvaram |). Sālyā, however, is very much offended (v. 1354 f.) that a person of his dignity should be asked to undertake the office of charioteer, and boasts that he is superior to Karna, and could alone destroy their enemies. He points to his thick arms, which would smite like a thunderbolt, and asserts that he could by his own strength cleave asunder the earth, scatter the mountains, and dry up the seas (v. 1361 : Paśya pīṇau mama bhujau rajra-saṁhananopamau | . . . 1363 : Dārayeyam mahīm kṛtsnām vikīreyaṁ cha parvatān | Śoṣhayeyāṁ samudrāṇś cha tejasā svena pārthiva |). He will not brook to undertake the inferior office of driving a person who is his own inferior<sup>166</sup> (v. 1365 : Kasmād yunaxi sārathye nīchasyādhirathe rane | na mām adhurī rājendra niyoktuṁ tvam ihārhasi | na hi pūṇyasaḥ śreyān bhūtvā preṣhyatvam utsahe |). He threatens, in consequence of the insult thus offered to him, to go home (v. 1375); and accordingly rises and goes, but is followed by Duryodhana, who endeavours to soothe him by saying that he did not regard Karna as superior to him (v. 1379 : Na Karṇo 'bhyadhikas tvattah), but considered Karna to be superior to Arjuna; while the world regarded him (Sālyā) as superior to Krishna, whom he excelled in strength, as well as in knowledge of horses and their dispositions, (v. 1384 : Manye chābhyadhikāṁ Sālyā guṇaiḥ Karnaṁ Dhanañjayāt | bhavantaṁ Vāsudevāch cha loko 'yam iti manyate | Karṇo hy abhyadhikah Pārthūd astrair eva narar-shabha | bhavān abhyadhikah Kṛishnūd āśva-jñāne bale tathā | yathā 'śva-hṛidayāṁ veda Vāsudevo mahāmanah | driguṇāṁ traṁ tathā vetsy Madra-rājesvarātmaja |). Sālyā is flattered by his being reckoned superior to Krishna, and agrees to act as charioteer to Karna, vv. 1387 ff. : Yad mām bravīshi Gāndhāre madhye saīnyasya Kaurava | viśiṣṭaṁ Devakī-puttrāt prītimāṇ asmy ahaṁ trayi | eṣa sārathyam ātiṣṭhe Rādheyasya

“I am pleased with thee, Kaurava, since in the midst of the army thou declarest me to be superior to the son of Devakī. I undertake to be charioteer to the renowned Karna when he fights with the chief of the Pandus, as thou, hero, thinkest [I ought to do]. And now that I have entered into a certain agreement with Karna, let me candidly excuse to him the words I have used. Sanjaya proceeded: “Thy son (i.e.
Duryodhana) having assented, declared to Karna the resolution of the king of the Madras (Salya).”

Though he had thus gained his point, by persuading Salya to act as charioteer to Karna, Duryodhana is nevertheless represented as proceeding, in the next three sections, the 33rd-35th, vv. 1391 ff., (which, for reasons to be afterwards assigned, I regard as probably interpolated,) to repeat to Salya an ancient legend, telling how Brahmā had formerly done duty as charioteer to Mahādeva in a war between the gods and Asuras. In this war the gods, it is related, were at first the victors (1394). The three sons of the Āsura Tāraka thereupon performed severe austerities, which induced Brahmā to grant them a boon (1397). They asked that they might become indestructible by any being whatever, which, however, Brahmā declined to grant, as immortality, he said, was not an universal attribute (1399). They then asked that they should occupy three cities, and from thence move about the earth at will, and that after a thousand years these three cities should become united, and that they themselves should only be destructible by the deity who should be able to overthrow the cities with a single arrow, (1402 ff.: *Vayam purāṇi trīṇy eva samasthāya mahīm imām | vicharishyāmo loke 'smim . . .
tato varsha-sahasre tu sameshyāmah parasparam | ekibhāvāṁ gumishy-tadā | ekeshuṇā devā-varaḥ sa no mṛityur bharishyati*}). Brahmā granted this boon, and the Asura Maya built them three cities, one of gold, in heaven; a second of silver, in the air; and a third of black iron, on

occupied, and where innumerable hosts of formidable demons were collected. Maya, by his magical power, gave them everything that any of them wished (1415): and Hari, the son of Tārakāxa, obtained as a boon from Brahmā that there should be a pond in their city, into which, when any Asuras slain in battle were thrown, they should be resuscitated and become stronger than ever (1418 ff.). Armed with all these powers, the Asuras harassed the worlds, putting to flight the celestial hosts, and destroying the gardens of the gods, and the hermitages of the rishis (1421 ff.). Indra attacked the cities of the Asuras with his thunderbolts, but without effect (1427). He then went with the other gods to consult Brahmā about the means of overthrowing the demons (1429 ff.). Brahmā replied that the cities could only be destroyed by a single arrow, and that this could only be effected by Mahādeva (1431), to whom they should apply. The deities, then, headed by Brahmā himself, went to supplicate Mahādeva, the soul of all things, by whom the universe is pervaded, who, through particular austerities, knows the yoga and the sāṅkhya of himself, (or of spirit,) and whose spirit is always in subjection,—(they went to supplicate him) practising rites of austerity, repeating the eternal Veda, and uttering awful or fierce hymns, (1437 ff.: Tapo-niyamam āsthāya gr̥ṇanto brahma sūśatam | . . . tushṭuvuḥ vāyubhir ugrābhīr bhayeshv abhaya-dān̄ nṛipa | sarvātmānam mahātmānām yenāptaīm sarvām ātmanā | tapo-viśeshair vīṛidhair yogaṁ yo veda chātmanah | yaḥ sāṅkhyam ātmano veti yasya chātmā vaśe sadā |). They beheld Mahādeva, to whom a variety of other honorific epithets are applied, such as “the essence of all beings, the unborn, the lord of the world” (1442: sarva-bhūtanamayaṁ drishtvā tam ajam jagataḥ patim |). Mahādeva received them smiling, and invites them to state their wishes (1444). They then recite a number of his epithets (1445 ff.), and Brahmā replies on their behalf (1455 ff.) that he himself, who had obtained from Mahādeva his rank of Prajāpati, had bestowed a boon on the Dānavas, that they had in consequence transgressed all bounds, and that now there was no one but Mahādeva who could destroy them,—which he was therefore implored to do. Mahādeva answers (1459) that he could not destroy them himself, but that, with the aid of half his strength, they themselves would be able to conquer their enemies. They answered that they could not contain half of his strength (vibhartuṁ tava tejo

'rdham na śasyāmaḥ), but proposed that he should undertake the work, aided by half of their strength. To this Mahādeva consented, and became stronger than all the gods, and was thenceforward called Mahādeva, or "the great god," (arddham ādāya sarveśhām tejasā 'bhy-adhiko bhavat | sa tu dero balenāsīt sarrebhyo balavattarah | Mahādeva iti khyātas tataḥ prabhṛiti Śuṅkarah |). Mahādeva then (1468) desired the gods to provide him with a bow and arrows, and a chariot. The gods promised to provide a chariot which should be composed of all the forms of the universe (1469 : mūrtīḥ sarvāḥ samādhyāya trailokyasya tatas tataḥ | ratham te kalpayishyāmaḥ |). The composition of the car, formed by Visvakarman and the gods, is then described at great length (vv. 1471-1492). Vishṇu, Soma, and Agni became different parts of Mahādeva's bow and arrow; the earth became his chariot, the mountain Mandara its axle; and the great river, the regions, the constellations, the Kṛita age, the serpent Vāsuki, the Himalaya and Vindhya mountains, plants, the sun and moon, day and night, various goddesses, duty, truth, the vashatkāra, the gāyatrī, etc, formed portions of the car, or of its appurtenances. Mahādeva's weapons and equipments are then specified (1495 ff.). At verse 1503 it is repeated that "Vishṇu, Agni, and Soma formed his arrow, for all the world," it is added, "is formed of Agni and Soma, and is said to be composed of Vishṇu, and Vishṇu is the soul of Mahādeva of boundless power."<sup>163</sup> Hence they could not abide the bow, or the contact of the bowstring of Hara. In that arrow the terrible god, dark-blue, and dusky in hue, clad in an antelope's skin, hurled forth the fire of wrath, of fierce intolerable fury, and sprung from the rage of Bhṛigu and Angiras. . . . He is the constant preserver of virtuous, and destroyer of wicked, men. The divine Sthānu (Mahādeva) shines forth distinguished by these inherent qualities, which are destructive, fearful in power, fearful in form, and rapid as thought. This whole universe, moveable and immoveable, existing contained in his members, shone forth, wonderful to behold." (Iśhūś chāpy abhavat Vishṇur Jvalanaḥ Somaś cha | Agnī-Somaṁ jagat kṛitsnaṁ Vaiśṇavaṁ chochyate jagat | Vishṇuś chātma bhagavato Bhavasyāmita-tejasah | tasmād dhanur jyā-saṁsparśam na vishetur Harasya te | tasmin śare tigma-manyum mumochāsahyam Īścarah | Bhṛigv-Angirō-manyu-bhavaṁ krodhāgnim ati-dussaham | sa nīla-lohito

Taking the arrow produced from Soma, Viṣṇu, and Agni, Mahādeva mounted the car which had been made for him (1510 ff.). He then smilingly asked (1515) who was to be his charioteer. The gods answered that any one whom he should appoint would undertake that office. He then said that the god who was greater than he should be made his charioteer. The gods next went to Brahmā and asked him to appoint one (1520), expressing an opinion that he himself was the only person who was fit for the office (1526). Brahmā consented (1530 ff.). Mahādeva is again represented as mounting the car, with the arrow produced from Viṣṇu, Soma, and Agni in his hand (1535). He then sets out,<sup>169</sup> and arrives at the triple city of the Asuras (1551), when some of the Asuras are destroyed by the roaring of his bull (1553), and others come forth to battle. Mahādeva becomes insensate with rage. The three worlds tremble. The chariot begins to sink from the agitation of Soma, Agni, and Viṣṇu in the arrow, and from the movement of Brahmā and Mahādeva. Viṣṇu then issues from a portion of the arrow (1556), takes the form of a bull, and raises up the chariot. Mahādeva fits his arrow on the string (1562), and discharges it against the triple city (1567), which falls to the ground, while the Asuras are burnt up and thrown by Mahādeva into the western ocean. The gods praise Mahādeva and depart (1572).

Duryodhana now (1575 ff.) makes his application of this legend by exhorting Śalya to follow Brahmā's example, and act as charioteer to Karna. Śalya, he adds, is superior to Kṛiṣṇa, Karna, and Arjuna, and as Karna resembled Mahādeva in fighting, so Śalya resembled Brahmā in guiding [a chariot], etc. To supply additional motives for compliance, he then (1581 ff.) goes on to tell Śalya another story about Paraśurāma performing austerity to propitiate Mahādeva and obtain celestial arms. Mahādeva appears to him and tells him he shall obtain arms when he has qualified himself by purification to obtain them. Paraśurāma renews his penances and religious ceremonies (1591), and is at length appointed by Mahādeva to slay the Daityas who had been harassing the gods (1599). He successfully accomplishes this task (1806) and receives celestial arms from Mahādeva. Paraśurāma had, as Duryodhana goes on to say, taught the divine science of archery to Karna (1613), which proves that Karna is free from sin; and Karna is not, as Duryodhana believes, a Sūta or charioteer by birth, but a son of one of the gods, born in a Xatriya family. For how could a doe give birth to a tiger (1617)? Duryodhana then recurs to the legend of Brahmā becoming Mahādeva's charioteer, and renews his exhortation to Śalya to perform the same office to Karna. Śalya appears now to waver in his determination, formerly expressed, to comply with Duryodhana's request, as he replies (1625) that he himself had often heard this story before; and that Krishna also had no doubt heard of it, as he knows the future and the past, and that he had for that reason consented to be the charioteer of Arjuna. And, Śalya adds, if Karna should slay Arjuna, Krishna would himself fight, and armed with the shell, discus, and club, burn up the whole of Duryodhana's army, and no one would be able to stand before him when he was incensed, (Yadi hunyāch chū Kaunteyaṁ Sūta-putrah kathauṇhana | drishṭvā Pārtham hi nihataṁ svayaṁ yotsyati Keśarah | śaṅkha-chakra-gadā-pāṇir dhazyate tava vāhinīm | na chāpi tasya kruddhasya Vārshneyasya mahātmanah | sthāsyaṁ pratyānikeshu kaśchid atra nripas tava). Duryodhana in reply expatiates on the eminent prowess of Karna, and of Śalya himself: (1643) Tvam śalya-bhūtaḥ śatrūṇām arishalyah paṇīkrame | tataḥ tvam uchyase rājan Śalya ity ari-sūdana | tava bāhu-balaṁ prāpya nā śekuḥ sarva-Sāttvatāḥ | tava bāhu-balād rājan kintu Kṛishno balādhikah | yathā hi Kṛishṇena balaṁ dhāryaṁ vai Phālgune hate | tathā Karnātyayibhāve tvayā dhāryam mahad-balaṁ | kimarthaṁ samare sainyaṁ Vāsudevo nyavārayet (sic) | kimarthaṁ cha bhavān sainyaṁ na hanishyati Mārisha | "Thou art a spear (śalya) to [pierce] thine enemies, irresistible in valour: hence, o king, destroyer of thy foes, thou art called Śalya.<sup>170</sup> Feeling the power of thy arm, all the Sāttvatas could not [resist]. But [it is said that ?] Krishna is superior in force to the strength of thy arm. Just as great strength is to be exhibited by Krishna, if Arjuna were killed ; so is great strength to be put forth by thee, if Karna were slain. Why should Krishna withstand [our] army ? and why shouldst not thou slay the [enemy's] host ?" Salya then answers (1648 ff.) in the same words<sup>171</sup> which had formerly been assigned to him in vv. 1387-9 : " I am pleased with thee, bestower of honour, since before the army thou declarest me to be superior to the son of Devakī. I undertake to be charioteer to the renowned Karna," etc. This repetition of the same speech of Salya at the close of the episode regarding Mahādeva's conquest of the Asuras with Brahmā for his charioteer, and Paraśurāma's acquisition of celestial weapons, renders it probable, as I have already said, that this episode has been subsequently interpolated. As Salya had already consented, in vv. 1387 ff., to do duty as Karna's charioteer, it was quite unnecessary to detail at great length the legend of Brahmā and Mahādeva, which had been already briefly alluded to in verse 1330, and which is merely followed by a renewed expression of Salya's willingness to comply with the request of Karna and Duryodhana.

IV. In various parts of the Mahābhārata Krishna and Arjuna are singularly represented as having formerly existed in the persons of two rishis, Nārāyana and Nara, who always lived and acted together. A similar close union exists between the two heroes in the various transactions narrated in the great epic. Their earlier connection will appear from the following passages,<sup>172</sup> in which, however, these two rishis are always represented as possessed of supernatural or divine powers.

It is related in the Vana-parva (vv. 461 ff.) that Krishna, having gone with other friends of the Pāṇḍus to visit them after they had retired into the forest, expressed great indignation at the way in which they had been treated by Duryodhana and his party. Arjuna (one of the Pāṇḍus), with the view of soothing Krishna, recounts (vv. 471 ff.)

his marvellous deeds in former births, his austerities, his slaughter of the Daityas and Dānavas (478), his various forms (480), his three strides as the son of Aditi (484),<sup>173</sup> and his destruction of various enemies (487 ff.); and then proceeds thus (vv. 496 ff.) :

“ ‘At the end of the mundane period (yuga), thou to Madhusūdana, vexer of thy foes, having caused all created things to the lapse, and by thyself made them subject to thyself, wast the world. At the commencement of the yuga, o Vārshneya (Krishṇa), Brahmā, the chief of things moveable and immoveable, whose [is] all this world, sprang from the lotus issuing from thy navel. Two horrible Dānavas, Madhu and Kaiṭabha, were ready to slay him. From the forehead of Hari, who became incensed when he saw their transgression, was produced Sambhu (Mahādeva), wielding the trident, and three-eyed. Thus even those two lords of the gods (Brahmā and Mahādeva) are sprung from his (Krishṇa's) body, and they execute his commands,—this Nārada declared to me. So, too, o Krishṇa, Nārāyana, thou didst formerly celebrate a great sacrifice in the Chaitraratha forest, with oblations and many gifts. The ancients [have] not [done], nor shall those who are to come do, the deeds which thou didst, Puṇḍarikāxa, even when a child, mighty in power, accompanied by Baladeva. And thou didst dwell with the Brāhmins in the abode of Kailāsa.' Having thus addressed that great being, the Pāṇḍava (Arjuna, who was) the soul of Krishna, became silent. Then Janārdana (Krishna) thus addressed the son of Prithā: 'Thou art mine, and I am thine; <sup>174</sup> those who are mine are thine also. He who hates thee hates me; he who loves (lit. follows) thee loves me. Thou, invincible hero, art Nara, and I am Hari Nārāyaṇa: in due time we came into this world, the rishis Nara and Nārāyaṇa. Thou, son of Prithā, art not different from me, nor, in like manner, I from thee; no distinction can be conceived between us.' "

Again, it is related in the Vana-parva that, with the view of obtaining celestial weapons, Arjuna, at the suggestion of Indra (vv. 1513 ff.), went northward, to the top of the Hīmalāya, to see Mahādeva (vv. 1526 ff.) Arrived there, he performs austerity. The rishis, not knowing his object, are alarmed, and go to tell Mahādeva (vv. 1543 ff.), who assures them that there is no cause for apprehension, as Arjuna cherishes no ambitious designs. Mahādeva then takes his bow and arrows, and assuming form of a Kirāta (barbarous mountaineer), approaches Arjuna (vv. 1548 ff.). At that moment a Dānava, in the form of a boar, is meditating an attack upon Arjuna, who prepares to shoot him with his arrows. The Kirāta desires Arjuna to allow him to shoot the Dānava, as he had been the first to take aim; but Arjuna will not consent; and they both shoot together, and kill the boar. Arjuna addresses the Kirāta, and complains that he had acted in an unsportsmanlike manner (na hy esha mṛigayā-dharmo yas trayā 'dya kṛito mayi), and that he should therefore kill him. The Kirāta replies that he had aimed first, and had killed the Dānava, and would kill Arjuna also. Mahādeva, in the form of the Kirāta, and Arjuna then fight together (vv. 1582 ff.) with a succession of weapons, arrows, swords, trees, stones, etc., till at length Arjuna is squeezed by his opponent, and falls exhausted (v. 1613). He, however, revives, and worships his enemy, falling at his feet. Mahādeva expresses admiration of Arjuna's

prohess, and promises to give him an irresistible weapon which he is fit to wield. The narrative then proceeds (vv. 1622 ff.): Tuto devam Mahādevam Girisām śūlapāṇinam | dadarśa Phālgunas tatra saha devyā mahādyutim | sa jānubhyām mahīm gatvā śirasū pranipatya cha | prasādayāmāsa Haram Pārthaḥ para-purañjayaḥ | Arjuna uvācha | “Kupardin sarvadeveṣa Bhaga-netra-nipātana | deva-deva Mahādeva nīla-grīva jatā-dhara | kāraṇānāṅcha paramaṁ jāne tvām Tryambakaṁ vibhum | devānāṅcha gatiṁ deva tvat-prasūtam idaṁ jagat | ajeyas tvam tribhir lokaiḥ sa-devāsura-mānushaiḥ | Śivāya Viṣṇu-rūpāya Viṣṇave Śiva-rūpiṇe | Daxayajña-vināśāya Hari-Rudrāya vai namaḥ | lalāṭāxāya Sarvāya mīlhushe śūla-pāṇaye | pināka-goptre sūryāya mārjātīyāya vedhase | prasādaye tvām bhagavan sarva-bhūta-maheśvara | gaṇeṣām jagataḥ śambhuṁ lokakāraṇa-kāraṇam | pradhāna-puruṣhātītam paraṁ sūxmataram Haram |

“Then Phālguna (Arjuna) beheld the god Mahādeva, Girisā, bearer of the trident, resplendent, together with his goddess. Falling on the ground on his knees, and bowing his head, the son of Prithā, conqueror of hostile cities, propitiated Hara (Mahādeva) in these words: ‘God with the braided hair, lord of all the gods, extinguisher of Bhaga’s eyes, god of gods, Mahādeva (the great god), blue-necked, wearer of matted hair, I know thee to be of causes the supreme, Tryambaka, the pervading, the refuge of the gods. From thee this world has been produced. Thou art invincible by the three worlds, including the gods, Asuras and men. Adoration be to Śiva in the form of Viṣṇu, to Viṣṇu in the form of Śiva, to the destroyer of Daxa’s sacrifice, to Hari-Rudra, to him with the frontal eye, to Sarva, the beneficent, the wielder of the trident, the bearer of the bow, the sun, the cat, the disposer. I propitiate thee, divine lord of all creatures, lord of troops, benefactor of the world, cause of the causes of the world (i.e., ultimate creator of the immediate creators), who transcendest Pradhāna and Puruṣa (matter and spirit), the supreme, most subtile, Hara.”

Mahādeva then embraces Arjuna, and says to him :

ityādi | “Thou wast Nara in a former body, and with Nārāyana for thy companion, didst perform dreadful austerity at Badari for many myriads of years. Either in thee is the highest power, or in Vishṇu the supreme Purusha. By you twain, the chief of men (or Purushas), through your power, the world is upheld. At the inauguration of Sakra (Indra), the Dānavas were chastised by thee and Kṛishṇa, when thou hadst grasped a great bow resounding like the clouds.”

Mahādeva then offers Arjuna the choice of a boon. Arjuna asks the Pāśupata weapon (v. 1643) which Mahādeva gives him (v. 1650), though he cautions him against discharging it rashly, as it might destroy the whole world. Arjuna accordingly receives the weapon (v. 1656).

Again, in the Udyoga-parva (vv. 1917 ff.) it is related that Bhīṣma informed Duryodhana that on one occasion the gods of different classes came to Brahmā, and the narrative then proceeds (vv. 1920 ff.):

“Doing obeisance, the gods approached the Progenitor, the chief (or ancient) of the worlds; and encompassing, they sat around the lord of all. The two ancient and powerful gods, the rishis Nara and Nārāyana, deprived them, as it were, of thought and of strength by their splendour. Vrihaspati enquired of Brahmā, ‘Tell us, Progenitor, who these two are who do not approach thee.’ Brahmā said: ‘These devotees of mighty strength, burning and shining, who sit pervading and illuminating the earth and the sky, these are Nara and Nārāyana, who have travelled from world to world, strong by their own austerity, of great dignity and valour. These two have perpetually gladdened the world by their deeds. Know, o Priest, that these, destroyers of their foes, of great intelligence, adored of gods and Gandharvas, have become twain for the destruction of the Asuras.’ Having heard this, Indra, accompanied by all the hosts of gods, headed by Vrihaspati, went to the place where these two devotees were performing austerity. Alarm having been at that time excited among the celestials by a war between the gods and Asuras, he (Indra) begged of the great Nara and Nārāyana a boon. They replied, ‘Choose.’ Then Indra said, ‘Let us be assisted.’ They answered Indra, ‘We will do what thou desirest.’ And with their assistance Indra conquered the Daityas and Dānavas. Nara, the vexer of foes, having slain in battle the enemies of Indra, thousands and hundreds of Paulomas and Kālakanjas,—he, standing in a whirling chariot, cut off the head of Jambha,<sup>175</sup> who was swallowing up Arjuna in battle. He demolished Hiranyapura (or the city of gold), on the other side of the ocean, having slain in battle sixty thousand Nivātakavachas. The large-armed Arjuna, conqueror of hostile cities, having, along with Indra, overcome the gods, satiated Jātavedas (Agni,) [with his oblations]. In like manner Nārāyana slew many others. Thus behold those twain arrived—those twain who are of so great strength, Vāsudeva and Arjuna, united together, riders on great cars, Nara and Nārāyana, the deities, the ancient deities, as it is reported, invincible in the world of mortals even by Indra and the other gods and Asuras. This Nārāyana is Krishna, and Nara is called Phālguna (Arjuna). Nārāyana and Nara are one being, divided into twain. These two with their operation pervade the undecaying and perpetual worlds. They are born in different places at the time of battle again and again. Wherefore Nārada said that works are to be performed. All this he (Nārada) who knew the Veda said to the army of the Vrishnis. When thou shalt see Keśava (Krishna) with his shell, discus and club, and Arjuna with the dreadful bow, assuming his arms, these two eternal and glorious beings, of dark complexion, mounted on one car,—then, dear Duryodhana, thou shalt remember my words.” (Compare the same warning given in p. 182.)

It is narrated in another part of the same Udyoga-parva (vv. 3459-3488) that, in order to persuade the Kurus to adopt moderate counsels by shewing the great power of Arjuna and Krishna, Paraśurama told them another story about the two rishis Nara and Nārāyana. There was formerly, he says, an universal sovereign named Dam-bhodbhava, who had an overweening conceit of his own prowess. Being told by his independent Brāhmans that there were two ascetics whom he could not match, viz., Nara and Nārāyana, he proceeded with his army to the mountain Gandhamādana, where he found the emaciated saints, and challenged them to fight. They tried to put him off by saying that they were divested of all earthly passions, and lived in an atmosphere of peace. Dam-bhodbhava, however, insisted on fighting, when Nara took a handful of straws, and defied him. With these arms he neutralized all the arrows of Dam-bhodbhava's host, and as the straws whitened all the air, and penetrated into the eyes, ears, and noses of the assailants, Dam-bhodbhava was soon forced to fall at Nara's feet, and sue for peace. Being admonished by his conqueror to be more humble in future, he departed homeward, and ever after led a righteous life.

*Arjunaḥ Keśavasyātmā Kṛishṇo 'py ātmā Kīrīṭinaḥ | Arjune vijayo nityaṁ Kṛishṇe kīrttiścha śāśvati | sarveshv api cha lokeshu Bibhatsur aparājitaḥ | prādhānyenaiva bhūyishṭham ameyāḥ Keśave guṇāḥ | mohād Duryodhano Kṛishṇaṁ yo na rettiha Keśavam | mohito daiva-yogena mṛityu-pāśa-puraskṛitaḥ | na veda Kṛishṇaṁ Dāsārham Arjunaṁ chaiva Pāṇḍavam | pūrva-devau mahātmānau Nara-Nārāyaṇāv ubhau | ekāt-mānau dvīdhā-bhūtau drīsyete mānushair bhūri | manasā 'pi hi durdharshau senām etāṁ yaśasvinau | nāśayetām ihechhantau mānushatrūch cha ne-

“Arjuna is the soul of Keśava (Kṛishṇa), and Kṛishṇa too is the soul of Kīrīṭin (Arjuna). Victory abides perpetually with Arjuna, and eternal renown with Kṛishṇa. And even in all worlds Arjuna is unconquered. Through his pre-eminence there are infinite virtues in abundance in Keśava. [The reason why] Duryodhana, through infatuation, does not know Kṛishṇa, is that, deluded by destiny, and involved in the bonds of death, he does not recognize Kṛishṇa the Dāsārha, and Arjuna the Pāṇḍava. The former gods, the two mighty ones, Nara and Nārāyana, though, in reality, one in nature, are by men on earth seen separated into two. These illustrious [beings], who are invincible even in imagination, could, if they desired, destroy this army, but from their humanity they do not desire it.”

Again, in the Bhīshma-parva, vv. 2932 ff., Bhīshma exhorts Duryodhana to come to terms with the Pāṇḍavas who, he says, are invincible in consequence of Kṛishṇa's protection. To illustrate Kṛishṇa's divine greatness Bhīshma goes on to tell a story of his being celebrated by Brahmā in a hymn (2944 ff.), and entreated to become incarnate in the tribe of the Yadus, for the establishment of righteousness, the destruction of the Daityas, and the support of the world (2964 f.). Viṣṇu assents to Brahmā's request, and disappears. Being then asked by the attendant gods and rishis who it was that he had just worshipped, Brahmā replies as follows (2978 ff.) :

“That being who is supreme, who is to be, who shall be, and who [is] supreme, who is the soul of beings, and the lord, and who is Brahma, the supreme existence,—it is with him, propitious, that I have been conversing, o eminent deities. The lord of the world was entreated by me [in these words] to shew favour to the world : ‘Do thou who art known as Vāsudeva appear in the world of men : be born on earth for the slaughter of the Asuras. The Daityas, Dānavas, and Rāxasas who have been slain by thee in battle, they are these who have been born among men, horrible in form and great in might. To slay them, thou, the divine and mighty being, accompanied by Nara, having entered a human womb, wilt act upon earth.’ Those ancient and most excellent of rishis, Nara and Nārāyaṇa, who are invincible in battle even by the united immortals, and who are of boundless splendour, have been born together in the world of men. Those fools do not know these rishis, Nara and Nārāyaṇa. He of whom I, Brahmā, the master of the whole world, am the son, that Vāsudeva, the lord of all the worlds, is to be revered by you. Never, o most excellent deities, is the potent bearer of the shell, the discus, and the club, to be slighted as a mere man. This Being is the highest mystery, this the highest sphere, this the highest Brahma, this the highest renown. This Being is the undecaying, the undiscernible, the eternal. This Being which is called Purusha is hymned and is not known. This Being is celebrated by Viśvakarman as the highest power, as the highest joy, and as the highest truth. Wherefore Vāsudeva of boundless might is not to be condemned by the deities, including Indra, or by the Asuras, as a [mere] man. Whoever says that he is a mere man is dull of comprehension: from his contempt of Hṛishīkeśa they call such a person the lowest of men. Whoever despises Vāsudeva, that great contemplator who has entered a human body,—men call that person one full of darkness. Whoever is ignorant of the glorious god whose self is the world, whose mark is the śrīvatsa, from whose navel sprang the lotus,—men call that person full of darkness. Despising that great being who wears the diadem and jewel (kaustubha), who relieves his friends from fear, a man is plunged in horrible darkness.”<sup>176</sup>

Bhīṣma then says to Duryodhana (v. 3002): “Thou wast formerly, my son, prohibited by the contemplative munis [who said]: ‘Engage not in battle with that archer Vāsudeva and the Pāṇḍavas.’ Since thou, through infatuation, regardest not this [prohibition], I look upon thee as a cruel Rākṣasa, and thou art enveloped in darkness. It is for this reason that thou hatest Govinda (Krishna) and the Pāṇḍava Dhananjaya (Arjuna). For what other man could hate the gods Nara and Nārāyaṇa?”

The next passage is from the Śāntiparva, where Krishna, after describing many of his other forms and functions, is introduced as saying (vv. 13265 ff.):

<sup>176</sup> This passage seems to have a polemical object, and to be aimed at some contemporaries of the author, who did not assign so high a dignity to Krishna.

“Formerly, son of Prithā, most excellent of the Kurus, I was celebrated on another occasion as the son of Dharma : and hence I was called Dharmaja. In former times Nara and Nārāyaṇa, mounted on the chariot of righteousness, performed an undecaying penance, on the mountain Gandhamādana. At that conjuncture of time, the sacrifice of Daxa took place. Daxa did not then divide any share for Rudra, who in consequence, at the suggestion of Dadhīchi, swept away the sacrifice of Daxa, and in his anger launched the trident blazing forth repeatedly. That trident, after reducing to ashes the sacrifice of Daxa with all its appurtenances, suddenly approached our hermitage at Badari, and fell with great impetus on the breast of Nārāyaṇa. The hair of Nārāyaṇa penetrated by its power, became of the colour of grass (muñja) : from which I am called Muñjakośavat. The trident being repelled by the great being with an imprecation went back into the hand of Śankara, when struck by Nārāyaṇa. Rudra then ran up to those austere rishis, when Nārāyaṇa, the soul of all things, with his hand seized him by the throat, when he had thus sprung up : hence his (Śiva’s) name of Śitikantha. Nara next drew out a straw for the slaughter of Rudra, and applied to it sacred texts, whereby it speedily became a huge axe. Hastily hurled by him, the axe (paraśu) became shattered into fragments (khaṇḍana), from which shattering of the axe, he is called Khaṇḍaparaśu.” Arjuna here interposes to ask who was victorious in this conflict ; when Kṛishṇa proceeds : “ When Rudra and

Nārāyana had become engaged in battle, all the worlds were instantly distressed; the fire did not receive the shining butter offered in the sacrifice; the vedas were not revealed to the contemplative rishis; [the qualities of] passion and darkness invaded the gods: the earth trembled, the sky became split; the luminaries lost their light; Brahma fell from his seat; the ocean became dried up, and the Himavat wasted. When this prodigy had arisen, Brahmā, surrounded by the host of gods, and the magnanimous rishis, came to that disastrous place where the battle was raging. The four-faced god (Brahmā), the penetrator of mysteries (?), with joined hands, addressed these words to Rudra: 'Let the welfare of the worlds be [consulted]; put down thy weapons, lord of all, from goodwill to the universe. This is one auspicious form of him, now in the state of manifestation,—of him whom [sages] know as the undecaying, undiscernible [essence], the lord, the creator of the world, the supreme, the doer, the indivisible, and not the doer,—[this I say is one form of him, viz.], Nara and Nārāyana, born in the race of Dharma, distinguished by intense austerity, eminent gods, great devotees. I was once on another occasion born as the offspring of his pleasure, and in a former creation thou didst spring from his anger,<sup>177</sup> an everlasting [being]. Together with me and the gods and rishis, do thou speedily propitiate this bestower of boons; let the worlds have tranquillity without delay.' Being thus addressed by Brahmā, Rudra, abandoning the fire of anger, then propitiated the god Nārāyana, the lord; and the god sought as his refuge the primeval, most excellent, boon-bestowing lord. Then the boon-bestowing god, who had conquered anger and overcome his senses, meeting Rudra, became gratified. Being worshipped by the rishis, by Brahmā, and by the gods, Hari, the lord of the world, addressed the god Īśāna (Mahādeva): 'He who knows thee knows me; he who loves (lit. follows) thee loves me.<sup>178</sup> There is no distinction between us: do not thou entertain any other idea. From this day forward let this śrīvatsa of mine be the mark of the trident: and thou shalt be the śrīkauṭha marked upon my hand.' Having thus created a mark devised by each for the other, and having joined an incomparable friendship with Rudra, the two rishis practised austerity undisturbed, after dismissing the gods. This, son of Prithā, which I have told thee, was the victory of Nārāyana in battle: and [my] mysterious and unexplained names, too,—those which are celebrated by the rishis, have been declared to thee. In this manner do I frequent this earth and the world of Brahmanā, and the everlasting Goloka, in manifold forms. By me thou hast been preserved in battle, and hast gained a great victory. But know, son of Kunti, that he who goes before thee in the conflict which has now arrived, is Rudra the god of gods, with braided hair. He, Time, has been declared by me to thee to be the offspring of my anger. The enemies whom thou formerly slewest were slain by him. Devoutly reverence him the god of gods, the lord of Umā, of boundless power, Hara, the undecaying lord of all."

Again, in the Śāntiparva, Vaiśampayana tells Janamejaya how Nārada, after returning from Sveta Dvīpa, saw the two saints, Naru and Nārāyaṇa (v. 13337):

"He descended rapidly from the sky to the spacious Badari. There he saw the ancient gods, the two most excellent rishis, performing severe penance, self-sustained, great devotees, in splendour surpassing the sun which illuminates all the worlds, bearing the śrīvatsa mark, adorable, wearing a circle of matted hair, web-footed and web-armed, with the mark of the discus on their feet, broad-chested, long-armed, with four testicles, sixty teeth and eight grinders, with voices sonorous as a host of clouds, with beautiful countenances, broad foreheads, handsome eyebrows, chins, and noses. The heads of those two gods resembled umbrellas. Beholding them, distinguished by such marks, and named the two great males, Nārada rejoicing, and saluted by them in return, welcomed, and questioned in regard to his health, became absorbed in reflection, beholding those highest of persons." He then recollected to have previously seen them in the Sveta Dvīpa. Nara and Nārāyaṇa next ask him if he had seen in the Sveta Dvīpa the supreme Spirit, their own highest substance (āvayoh prakṛitih parā). He replies that he had; and that now when he beheld them he beheld Him, as they were distinguished by all the same marks, in a manifested form, as Hari possessed in an invisible manner; and that he had on that occasion beheld them at the side of the deity (vv. 13351 ff.: Adyāpi chainam paśyāmi yuvām paśyan sanātanaū | yair laxanair upetaḥ sa Harir avyakta-rūpa-dhṛik | tair laxanair upetau hi vyakta-rūpa-dharau yuvām | dṛiṣṭau yuvām mayā tatra tasya devasya pārśvataḥ |) Some further conversation ensues; and it is then related (v. 13397 f.) that Nārada remained a thousand years of the gods in their hermitage, worshipping the deity, and Nara and Nārāyaṇa.

V. In the following passage (which is commented upon by Lassen in his Indian Antiquities, i. 621 f., and note, p. 622<sup>179</sup>) Kṛishṇa is represented as possessed of extraordinary prowess and superhuman powers; but he is not, unless it be in one or two places, represented as the supreme deity.

To shew how little prospect the Kurus had of vanquishing the Pandus, aided as the latter were by Kṛishṇa, Dhṛitarashtra gives an account of the exploits of the Yādava chief:

<sup>179</sup> His remarks are as follows:—"The history of Kṛishṇa in the Mahābhārata does not describe his juvenile life with the cowherds, and his numerous adventures with their wives, which at a later period were especially noticed and celebrated. On the other hand victories over many kings and tribes are attributed to him, which possess no historical value, and are only important in so far as they represent him as a hero, and indicate that the Yādavas waged frequent wars with the tribes of ancient India. In a short enumeration of his feats (the passage quoted in the text), he is named Govinda, or the proprietor of cows, and it said of him that he grew up among the herds. None of the stories regarding him and the cowherd's wives are here mentioned; but another is introduced which describes him as a protector of the herds, inasmuch as he strangled with his arms a Dānava which in the form of a bull slaughtered the cattle. His proper and oldest name as the son of Nanda was probably Govinda. There must also have been stories about him in which he was represented as a leader of cowherds, for according to the Mahābhārata he supplied to Duryodhana (by whom he had been solicited to assist him in the great battle) thousands of cowherds, who are called the gopas of Nārāyaṇa. These take no share in the battle, and are very seldom mentioned.—See Udyoga-parva, v. 130 ff.; and Droṇa-parva, vv. 3255 ff., where the Nārāyaṇas, the cowherds, are spoken of along with the Kambojas, etc., as having been conquered by Karna, etc. (Nārāyaṇas cha gopālāḥ Kambojānāṁcha ye gaṇāḥ | Karna vijitāḥ |)

“Dhṛitarāshṭra says: Hear, Sanjaya, the divine acts of Kṛishṇa, which Govinda performed, such as no other person [ever did]. While he was growing up as a high-souled boy in the tribe of cowherds, the force of his arms was rendered famous by him in the three worlds. He slew the king of the Hayas [horses], dwelling in the woods of the Yamunā, equal to Uccaiḥśravas (the horse of Indra) in strength, and to the wind in speed. In his childhood he destroyed with his arms the Dānava, a doer of direful deeds, who arose, as it were, the Death of cattle, bearing the form of a bull. The lotus-eyed [hero] slew Pralambha, Naraka, Jambha and Piṭha, the great Asura, and Mura, resembling the immortals. So, too, Kansa, of great force, supported by Jarāsandha, was, with his hosts, overthrown in battle by Kṛishṇa, through his valour. Sunāman, valiant in fight, the lord of a complete army, the middle brother of Kansa, king of the Bhojas, the bold and heroic prince of the Surasenas, was, with his army, burnt up in battle by Kṛishṇa, destroyer of his enemies, seconded by Balarāma. And a Brāhman rishi called Durvāsas, extremely irascible, was worshipped by him (Kṛishṇa), together with his wife, and bestowed on him boons.<sup>191</sup> So, too, the lotus-eyed hero, having conquered the princes, carried off the daughter of the king of the Gandhāras at the swayamvara:<sup>192</sup> and the princes, being unable to endure him, were yoked like natural horses to the bridal car, and wounded with the goad. Janārdana, by an excellent device, caused Jarāsandha, the large-armed, lord of a complete army, to be slain.<sup>183</sup> This hero also slaughtered like a beast the king of the Chedis (see above, p. 179), the valiant lord of a royal army, who quarrelled regarding the offering [made to Krishna]. Assailing Saubha, the self-supporting (i.e. flying) city of the Daityas, on the shore of the ocean, protected by the Sālva (king), and difficult to destroy, Mādhava overthrew it.” [Then follows a list of numerous tribes, Angas, Bangas, etc. etc., conquered by Krishna.] . . . . . v. 400: “Entering of old the ocean, filled with marine monsters, he overcame in battle Varuṇa, who had sunk within the waters. Having slain in battle Panchajana dwelling in Pātāla, Hṛishikeśa obtained the divine shell Pāṇchajanya. Having, along with Pārtha, (the son of Prithā, Arjuna) propitiated Agni in Khāṇḍava, this mighty being acquired the irresistible fiery weapon, the discus.<sup>184</sup> Mounted on Garuḍa, and terrifying Amarāvati (the city of Indra), this hero brought back the pārijāta from the abode of the elder Indra.<sup>185</sup> And to this Śakra submitted, knowing his prowess. And we have not heard of any of the kings who has not been conquered by Krishna. Then who but Pundarikāxa could have performed that very wonderful act which he did in my assembly? Through the faith which I had attained, I beheld Krishna, the lord, with delight; of all that I was well assured, and I obtained as it were a distinct vision. No one can by act attain to the end of Hṛishikeśa who is distinguished by valour as well as by wisdom. And Gada also, and Sāmba, and Pradyumna, and Vidūratha, [here follows a list of other warriors] these, and other powerful martial heroes of the Vrishni tribe, summoned by the great Vrishni hero, Keśava, will join in some way the host of the Pandavas, and stand up in the battle. Hence, in my opinion, everything will be doubtful. Wherever Janārdana is, there is also the hero [Bala]rāma, in strength equal to ten thousand elephants, resembling the summit of Kailāsa, wearing a garland of wild flowers, and carrying a plough. Or Vāsudeva, he whom the Brahmans call the universal father, will fight for the Pandavas. When he shall arm [for battle] on their behalf, no one shall then stand up to encounter him. Even if all the Kurus were to overcome the Pandavas, Vārshneya (Krishṇa) would on behalf of the latter seize his pre-eminent weapon; and having then slain all the princes and the Kauravas in battle, this great-armed and lion-like man (lit. man-tiger) would bestow the earth on Kunti. What chariot can stand in the conflict against that chariot of which Hrishikesa is the driver, and on which Dhananjaya (Arjuna) fights? By no contrivance does the victory of the Kurus appear [to be possible]. Give me therefore a full account of the way in which the battle proceeded."

Then follow the verses which have been already quoted above in p. 199, Arjunah Keśavasyātmā, "Arjuna is the soul of Keśava," etc.

Another account of Krishṇa's exploits is given in the Udyoga-parva. It is there related that Sanjaya had been sent on an embassy to the Pāndus, and that on his return he reported to the chiefs of the Kurus the defiant answer which Arjuna had given. The latter chief prophesied that Duryodhana would certainly repent having engaged in conflict with himself and Krishṇa (vv. 1863 ff.) He then enlarges as follows on the prowess of Krishṇa (vv. 1875 ff.):

Pūrvāhne mām kṛta-japyaṁ kadāchid viprah provāchodakānte manojñam | karttavyaṁ te dushkaraṁ karma Pārtha yodhavyaṁ te śatrubhiḥ Savyasāchin | Indro vā te harimān vajra-hastah purastād yātu samare 'rīn vinighnan | Sugrīva-yuktena rathena vā te paśchāt Krishṇo raxatu Vāsudevah | vatre chāham vajra-hastād Mahendrād asmin yuddhe Vāsudevaṁ sahāyam | sa me labdho dasyu-badhāya Kṛishṇo manye chaitad vihitam duitatāir me | sa bāhubhyaṁ sāgaram uttīrshed mahodudhiṁ salilasyā-prameyam | tejasvināṁ Kṛishṇam atyanta-sūraṁ yuddhena yo Vāsudevaṁ jigīshet | giriṁ sa icchhet tu talena bhettuṁ śilochayaṁ śvetam atipramānam | tasyaiva pāṇiḥ sa-nakho viśīryed na chāpi kiñchit sa gires tu kuryāt | agnīm samiddhaṁ samayed bhujābhyāṁ chandraṅcha sūryaṅcha nivārayeta | kared devānāṁ amṛitam prasahya yuddhena yo Vāsudevaṁ jigīshet | yo Rukmiṇīm eka-rathenī Bhojān utsādya rājñah samare prasahya | uvāha bhāryāṁ yūṣasā jvalantīm yasyāṁ jajñe Rāukmiṇeyo mahātmā | ayaṁ Gāndhārāṁś tarasā sampramathya jitrā putrān Nagnajitah samagrān | baddham mumocha vinadantam prasahya Sudarśanaṁ vai devatānāṁ lakṣmam | ayaṁ kapāṭena jaghāna Pāṇḍyaṁ tathā Kalingān Dantakūre namarda | anena dagdhā varsha-pūgān anāthā Vārāṇasī nagari sambhūra | ayaṁ sma yuddhe manyate 'nyair ajeyaṁ tam Ekalavyaṁ

“Once, in the forenoon, when I had muttered my prayers, and concluded my ablutions, a Brahman addressed to me these pleasant words: ‘Son of Prithā, thou hast a difficult work to do; thou hast to fight with thine enemies, o Savyasāchin (a name of Arjuna). Shall Indra with his steeds, and wielding the thunderbolt, go before thee in battle, smiting thy foes, or shall Kṛishṇa the son of Vāsudeva, with his car, to which Sugrīva (one of Kṛishṇa’s horses) is yoked, protect thee from behind?’ I elected to have in the combat Vāsudeva for an ally, rather than Mahendra, wielding the thunderbolt. Kṛishṇa was obtained by me as a helper in slaying the Dasyus, and I think that this was effected for me by the gods. That man will try to stretch over the ocean, the immeasurable receptacle of waters, with his arms, who thinks to conquer in battle the glorious and eminently heroic Kṛishṇa. If any one should attempt to split with his hand the white mountain (viz. Kailāsa), a vast pile of rocks, his hand and nails would be worn away, and he could produce no effect upon the mountain. That man would extinguish blazing fire with his arms, would stop the moon and sun, would daringly plunder the ambrosia of the gods, who should think to conquer Vāsudeva in battle,—[Vāsudeva] who having boldly destroyed in battle the Bhoja kings, carried off on the same car with himself Rukmiṇī his bride, shining in renown, of whom the great Rāukmiṇeya was born. He (Kṛishṇa) having by his prowess destroyed the Gāndhāras, having conquered all the sons of Nagnajit, forcibly released [king] Sudarśana, renowned even among the gods, who had been bound [by the sons of Nagnajit], and was making an outcry.<sup>186</sup> He slew Pāndya with the fragment of a door, and crushed the Kalingas in Dantakūra. Through him the city of Benares which had been burnt, and remained for many years defenceless, sprang into existence. He attacked in battle Ekalavya the king of the Nishādas, who was invincible by others. He, [like ?] Jambha, sleeps, bereft of life by Kṛishṇa, who smote him furiously with a rock. Seconded by Baladeva, he also prostrated [Sunāman] the wicked son of Ugrasena standing in the midst, in the assembly, of the Vṛishnis and Andhakas, and having slain him, gave the kingdom to Ugrasena. He conquered the self-supporting (i.e. flying) [city of] Saubha, and the king of the Sālvas, terrible from his magical powers, and arrested with his arms at the gate of Saubha the weapon Sataghni:<sup>187</sup> what mortal can assail him? There was an impregnable, formidable, and unassailable city of the Asuras, called Prāgjyotisha. Thither the powerful Naraka son of the Earth had carried off the beautiful jewelled earrings of Aditi.<sup>188</sup> The assembled gods aided by Indra, fearless of death, could not [overcome] him in battle. But perceiving the valour, the strength, and the irresistible weapons of Keśava, and knowing his nature, they appointed him (Krishṇa) to slay the Dasyu. Vāsudeva, possessing divine power in his magical endowments (aiśvaryaṇ siddhishu), undertook that difficult task. Having in the rescue [or in the city Nirmochana] slain six thousand [Asuras], and having violently cut asunder the nooses sharp as razors,<sup>189</sup> having slain Muṛa and the Rāxasa Ogha, he proceeded to the rescue. There Viṣṇu of surpassing strength had a fight with the powerful foe; who, smitten by Krishṇa, sleeps lifeless, like a karnikāra<sup>190</sup> tree overthrown by the wind. Having captured the jewelled earrings and slain Naraka, son of the Earth, and Mura, the wise Krishṇa of incomparable power, returned surrounded by splendour and renown. Then the gods, having seen that terrible work which he had achieved in battle, conferred upon him these boons: 'Let no fatigue oppress thee when thou art fighting; let thy step traverse the sky and the waters; and let no weapons make any impression on thy body.' With these boons Krishṇa was satisfied. In Vāsudeva, who is of such a character, immeasurable, and of mighty strength, there is an abundance of virtues. It is this irresistible Viṣṇu, of infinite power, whom the son of Dhṛitarashtra hopes to overcome."

It will be noticed that Krishṇa is here represented as receiving various boons from the gods. It would appear, therefore, as if the author of this passage could not have regarded him as one with the supreme deity.

The following passage from the Vana-parva describes Krishṇa as a great devotee, as a performer of sacrifices, as a destroyer of hostile men and demons (referring to some of the legends already alluded to); and also in some places identifies him with the supreme spirit. Krishṇa, we are told, had gone with some of his clansmen to visit <sup>189</sup> These nooses are also mentioned in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa (see Wilson's translation) and in the Harivamśa, v. 6833. See Langlois's note to his French translation, p. 521, in which he refers to the Asiatic Researches, vol. xiii. p. 278 ff. In that article an account is given of the Phānsigars or Thugs, who murder their victims by throwing a noose. The writer refers in illustration to the Rāmāyaṇa, i. 29, 9 (Schlegel's edition), where three kinds of nooses are mentioned, the dharma-pāśa, the kāla-pāśa, and the Vārūṇa-pāśa. In the Vana-parva, 879, the epithet zurūṇa, sharp as a razor, is applied to Krishṇa's discus.

Vana-parva, 471: "Formerly, Kṛishna, thou didst roam for ten thousand years on the mountain Gandhamādana, where the muni Sāyangriha was. Formerly thou didst dwell ten thousand and ten hundred years in ponds, subsisting upon water. Thou didst stand on the spacious Badari a hundred years with thy arms aloft, on one foot, subsisting on air, with thy outer garment thrown off, emaciated, with thy veins swollen. Going also to Prabhāsa, a sacred spot fit for holy men, thou stoodest, glorious Kṛishṇa, for a thousand years of the gods, on one foot, practising self-restraint, for the benefit of the world,—this Vyāsa declared to me. Thou, Keśava, art the spirit residing in men's bodies, the beginning and the end of all existences, the receptacle of austerities, and the eternal sacrifice. Having slain Naraka, the son of the Earth, and having carried off the jewelled earrings, thou didst let loose the first-produced sacrificial horse. Having performed that rite, chief of the worlds, and conqueror of all worlds, thou didst slay in battle all the assembled Daityas and Dānavas. And then, having conferred the lordship of the universe on Indra, thou, o great-armed, didst become manifested among mankind. Thou, being Nārāyana, wert Hari, o vexer of thy foes. Thou, o Purushottama (or chief of Spirits, or Males), art Brahmā, Soma, Sūrya, Dharma, Dhātṛi, Yama, Anala (Fire), Vāyu, Kuvra, Rudra, Time, Sky, Earth, the Regions, the unborn, the lord of the world, the creator. Thou, Madhusūdana, Kṛishṇa, of great glory, didst with sacrifices worship the supreme, high, god in the forest of Chaitraratha. A hundred times a hundred thousands of gold were then severally told out in full tale at each sacrifice." [Here follow the verses quoted above, p. 118, beginning Aditer api putratvam, and ending nihatāḥ śataśo 'surāḥ.] The nooses of Muru were destroyed; Nisunda and Naraka were slain; the way to the city Prāgiyotisha was again rendered safe. On the Jāruthi Āhvyiti, Krātha, Śiśupāla with his men, Jarāsandha, Śaivya and Śatadhanvan<sup>191</sup> were conquered. So, too, having vanquished Rukmin in battle with thy car, resounding like Parjanya, and gleaming like the sun, thou didst obtain thy queen to be the object of thy love. (See above, p. 179.) Indradyumna was slain by thee in thy wrath, and the Yavana Kaserumat, and Śālva, the lord of Saubha, and Saubha was thrown down. Bhoja, equal to Kārttavīrya<sup>192</sup> in battle, was slain by thee on the Irāvati, as well as both Gopati and Tālaketu. And having subdued to thyself Dvārakā, thou wilt cause the holy Bhogavatī and the Rishikā to flow to the ocean. Neither anger, nor envy, nor falsehood, nor cruelty, abides in thee, Dāsārha (Krishṇa): how then canst thou be deceitful? The rishis came to thee, [Achyuta,] whilst thou wast sitting in the midst of the chaitya (sacrificial ground), resplendent with thine own brightness, and begged of thee security. [Then follow some lines which have been quoted above, p. 193, beginning yugānte sarva-bhūtāni sanxipya, etc.]

VI. Though, as we have already seen from various passages of the Mahābharata and Purāṇas, Krishṇa is generally identified with Vishṇu, and Vishṇu with Brahma, or the supreme deity, yet in a text quoted above (p. 42) from the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, x. 33, 27, Krishṇa is spoken of as only a partial incarnation of the godhead. The same is the case in another passage in the first section of the same tenth book of the Bhāgavata. The king there says to Śuka that he has heard from him the history of the kings of the solar and lunar races, and among them of Yadu. He then asks the sage to relate the achievements of Vishṇu, the creator and soul of all things, who became partially incarnate (tatrāmśenāvatinasya Viṣṇor vīryānī śaṁsa naḥ | aratīrya Yadora vaṁśe bhagavān bhūta-bhāvanah | kṛitavān yāni vīśvātmā tāni no rada vistarāt |). Śuka in reply goes on to relate that the earth being afflicted by Daityas in the shape of proud princes, had, in the form of a cow, preferred her complaint to Brahmā, who had consequently gone with the other gods to supplicate the help of Vishṇu. Brahmā hears a voice in the sky:

Bhāgavata Purāṇa, x. i. 21 ff.—Gīraṁ samādhanu gagane samīritāṁ nīsamya Vedhās tridaśān uvācha ha | gām pauruṣhīm me śṛiṇutāmarāḥ punarvidhīyatām āśutathaiva māchiram | puraiva puṁsā (Īśvareṇa, Comm.) 'vadhrito dharā-jvaro bhavadbhir aṁśair Yadushūpajanyatām | sa yāvad urvyā bharaṁ (sic) īśvareśvaraḥ | sa-kāla-śaktyā xapayaṁś chared bhūvi | Vasudeva-grihe sūxād bhagavān Puruṣhaḥ parah | janishyate tat-priyārthaṁ sambhavantu sura-striyaḥ | Vasudeva-kalā 'nantah sahasra-vadanah svarāt | agrato bhavitā devo Hareḥ priya-chikīrshayā | Viṣṇor māyā bhagavatī yayā sammohitaṁ jagat | ādiṣṭā prabhuṇā 'mśena kāryārthe sambhavishyati |

the voice of Purusha, and then speedily act so [as it enjoins]. The distress of the earth was already understood by Purusha. Do you, in portions of yourselves, be born among the Yadus, whilst he, the god of gods, walks upon the earth, removing her burthen by his destructive power. The supreme divine Purusha shall be born in his own person (sāxāt) in the house of Vasudeva. To please him, let the wives of the gods be born. The infinite, thousand-faced, self-resplendent deity shall first become a portion of Vasudeva, in order to gratify Hari. The divine Delusion of Vishṇu, by which the world is deceived, being commanded by the lord, shall be born in a portion of herself to effect the desired objects."

In the Vishṇu Purāṇa, also, the incarnation of Vishṇu is spoken of as that of a part, or even a part of a part. At the commencement of the fifth book of that work the following lines occur :

*Nṛpūnām kathitah sarvo bhavatā vaṁśa-vistarah | Vaṁśānucharitaṁ
chaiva yathārad anuvṛṇitam | Aṁśāvatāro brahmarṣe 'yo 'yaṁ Yadu-

tatra tāni mune vada | Parāśara uvācha | Maitreya śrūyatām etad yat
priṣṭho 'ham iha trayā | Viṣṇor aṁśāṁśa-sambhūti-charitaṁ jagato hitam |*

"You have related to me the complete genealogy of the kings, and also the entire history of the races. I now wish, divine sage, to hear in full detail the particulars of the incarnation of a portion of Vishṇu which took place in the tribe of the Yadus. Tell me, Muni, what acts the divine Puruṣottama performed when he descended to the earth in a portion [of himself]. Parāśara replies : Hear, Maitreya, that which you have asked me, the history, beneficial to the world, of the birth of a portion of a portion of Vishṇu."

The sage proceeds to relate (see Wilson's Vishṇu Purāṇa, pp. 493-497) how the earth had complained to Brahmā and the other gods that the Asura Kālanemi had revived in Kansa, and other demons had also been born as princes; and that she could not support the load. Brahmā proposed that they should resort to Vishṇu, "who is the spirit of all, and of whom the universe consists," and "who constantly, for the sake of earth, descends in a" very "small portion of his essence, to establish righteousness below" (sarvadaiva jagaty-arthe sa sarvātmā jagannmayah | śalpaṁśenāvatīryorvyāṁ dharmasya kurute sthitim |). The gods accordingly went to the milky sea, and lauded Vishnu in a long hymn. Vishnu was gratified by their praises, desired them to state their wishes, and assured them that these should be accomplished. Brahmā renewed his praises; and we are then told what happened when they were concluded:

“Being thus lauded, the divine Paramēśvara plucked out two of his own hairs, a white and a black, and said to the deities, ‘These two hairs of mine, descending to the earth, shall remove her burthen and sufferings. And let all the deities, descending in portions of themselves to the earth, fight against those mad Asuras who existed in former births. Then all these sons of Diti (the Asuras) shall no doubt perish, being annihilated by the glances of my eyes. This my hair, gods, shall become the eighth child of Devakī, the wife of Vasudeva, who (Devakī) resembles the gods. And this [hair] descending there, shall destroy Kansa, the Kālanemi who has been born.’ Having thus spoken, Hari disappeared. Having then bowed down to him the unseen, the gods went to the top of Meru, and descended on the earth.”

The following are the remarks which Ratnagarbha, one of the commentators on the Vishnu Purāṇa, makes on the first of the preceding passages, and which have reference to the second also :

"Purushottama is here figuratively said to have become incarnate with a portion of a portion of himself, because in the Kṛṣṇa incarnation he was manifested in a merely sportive body in the very circumscribed form of a man, and not because of any diminution of his power, since even in the Kṛṣṇa and other incarnations he is said to have shewn himself in every possible form, and to have possessed all divine power, and so forth. But is it not the case that if a portion is taken from a whole composed of parts, there is a decrease of power, etc. [in that whole], and that thus an inferiority of power will attach to the portion relatively to the whole, just as when a heap of grain, or any other such whole, is divided? I answer, No; since such a diminution does not occur in him whose nature is light; for though there is a difference in the individuality of one lamp, and of another lamp derived from it, yet an equality of power is perceived in each; agreeably to the text from the Veda (the Satapatha Brahmana, xiv. 8, 1, p. 1094), 'That is full, and this is full; a full arises out of a full: if a full be taken from a full, a full remains;' and also agreeably to such texts as this, 'The supreme Brahma with the form, and with the characteristics, of a man, is a great mystery; but Kṛṣṇa is the lord himself.' And the employment of the term 'hairs' in the words, 'My hairs shall descend to the earth,' and 'This hair shall slay Kansa,' etc., is intended to signify that the task of removing the earth's burthen was such as Brahma in all his plenitude could effect by a very slight instru-mentality, and not to assert that the two hairs were identical with [Bala]rāma and Kṛishṇa: for two insensible hairs, not being conscious spirits animating the bodies of those two persons, could not fulfil their task. If it be said that the lord possessing the bodies of Balarāma and Kṛishṇa, which were produced by the magical operation of the hairs, will do so and so, we reply, 'Yes, for there is no difference in the result, and because he himself said, 'I shall [be born] on the eighth night of the dark fortnight of the moon.' But there is no occasion for further prolixity.'<sup>196</sup>

Ujjahāra | utpātitarān | ayam bhārah | mama dushkaraṁ ched yush-mābhiḥ sākhyam kṛyām syāt | na te etuḥ asti bhū-bhārāpaharaṇādau mahaty api kṛye mat-keśa-mātrasyaiva samarthatvād iti nā tu keśa-mātravatāra iti mantaryam | "mad-drik-pāta-vichārṇitāḥ" "kṛish-nāshṭamyam aham utpatsyāmi" ityādishu sārāt svāratāratrokṭeḥ | sita-kṛishṇa-keśoddhāraṇaṁ cha śobhārtham eva | "Ujjahāra means that he 'plucked out' the hairs. The sense is as follows: 'It would be a difficult matter if aid had to be rendered to me by you: but the same is not the case in regard to the task, though a great one, of removing the load of the earth, etc., since my hairs alone are equal to it.' But it is not to be supposed that there was nothing beyond an incarnation of the mere hairs; for his own incarnation is distinctly asserted in the words 'annihilated by the glance of my eye,' 'I shall be born on the eighth night of the dark fortnight of the moon,' etc. etc. The mention of his plucking out white and black hairs is for the purpose of ornament."<sup>198</sup>

The same story about the production of Balarāma and Kṛishṇa from two hairs is also told in the Mahābhārata, Ādi-parva, 7306 ff.:

Tuṛ eva sārddham tu tataḥ sa dero jagāmu Nārāyaṇam aprameyam | anantam avyaktam ajam purāṇaṁ sanātanaṁ viśvam ananta-rūpam | sa chāpi tad vyadadhāt sarvaṁ eva tataḥ sarve sambabhūvur dharanyāṁ | sa chāpi keśau Hṛir udvararha śuklam ekam aparaṁ chāpi kṛishṇam |

“Along with them (viz., four preceding Indras, and a fifth deity sprung from Indra) the god (Indra) went to Nārāyaṇa, immeasurable, infinite, undiscernible, unborn, primeval, everlasting, universal, endless in his forms; and he fulfilled all [that they desired]. Then they were all born on earth. Hari also plucked out two hairs, one white and the other black. These two hairs entered into two women of the tribe of the Yadus, Devakī and Rohiṇī. One of them, the white hair of the god, became Baladeva; while the second hair (keśa), which was called black (kṛishṇa) in colour, became Kṛishṇa, Keśava.”

“Here the two hairs are of the nature of seed productive of Balārāma and Kṛishṇa, just as in the case of the Pāṇḍavas, [and this expression is employed] for the sake of conformity to what had preceded, since it is manifest that one cannot speak of production from the seed of a god. For this reason it is distinctly said that the hairs entered into Devakī and Rohiṇī [the mothers], and not into Vasudeva [the father]. But such being the case, according to the Vedic phraseology, that 'rain is the seed of the gods and plants are the seed of rain,' etc., these two persons also (Balarāma and Kṛishṇa) will be mediately the offspring of the deity, just as is the case with ourselves and other beings. And thus—since 'this substance of the different incarnations is an undecaying seed,'<sup>200</sup>—it would be opposed to that declaration to predicate of the deity that he is literally the seed of the fish, and other incarnations. Further, although hairs and seed spring equally from the body, yet in the case of production from seed, humanity and sonship will arise after the manner of the inferior animals. And thus the saying of the Bhāgavata, that 'Kṛishṇa is the Lord himself,' is not contradicted. And it must not be said that from a hair being plucked out, Kṛishṇa also is shewn to be only a portion [of the deity]; for a hair is not a part of the body. Wherefore, just as, when [the demon] Namuchi was to be slain, the thunderbolt entered into the foam of the waters,<sup>201</sup> so when an entrance was to be made into the wombs of Devakī and Rohiṇī, the manifestation of the deity in all his plenitude is to be understood as effected through the medium of the two hairs."

VII.—In several of the passages which have been already cited in the preceding pages, Viṣṇu has been identified with the supreme spirit (see above, pp. 33, 43, 150). I shall now proceed to adduce some others of the same kind from the Mahābhārata. In the Śāntiparva, vv. 1500 ff. Yudhishtira says to Kṛishṇa :

<sup>200</sup> I put these words between inverted commas, as they appear to be a quotation, though I am not aware whence it is derived.

<sup>201</sup> I am indebted to Dr. Aufrecht for pointing out to me the legend to which reference is here made, viz., that mentioned in R. V. viii. 14, 13: Apām phenena Namucheh śira Indrodavarttayah | risrā yad ajayah spridhah | "Thou, Indra, didst strike off the head of Namuchi with the foam of the waters, when thou didst vanquish all opponents." On this Sāyana tells the following story: Parā kila Indro 'surān jītvā Namuchim asurān grahitām na śaśūka | sa cha yudhyamānas tenāsirena jagrihe | sa cha grihitam Indran. evam arochat "tvām visrijāmi vātrāv ahni cha śushkeṇārdreṇa chāyudhena yadi m m na hīmsīr" iti | sa Indras tena vispishṭaḥ sann aho-rātrayoh sanidhan śushkārdra-r'axaṇena phenena tasya śiras chichheda | ayam prtho 'syām pratipadyate | He Indra apām phenena vajrībhūtena Namucher Asurasya śira udavarttayah | "Formerly Ind'a having conquered the Asurās, was unable to seize the Asura Namuchi; and fighting, was seized by the Asura. The latter said to Indra, whom he had seized: 'I release thee if thou wilt not smite me by night, or by day, with a dry or a wet weapon.' Indra, being released by him, cut off his head at the junction of day and night with foam which has the character of being both dry and wet. This purport is set forth in this verse." The story is also told in the Indra-vijaya (published by Holtzmann), vv. 185 ff.; Mahābhārata, Udyoga-parva, vv. 320 ff.

“By thy favour, Kṛishṇa, chief of the Yadus, and policy, and power, and understanding, and valour, I have recovered this kingdom of my father's and grandfather's. Adoration be to thee, lotus-eyed, subduer of thy foes, again and again. Thee alone men call Puruṣa : thee alone they call the refuge of the Sāttvats. Devout twice-born men laud thee by names of various kinds. Glory be to thee, thou maker of all, thou soul of all, thou source of all, Viśhṇu, conqueror, Hari, Kṛishṇa, Vaikuṇṭha, chief of spirits (or males). Of old thou didst become the sevenfold offspring of Aditi.<sup>202</sup> Thou alone art Pṛiśnigarbha ; they also call thee [him who exists in] the three ages (yugas). Thou art called Suchisravas, Hṛishīkeśā, Ghṛitāchi, and Haṁsa. Thou alone art the three-eyed Sāmbhu (Mahādeva) and Dāmodara, the pervading, the Boar, Agni, Vṛihadbhānu,<sup>203</sup> the Bull, he whose sign is Tārxya (Garuḍa).” A long list of other titles then follows, concluding with these words : “Thou art the source and the destruction of this universe, Kṛishṇa : it is thou who createst it in the beginning, and it is all in thy power, thou universal source : glory be to thee who wieldest the bow, the discus, and the sword.”

In whom these worlds flutter, like birds in water,” etc.

In the following passage, also from the Śantiparva, Kṛishṇa identifies himself with the supreme Spirit, and represents Brahmā and Mahādeva as having proceeded from him. In it the writer likewise endeavours to explain away the effect of certain texts in other parts of the poem (see <sup>204</sup> This is the only place in which I have ever met with this word. I am unable to say whether Indian literature contains any such writings as nishads, or whether the term is a purely fictitious one, invented by the author of this passage to denote a principal and original set of writings to which the Upanishads may have formed, in his idea, a secondary and supplemental class, as the Upanishads do to the Puranas. Nilakantha, one of the commentators (whether conjecturally, or on good grounds, I cannot say), explains nishatsu as meaning karmāṅgūdy-avabaddha-devatūdi-jñāna-vākyeshu, “works treating of the knowledge of the deities, etc., connected with the ceremonial part of the Veda, etc.” The Upanishads “reveal the knowledge of soul alone” (kevalātma-jñāpaka-vākyeshu). Vākas, according to the same authority, “make known ceremonies generally” (sāmānyataḥ karma-prakāśakeshu), while anuvākas are “texts of the Brāhmans, explanatory of the sense of the mantras, or Vedic hymns” (mantrārtha-virarāṇa-bhūteshu brāhmaṇa-vākyeshu).

above, pp. 155-170) in which Krishna is related to have worshipped Mahādeva, and which were no doubt felt to be inconsistent with the supreme deity of the former. The difficulty is attempted to be overcome by the explanation that in worshipping Rudra, he was only worshipping himself. In verses 13133 ff. Arjuna asks Krishna to interpret the different appellations which had been applied to him in the Vedas and Purāṇas; and this Krishna accordingly proceeds to do, remarking by the way that Arjuna had been of old declared to be his own half<sup>205</sup> (traṁ hi me 'rddhaṁ smritaḥ purā). Nārāyaṇa (i.e. Viṣṇu), he says, was the source of all things, and from him Brahmā and Śiva were produced; the one from his good pleasure, the other from his anger (13140: Yasya prasādajo Brahmā Rudraścha krodha-sambhavaḥ |). He then goes on (13144): Brāhme rātri-ṛāye prōpte tasya hy amita-tejasah | prasādāt prādurabhavat padmam padma-nibheṣaṇa | tato Brahmā sambhavat sa tasyaiva prasādajah | ahaṁ ṛāye lalāṭāccheḥ suto devasya vai tathā | krodhāvisṭasya sañjajñe Rudraḥ saṁhāra-kāraḥ | etau drau vibudha-śreṣṭhaṁ prasāda-krodha-jāu ubhau | tad-ādeṣita-panthānau śṛiṣṭi-saṁhāra-kāraḥ | nimitta-mātram tāv atra sarva-prāṇi-vara-pradau | kaparddī jaṭilo muṇḍaḥ śmaśāna-griha-sevakaḥ | ugra-vrata-dhara Rudro yogī parama-dāruṇaḥ | Daxa-kratu-haraśchaiva Bhaga-netra-haraḥ tathā | Nārāyaṇātmako jñeyah Pāṇḍaveya yuge yuge | tasmin hi pūjyamāne vai deva-deve Maheśvare | sampūjito bhavet Pārtha devo Nārāyaṇaḥ prabhuḥ | ahaṁ ātmā hi lokānāṁ viśveśhām Pāṇḍu-nandana | tasmād ātmānam evāgre Rudrāṁ sampūjayāmy ahaṁ | yady ahaṁ nārchayeyāṁ vai Īśānāṁ varadaṁ Śivam | ātmānam nārchayet kaśchid iti me bhūvit-ātmānaḥ | mayā pramāṇāṁ hi kṛitāṁ lokāḥ samanucartate | pramāṇāni hi pūjyāni tatas tam pūjayāmy ahaṁ | yas taṁ veti sa mām veti yo 'nu taṁ sa hi mām anu | Rudro Nārāyaṇaś chaiva sattvam ekaṁ dvidhākṛitaṁ | loke charati Kaunteya vyakti-sthaṁ sarva-karmusu | na hi me kenachid deyo varah Pāṇḍava-nandana | iti sañchintya manusā purāṇam Rudram īśvaram | puttrārtham ārādhitavān ahaṁ ātmānam ātmānā | na hi Viṣṇuḥ pranamati kasmaichit vibudhāya cha | ṛita ātmānam eveti tato Rudram bhajāmy ahaṁ | sabrahmakāḥ surudraścha sendrā devāḥ saharshibhiḥ | archayanti sura-śreṣṭhāṁ devāṁ Nārāyaṇāṁ Hariṁ | bhaviṣhyataṁ varttatāṁcha bhūtānāṁchaiva Bhārata | sarveśhām agrāṇī Viṣṇuḥ sevyah pūjyaścha nityaśah ityādi |

“When the end of Brahmā's night had arrived, there sprang from the good pleasure of that being of boundless power a lotus, o thou whose eyes are like a lotus. From it was produced Brahmā, who was the offspring of his (Vishnu's) good pleasure; and at the end of the day Rudra the destroyer was born from the forehead of the god when he was possessed with anger. These two eminent gods, produced [the one] from his good pleasure, [the other] from his anger, have their courses prescribed by him, [and are] the accomplishers [respectively] of creation and destruction. In this, these bestowers of boons on all creatures are merely instrumental causes. Rudra, with braided hair and matted locks, shaven, the frequenter of cemeteries, the performer of awful rites, the devotee, the very terrible, he who swept away Daxa's sacrifice, and put out Bhaga's eyes, is to be understood by thee to possess in every age the nature of Nārāyaṇa. For when that god of gods Maheśvara is worshipped, then, son of Prithā, the god Nārāyaṇa, the lord, will also be worshipped. I am the soul of all the worlds. It was therefore myself whom I formerly worshipped as Rudra. If I were not to worship Isāna, the boon-bestowing Śiva, no one would worship myself,—this is [the reflection?] made by me who am contemplative in spirit. An authoritative example is set by me [which] the world follows.<sup>206</sup> Authoritative examples are to be revered: hence I reverence him (Śiva). He who knows him knows me; he who loves him loves me.<sup>207</sup> Rudra and Nārāyaṇa, one essence, divided into two, operate in the world, in a manifested form, in all acts. Reflecting in my mind that no boon could be conferred upon me by any one, I [yet] adored the ancient Rudra, the lord, [that is] I, with myself adored myself, to obtain a son (see p. 163). For Vishnu does not do homage to any god, excepting himself: hence I [in this sense] worship Rudra. The gods, including Brahmā, Rudra, and Indra, together with the rishis, worship the god Nārāyaṇa, Hari, the most eminent of the deities. Vishnu the chief of all who shall be, are, or have been, is to be served and worshipped continually.”

In the following passage (Anuśāsana-parva, vv. 6295 ff.), some parts of which may be later interpolations, Kṛishṇa is described as performing a ceremony to obtain a son, at the same time that he is represented as the supreme deity. Bhīshma, at the request of Yudhishtira, tells him a story illustrative of the glory of Krishna. He states that Krishna had performed a ceremonial (vrata) of twelve years' duration (6397), which many rishis came to witness. In presence of these rishis fire issued from the mouth of Krishna, which set on fire the mountain where he was, and burnt up everything on it; and having done so, came back, and submissively touched his feet. The mountain was afterwards restored to its natural condition. Seeing the rishis astonished at this display, Krishna asks the cause of their surprise. They request that he who is the creator and destroyer of all things will explain to them the phenomenon which they have just witnessed. He replies that this was the power (tejas) of Vishnu which had issued from his mouth. He had come, he informs them, to this mountain to perform a ceremony with the view of obtaining a son like himself (6320); and the soul residing in his body had become fire, and blazed forth, and had gone to see the parent of the world, when Mahādeva had declared that a son should be created for him out of the half of this power (tejas). Krishna next calls on the rishis to tell him any wonders they had seen or heard of in heaven or on earth. The rishis then, after celebrating Krishna's praises, appoint Nārada to describe the wonders which had been witnessed by the rishis on the Himālaya mountain, when they had gone thither on a pilgrimage to the holy places. Nārada accordingly proceeds to give an account of a long conversation which had taken place between Mahādeva and his wife Umā or Pārvatī, the daughter of the Himālaya. Mahādeva, it appears, had been performing austerity (tapas, vv. 6340, 6348) on that mountain, where he was surrounded by his attendant demons (Bhūtas) and by the nymphs (Āpsarases), etc. etc. While he was sitting in that delightful region, clothed in tigers' and lions' skins, with a serpent for his sacrificial cord (6355 f.), his wife Umā comes up, clothed in the same style as her husband, with her attendant demonesses (Bhūta-strī-gaṇa), and playfully puts her hands over his eyes. The effects of this act are tremendous. Suddenly the world becomes darkened, lifeless, and destitute of oblations and vashatkāras, etc. This gloom, however, is as suddenly dispelled by a great flame which bursts from Mahādeva's forehead, in which a third eye, luminous as the sun, was formed (6367). By the fire of this eye the mountain was scorched and everything upon it consumed. Umā hereupon stands in a submissive attitude before her lord, when in a moment her parent, the Himālaya, is restored to his former condition. A long conversation then ensues between Mahādeva and Umā. The latter enquires why Mahādeva's third eye had been formed (6379), and puts a number of questions about himself, and the various duties of men (6412 ff.), all of which he answers. Mahādeva next, in his turn, asks Umā to describe the duties of women. She says she will consult the rivers in regard to the question. The Gangā replies on their behalf that Umā herself should furnish the answer, which she accordingly does (6780 ff.). Bhīshma then informs us that, at the close of Umā's discourse, Mahādeva dismissed his attendant demons, with the rivers, nymphs, and celestial choristers (Gandharvas). We should have expected here that Nārada (who had hitherto been the narrator of what was done and said on the Himālaya) would have finished his account of all that occurred there, without the introduction of the other interlocutor: but at this point he is interrupted by Bhīshma, and afterwards introduced again at v. 6870. Whatever may be the reason, we are first told by Bhīshma (v. 6804) that the rishis now requested Mahādeva to describe to them the greatness of Vāsudeva (Krishṇa). At the close of Mahādeva's discourse, Nārada is again abruptly introduced (6870), and relates that a great sound of thunder accompanied with lightning was then heard, and the sky became covered with thick clouds, and veiled in darkness. Mahādeva and his attendant demons were now no longer visible to the munis. (The departure of the demons and the other classes of beings had, however, been previously told in v. 6804.) The darkness then suddenly clears away. Nārada next observes to Krishṇa (6875) that he was the eternal being, one with Brahma, about whom they had been instructed on the mountain. At the close of Nārada's discourse, the rishis express their devotion to Krishṇa (6879 ff.), and say that as he knew all things, he had no occasion to ask them for any information such as had been given at his request. They end by giving him what, after this avowal of his omniscience, was (one would have thought) a needless assurance, that he should have a son like himself. Bhīshma then relates that, after completing the rite on which he had been engaged, Krishṇa returned to Dvārakā, where a son was born to him (6889), and goes on to expatiate yet further on his divine character. Yudishthira, however, is still unsatisfied, and enquires as follows (6937 ff.):

“What is the one deity in the world, or what is the one highest object? By lauding and worshipping whom can men attain to felicity? What duty is regarded by you as the highest of all duties? By muttering what, is a creature freed from the bonds of birth and of the world? Bhīṣhma answers: A man, rising continually, and lauding with his thousand names the supreme infinite Puruṣa, the lord of the world, the god of gods, worshipping perpetually with devotion this undecaying Puruṣa, contemplating, praising, reverencing, and adoring him, Viṣṇu, without beginning or end, the great lord of all the worlds, lauding continually the ruler of the worlds, who (the ruler) is devout, skilled in all duty, the augments of the renown of the worlds, the lord of the world, the great being, the source of the existence of all beings, [doing all this, a man] will overpass all grief. This is regarded by me as the greatest of all duties. . . . v. 6946 : Hear, king, from me the sin-and-fear-removing thousand names of this Viṣṇu, chief of the world, lord of the world, from whom all creatures spring on the arrival of the commencing yuga, and in whom again they are absorbed at the end of the yuga.”

These thousand names of Viṣṇu are then detailed, among which the following occur, all of them ordinarily appellations of Mahādeva, viz., Sarva, Sarva, Siva, Sthānu (v. 6953), Iśāna (v. 6957), Rudra (v. 6962).

Again, we are informed in the Anuśāsana-parva, that the rishis requested Mahādeva to expound to them the greatness of Vāsudeva (Kṛishṇa), which he accordingly does in vv. 6806 ff. :

“Superior even to Pitāmaha (Brahmā) is Hari, the eternal Puruṣa, Kṛishṇa, brilliant as gold, like the sun risen in a cloudless sky, ten-armed, of mighty force, slayer of the foes of the gods, marked with the śrīvatsa, Hṛishīkeśa, adored by all the gods. Brahmā is sprung from his belly and I (Mahādeva) from his head, the luminaries from the hair of his head, the gods and Asuras from his hairs, and the rishis, as well as the everlasting worlds, have been produced from his body. He is the manifest abode of Pitāmaha, and of all the deities. He is the creator of this entire earth, the lord of the three worlds, and the destroyer of creatures, of the stationary and the moveable. He is manifestly the most eminent of the gods, the lord of the deities, the vexer of his foes. He is omniscient, intimately united [with all things], omnipresent, facing in every direction, the supreme Spirit, Hrishikeśa, all-pervading, the mighty lord. There is no being superior to him in the three worlds. The slayer of Madhu is eternal, renowned as Govinda. He the conferrer of honour, born to fulfil the purposes of the gods, and assuming a human body, will slay all the kings in battle. For all the hosts of the gods, destitute of Trivikrama (the god who strode thrice) are unable to effect the purposes of the gods, devoid of a leader. He is the leader of all creatures, and worshipped by all creatures. Of this lord of the gods, devoted to the purposes of the gods, who is Brahma, and is the constant refuge of gods and rishis, Brahmā dwells within the body, abiding in his face, and all the gods are easily sheltered in his body. This god is the lotus-eyed, the producer of Śrī, dwelling together with Śrī. . . . For the welfare of the gods, Govinda shall arise in the family of the great Manu, possessed of eminent intelligence, and [walking] in the excellent path of the Prajāpati, of Manu, abounding in righteousness. . . . 6836 : This Sūra, the most eminent of Kshattriyas, heroic, renowned, conferring honour, shall beget a son Ānakadundubhi,<sup>208</sup> the proloner of his race, known as Vasudeva. To him shall be born a four-armed son, Vāsudeva, liberal, a benefactor of Brāhmans, one with Brahma, a lover of Brāhmaus. . . . 6842 : You (the gods) should, as is fit, worship this deity, like the eternal Brahmā, approaching him with reverential and excellent garlands of praise. For the divine and glorious Vāsudeva should be beheld by him who desires to see me and Brahmā the Parent. In regard to this I have no hesitation, that when he is seen I am seen, or the Parent (Brahmā), the lord of the gods : know this ye whose wealth is austerity."

Further on in the same Anuśāsana-parva (7356 ff.), it is related that Bhīshma, when called on by Yudhishtira to inform him what are the benefits resulting from reverence rendered to Brāhmans, refers him

Krishṇaḥ prithvīm asṛijāt khaṁ divaṅcha Kṛishṇasya dehād medinī sambabhūva | varāho 'yam bhīma-balaḥ purāṇaḥ sa parvatān vyasṛijāt vai diśascha | asya chādho 'thāntarīxaṁ divaṅcha diśas chatasro vidīśas chatasraḥ | sṛiṣṭis tathāiveyam anuprasūtā sa nirmame viśvam idam purāṇam | asya nābhyām puṣkkaraṁ samprasūtāṁ yatropannaḥ svayam evāmitaujah | yena chhinnaṁ yat tamaḥ Pārtha ghoraṁ yat tat tishṭhaty arṇavaṁ tarjjayānam | . . . 7388: Vāyur bhūtvā vixipate sa viśvam agnir bhūtvā dahate viśva-rūpaḥ | āpo bhūtvā majjayate sa sarvam Brahmā bhūtvā sṛijate sarva-saṅghān | vedyaṅcha yad vedayate cha vedyāṁ vidhīścha yaś chūśrayate vidheyam | dharme cha vede bale cha sarvaṁ charācharam Keśavaṁ tram pratīhi | jyotir-bhūtaḥ paramo 'sau purastāt prakāśate yat prabhayā viśva-rūpaḥ | apaḥ sṛiṣṭvā sarva-bhūtātma-yoniḥ purā 'karot sarvam evātha viśvam ityādi |

“Krishṇa created the earth, the air, and the sky; from Krishṇa's body the earth was produced. He is the ancient boar of fearful strength; he created the mountains and the regions. Beneath him are the atmosphere and the heaven, the four regions, and the four intermediate regions: and [from him] this creation sprang forth: he formed this ancient universe. In his navel a lotus grew up, where he himself [in the form of Brahmā] was born of boundless power. By him the dreadful darkness was pierced, that threatening ocean which abides. . . . 7388: Becoming Vāyu, he dissipates this universe; becoming Fire, he burns it, universal in his forms; becoming Water, he drowns all things; becoming Brahmā, he creates all the hosts [of beings]. He is whatever is to be known, and he makes known whatever is to be known: he is the rule for performance, and he who exists in that which is to be performed. Believe that Keśava [abides] in righteousness, in the Veda, in strength, and that he is the whole world, moveable and immoveable. Since he, the supreme, being by nature luminous, shines from the beginning, in every form of splendour, this soul and source of all beings, having created the waters, formed of old this entire universe.” Krishṇa then (vv. 7402 ff.) proceeds to set forth the benefits of reverence to Brahmans, who he says (7412 f.) could reduce this world to ashes, and create new ones, and illustrates his opinion of their importance by the results of his own experience (see above, p. 165).

He afterwards goes on in the passage which I have already cited in pp. 165-170, to return the compliment paid to him by Mahādeva, by celebrating the greatness of that deity, though he does not there commit himself to any such explicit avowal of the supreme divinity of his rival, as the latter has made in regard to him in the text (Anusāsana-parva, 6806 ff.) which has just been adduced in p. 230 f.

In the Āśvamedhika-parva it is related, vv. 1536 ff., that when Krishṇa had left the city of the Pandus, and was journeying to Drārakā, he fell in with the muni Uttanga, who asked him whether he had reconciled the Kurus and Pandus with one another. Krishṇa replied (1559) that he had made the attempt to do so, but without success, and that the Kurus had perished in consequence. On hearing this Uttanga becomes greatly incensed, and threatens to curse Krishṇa because he had not rescued the Kurus, although he was perfectly able to do so. To pacify the muni's wrath, Krishṇa offers to explain the circumstances, and to unfold the mystery of his own nature; which he accordingly does in vv. 1564 ff. :

“Know that the qualities of darkness (tamas), passion (rajas), and goodness (sattva) have their abode in me. Know also that both the Rudras and Vasus are sprung from me. All beings reside in me, and I in all beings, etc. . . . . 1567 ff. : That which men call entity and nonentity, the unmanifested and the manifested, the undecaying and the decaying,—all this consists of my essence. And know, o muni, that the fourfold duties which are recognized as belonging to the [four] conditions of life, as well as all the Vedic [ordinances], are part of my nature. As regards nonentity, and that which is both entity and nonentity, and that which transcends both entity and nonentity,—know that [of all this] there is nothing which transcends me, the eternal god of gods. Know, descendant of Bhṛigu, that I am the Vedas which are introduced by oṃkāra, the sacrificial post, the soma, the charu, the homa, the tridaśūpyāyana (that which satiates the immortals) in the sacrifice. Know that I am both the hotri (priest), and the havya (oblation). [I am] also the adhvaryu of the ceremony, and the highly purified butter. The udgātṛi celebrates me with sounds of hymns at the great sacrifice. And at the rites of atonement, the priests who utter propitiatory and auspicious texts continually, o excellent Brahman, praise me, the architect of all. Know that Dharma (Righteousness) is my beloved first-born mental son, whose nature is to have compassion on all creatures. In his character I exist among men, both present and past, passing through many varieties of mundane existence, in different disguises and forms, in the three worlds, for the preservation and establishment of righteousness. I am Vishṇu, Brahmā, Indra, and the source as well as destruction [of things], the creator and the annihilator of the whole aggregate of existences. While all men live in unrighteousness, I, the unfalling, build up the bulwark of righteousness, as the ages pass away. While entering into various wombs, from a desire to promote the good of creatures, whenever I assume a divine birth, I act in every respect agreeably to my divine character." . . . (He adds that he acts agreeably to all the other natures which he assumes.) 1582 : "But during the existence of my mortal condition, though they (the Kurus) were humbly entreated by me, they, through delusion, were not touched, and did not listen to my words. Though terrified by me, when I was incensed, with great alarms, and again fittingly admonished, they, influenced by unrighteousness, and overcome by fate, have been righteously slain in battle, and have undoubtedly gone to heaven." <sup>210</sup> On hearing this reply of Kṛishṇa, the sage Uttanga breaks out : "I recognize thee, Janārdana, as the creator of the world," etc. Kṛishṇa then shews him his divine form.

VII. In the preceding pages, various passages have been adduced in which the supremacy of Mahādeva and his identity with the soul of the universe have been asserted (pp. 155 f., 162, 164), and other texts have been quoted in which the same rank and character are assigned to Viṣṇu (pp. 222-234). The reader will likewise have noticed that in some places also (pp. 195, 204, 226, 231), an attempt is made, by alleging the essential

A hero slain, is not to be lamented, for he is exalted in heaven. Men do not desire to offer to him food or water, or perform ablutions, or [contract ?] impurity [on his account]. Hear from me the worlds to which he goes. Thousands of beautiful nymphs (apsaras) run quickly up to the hero who has been slain in combat, saying to him, 'be my husband.'" Professor Weber refers to this passage, Indische Studien, i. 398, note, and notices the parallel it forms to similar representations about Hūris in the Coran. In the same way Kṛishṇa says to Jarāsandha (Sabha-parva, v. 869) : Ko hi jānann abhijanann ūtmavān xatriyo nṛipah | nāśīsat svargam atulañ ranānantaram avyayam | svargam hy eva samūsthāya raṇa-yaññeshu dīxītāḥ | jayanti xatriyā lokāns tad viddhi manuṣjarshabha | svarga-yonir mahad brahma svarga-yonir mahad yaśah | svarga-yonis tupo yuddhe mṛityuḥ sa 'ryabhickā-ravān | "For what Kshattriya king, who had a soul, and recognised his own kindred, has not, after the battle, entered into an incomparable and undecaying paradise ? Know, chief of men, that Kshattriyas, consecrated in the sacrifice of battle, attain to paradise and conquer the worlds. Great scriptural knowledge is the source of paradise, and so is great renown ; austerity (tapas) in fight, too, is the source of paradise such a death never fails of its reward."

oneness of the two deities, to reconcile their conflicting claims. Another passage of this description occurs in the Harivaṃśa, vv. 10660 ff. It had been related in the preceding section that Śiva had come to the assistance of Bāṇa and the Dānavas in their conflict with Kṛṣṇa (v. 10587 f.), when a terrible combat ensues between the latter and Śiva, which causes the earth to tremble, and throws the whole universe into disorder (v. 10601 f.). Śiva is at length paralyzed by a weapon of his adversary called jṛimbhana, which causes him to yawn incessantly (v. 10632 f.). The earth is distressed (v. 10641 ff.) and appeals to Brahmā for assistance. Brahmā (v. 10647) remonstrates with Śiva against his conflict with Kṛṣṇa, who, he says, is in reality one with himself. Śiva perceiving by yoga (mental union with the object contemplated) the truth of what Brahmā had stated, says to Brahmā that he will no longer fight against Kṛṣṇa, and the two combatants embrace (v. 10648 ff.). Brahmā then says to the sage Mārkaṇḍeya (v. 10656 ff.) that he had formerly, in a dream, seen the two deities on the northern side of the mountain Mandara, each invested with the emblems of the other, Hara (Śiva) in the form of Hari (Viṣṇu) with the shell, discus, and club, clothed in yellow vestments and mounted on Garuḍa, and Hari in the form of Hara, bearing the trident and axe, clad in a tiger's skin, and mounted on a bull; and he asks the sage Mārkaṇḍeya to explain this phenomenon which had occasioned him great astonishment. Mārkaṇḍeya replies (vv. 10660 ff.) :

“When thou shewest me this auspicious [vision], I perceive thereby no difference between Siva who exists in the form of Vishṇu, and Vishṇu who exists in the form of Siva. I shall declare to thee that form composed of Hari and Hara (Vishṇu and Mahādeva) combined, which is without beginning, or middle, or end, imperishable, undecaying. He who is Vishṇu is Rudra; he who is Rudra is Pitāmaha (Brahmā): the substance (mūrtti) is one, the gods are three, Rudra, Vishṇu, and Pitāmaha. Bestowers of boons, creators of the world, sovereigns of the world, self-existent, they are the half-female lords, and have performed austere rites. Just as water thrown into water can be nothing else than water, so Vishṇu entering into Rudra must possess the nature of Rudra. And just as fire entering into fire can be nothing else but fire, so Rudra entering into Vishṇu must possess the nature of Vishṇu. Rudra should be understood to possess the nature of fire; Vishṇu is declared to possess the nature of Soma (the Moon); and the world moveable and immoveable possesses the nature of Agni and Soma. The lords, Vishṇu and Maheśvara, are the makers and destroyers of things moveable and immoveable, and the benefactors of the world. The gods Nārāyaṇa and Maheśvara are the makers, causes, and makers, the makers, causes and causers, existing in the past, future, and present. And these two are the revealers, they possess a luminous essence, they are declared to be the preservers of the world, and the creators. They rain, they shine, they blow, and they create. This which I have told thee, Pitāmaha, is the highest mystery. The man who continually repeats it, and hears it, obtains the highest abode granted by the grace of Rudra and Vishṇu. I shall laud the gods Hari and Hara, associated with Brahmā; and these two are the supreme deities, the originators and destroyers of the world. Vishnu, the highest [manifestation] of Rudra, and Siva, the highest [manifestation] of Vishnu,—this [god] one only, though divided into twain, moves continually in the world. Vishnu does not [exist] without Sankara, nor Siva without Keśava: hence these two, Rudra and Upendra (Vishnu), have formerly attained to oneness," etc.

Then follows a hymn to the double deity.

The various representations of Krishna given in the different sets of passages above cited possess a certain interest in themselves, even independently of the light which they may be considered to throw on the process by which his deification was effected. Among the texts adduced from the Mahābhārata there are some (see pp. 153 ff.) in which he is distinctly subordinated to Mahādeva, of whom he is exhibited as a worshipper, and from whom, as well as from his wife Umā, he is stated to have received a variety of boons. Even in these passages, however, a superhuman character is ascribed to Krishna.

A second class of texts has been brought forward in pp. 170 ff., in which his superiority is represented to have been denied by Śiśupāla, Duryodhana, Karṇa, and Salva. Of course we are not to imagine that any claim to a superhuman character was ever advanced on behalf of the Yādava hero in his lifetime, either by himself or his friends. These narrative passages, therefore, in which his divine dignity is denied by his enemies, and asserted by his partisans, as well as vindicated by the miraculous exploits which are attributed to him, are nothing more than poetical fictions (possibly of a polemical import) put forward at a period when his godhead had come to be recognised by the Vaiṣnavas, though perhaps doubted or disputed by other sects. Such a resistance to the pretensions set up on Krishna's behalf may be indicated in the verses I have quoted in p. 200 f., where all who regard him as a mere man are stigmatized as being under the dominion of the quality of darkness.

In the third class of passages, quoted in pp. 206–216, where the achievements of Krishna are described with a supernatural colouring, it seems not unreasonable to recognise a basis of simpler legend (if not of actual history) <sup>212</sup> underlying the miraculous narrative, and to trace a reference to a variety of warlike adventures in which the Yādava chief contended as a mere man with the warriors of other tribes. The supernatural powers which are here ascribed to him are not in their character essentially different from those which are attributed to his enemies, who, it will be observed, are in like manner represented as endowed with superhuman faculties; while Krishna himself is in various places described as being indebted to the gods for his weapons, or for other advantages (see the Drona-parva, v. 402, and the Adi-parva, v. 8196, quoted in p. 209, and the Udyoga-parva, quoted in p. 213).

The identification of Arjuna and Krishna with the saints Nara and Nārāyaṇa (pp. 192–206)<sup>213</sup> is curious; but I am unable to conjecture whether it may have originated in a previously existing legend respecting two rishis of that name (the one of whom as bearing the same name which was ultimately applied to Vishṇu and Krishna, was, in the fanciful spirit of Indian mythology, and in consonance with the tenet of metempsychosis, declared to have been an earlier manifestation of Krishna,—when Arjuna the bosom friend of the latter would naturally be regarded as the same with Nara, the inseparable companion of Nārāyaṇa); or whether the whole legend was originally invented for the glorification of Krishna and Arjuna.

In the passages above adverted to, where Krishna is subordinated to Mahādeva, the latter is identified with the supreme Deity (see pp. 154, 156, 162). In another set of texts, however (pp. 222 ff.), Krishna, as Vishṇu, is asserted to be one with the supreme God,<sup>214</sup> while Mahādeva is represented as springing from, and dependent on, Vishṇu. But here and elsewhere, as we have already seen, an attempt is made to reconcile the claims of the two rival deities by affirming their identity (pp. 195, 204 f., 226, 231, 237). How are we to explain this circumstance, that in one place Mahādeva is extolled at the expense of Krishna, and that in another place Krishna is exalted above Mahādeva? Must we assume the one set of passages to be older than the other, or are we to suppose them to be contemporaneous, or nearly contemporaneous, and to have been inserted in the Mahābhārata by different classes of sectaries in order to give a sort of catholicity to the great epic, by making it a storehouse in which the votaries of all the different deities might find something to satisfy their various tendencies?

It does not, I think, result from a comparison of the principal passages which I have quoted relative to Mahādeva, with those which have reference to Kṛishṇa, that the one class bears in its general complexion the impress of any greater antiquity than the other. Both appear to belong to the same age, as we find in both the same tendency to identify the god who is the object of adoration with the supreme Soul. The passages relating to both gods, as they now stand, would therefore seem to be the products of a sectarian spirit, and to have been introduced into the poem by the Śaivas and Vaiṣṇavas for the purpose of upholding the honour of their respective deities. But on the other hand the mere fact that a poem in which Kṛishṇa plays throughout so prominent a part, and which in its existing form is so largely devoted to his glorification, should at the same time contain so many passages which formally extol the greatness, and still more, which incidentally refer to a frequent adoration, of the rival deity, by the different personages, whether contemporary or of earlier date, who are introduced,—this fact is, I think, a proof that the worship of the latter (Mahādeva) was widely diffused, if indeed it was not the predominant worship in India, at the period to which the action of the poem is referred. Various references to such a worship of Mahādeva as I have alluded to will be found in the preceding pages, 154–170, 194 f., and 227 (where the abode of this deity is described as being in the Himālaya, p. 194 and and 227). I shall quote some further illustrations of its prevalence.<sup>215</sup>

Lassen remarks (i. 780), that in the epic poems the worship of Viṣṇu is but seldom<sup>216</sup> mentioned—a fact which he regards as proving that at the period when they were composed no special worship of that deity had been extensively spread, at least among the Brahmans and princes, to the description of whose manners and customs those works almost exclusively confine themselves. On the other hand he quotes the following passages to prove the wide extension of the worship of Mahādeva in different parts of India. In the Tirtha-yātrā, or section on visiting places of pilgrimage, in the Vana-parva, 6054 ff., it is said of the Vaitaranī river, in the country of the Kalingas :

 "Let him then go to Tripishtapa, renowned in the three worlds. There is the holy river Vaitaranī, which destroys sin. Having bathed there and worshipped the god who wields the trident and whose ensign is the bull (Mahādeva), he shall be purified from all sin, and attain the highest felicity."

At vv. 11001 of the same book it is said of the north bank of the same river :

Atraiva Rudro rājendra paśum ādattavān makhe | paśum ādāya rājendra bhāgo 'yam iti chābravit | hṛite paśau tadā devās tam ūchur Bharatarshabha | mā para-svam abhidrogdhā mā dharmān sakalān vaśiḥ | tataḥ kalyāṇa-rūpābhir vāgbhis te Rudram astuvān | ishtyā chainaṃ tarpayitvā mānayāñchakrire tadā | tataḥ sa paśum utsrija deva-yānena jagmivān | tatrānuvaṃso Rudrasya tan nibodha Yudhishtira | ayātayāmaṃ sarvebhyo bhūgebhyo bhāgam uttamam | devāḥ saṅkalpayāmāsur bhayād Rudrasya śāśvatam | imāṃ gāthāṃ atra gāyam apaḥ spṛśati yo naraḥ | deva-yāno 'śya panthās cha chaxushā 'bhīprakāśate |

"In this very place, o king, Rudra seized a victim at a sacrifice, and having done so, said, 'This is [my] portion.' When he had seized the victim, the gods said to him, 'Do not attack the property of others; do not covet all the offerings.' They then lauded Rudra with words of auspicious import; and having satiated him with an oblation, they paid him honour. He then relinquished the victim, and departed by the path of the gods. Referring to this is the following traditional verse of Rudra, which learn from me, Yudhishtira: 'Through dread of Rudra, the gods allotted to him for ever the most excellent of all portions, the ayātayāma (or fresh portion). The man who, here reciting this verse, touches the waters obtains a distinct vision of the path leading to the gods.”

In the same Vana-parva, v. 8166, it is said that Mahādeva was worshipped at Gokarna, on the west coast of the Dekhan :

Atha Gokarnam āsādyā trishu lokeshu viśrutam | samudra-madhye rājendra sarva-loka-namaskritam | yatrā Brahmādayo devā rishayaś cha tapodhanāḥ | . . . . . 8169: Saritaḥ sāgarāḥ sailā upāsanta Umā-patim | ityādi | “Then having reached Gokarna, renowned in the three worlds, standing in the sea, adored by all worlds, where Brahmā and the other gods and rishis rich in austerity,” [various other kinds of beings are here enumerated, Bhūtas, Yaxas, etc. etc.], “rivers, oceans, and mountains worshipped the lord of Umā (Mahādeva).”

The same place is also mentioned in the Vana-parva, v. 15999 f. :

Trikūṭam samatikramya Kālāparvatam eva chu | dadarśa makarāvāsān gambhīrodam mahodadhim | tam atityātha Gokarnam abhyagachhat Daśānanaḥ | dayitaṁ sthānam avyagraṁ Sūlapāner mahātmanaḥ | “Having passed Trikūta, and the Black Mountain, he (Rāvaṇa) saw the deep ocean, the abode of marine monsters. Having crossed it, he then approached Gokarna, the beloved undisturbed abode of the mighty wielder of the trident.”

[The same Tirtha-yātrā, however, contains the following passage celebrating Krishna :

Vana-parva, v. 8349 f.—Puṇyā Dvāravatī tatra yatrāsau Madhusūdanaḥ | sūxūd devaḥ purāṇo 'sau sa hi dharmah sanātanaḥ | ye cha vedavido viprā ye chādhyātma-vido janāḥ | te vadanti mahātmānaṁ Krishṇaṁ dharmāṁ sanātanam | pavitrānāṁ hi Govindah pavitram param uchyaṭe | puṇyānām api puṇyo 'sau mangalānām cha mangalam | trailokyē Puṇḍarikāxo deva-devaḥ sanātanaḥ | avyayātmā vyayātmā cha xetrajñah paramēśvaraḥ | āste Harir achintyātmā tatraiva Madhusūdanaḥ | “There is the holy Dvāravatī where that Madhusūdana [abides], that manifest, ancient god ; for he is the eternal righteousness. Brahmins who know the Veda, and who know the supreme spirit, call the mighty Krishna the eternal righteousness. Govinda is called the supremely pure among the pure, the holy among the holy, the blessed among the blessed. In the three worlds the lotus-eyed is the eternal god of gods, the undecaying in essence, and the decaying, the conscious occupant of the body, the supreme lord. There the inconceivable Hari, Madhusūdana, abides.”]

The following passages supply some further instances of the worship of Mahādeva by personages introduced in the poem :

Ādi-parva, v. 7049.—Evam teshām vilapatām riprāṇām vividhā girāḥ | Arjuno dhanuḥśo 'bhyāse tasthau girir ivāchalāḥ | sa tad dhanuḥ parikramya pradacīnam athākarot | pranamya śirasā devam Īśānaṁ varadam prabhum | Kṛishṇaṁ cha manasā kṛitrā jagrihe chārjunō dhanuḥ | yat pārthivaiḥ Rukmi-Sunītha-Vaktraiḥ Rādheya-Duryodhana-Sālya-Sālvaiḥ | tadā dhanuḥ-veda-parair nṛiśimhaiḥ kṛitāṁ na saḥyam mahato 'pi yatnāt | tad Arjunaḥ ityādi | “While the Brahmans thus uttered various speeches, Arjuna stood firm as a mountain, trying the bow. He then made a circuit round it, bowing down in reverence to the boon-bestowing lord Īśāna (Mahādeva); and having meditated on Krishna,<sup>217</sup> Arjuna seized the bow. And that bow which the lion-like kings Rukmin, Sunītha (Śiśupāla), Vaktra, Rādheya, Duryodhana, Sālya, and Sālva, skilled in archery, could not with great effort bend [so as to fix the bowstring], Arjuna bent, and hit the mark,” etc. etc.

In the Vana-parvā, vv. 15777, it is related that Jayadratha, after being captured by Bhīshma and released at the request of Yudhishtira, went to worship Mahādeva (v. 15801):

Jagāma rājan duḥkhārtto Gangādvārāya Bhārata | sa devaṁ śaraṇaṁ gatvā virūpākṣam Umāpatim | tapaś chachāra vipulāṁ tasya prīto Vṛishadhvajah | balim svayam pratyagrihnāt priyamānus Trilochanaḥ | varaṁ chāśmai dadau devaḥ sa jagrāha cha tach chhṛiṇu | “Samastān sarathān pañcha jayeyān yudhi Pāṇḍarān” | iti rājā 'bravīt devaṁ neti devas tam abravīt | ajayyāṁś chāpy abadhyāṁś cha vārayishyasi tām yudhi | rite 'rjunam mahābāhuṁ Naraṁ nāma sureśvaram | Vāduryyāṁ taptā-tapaśaṁ Nārāyaṇa-sahāyakam | ajitāṁ sarva-lokānāṁ devair api durāsadam | mayā dattam pāśupataṁ divyam apratimaṁ śaram | avāpa lokapālebhyo vajrādīn sa mahāśarān | deva-devo hy anantātmā Viśṇuḥ sura-guruḥ prabhuḥ | pradhāna-puruṣo 'vyaktaḥ viśvātmā viśva-mūrttimān | yugānta-kāle samprāpte kālāgnir dahate jagat | sa-parvatārṇava-dvīpaṁ sa-saila-vana-kānanam |

There, resorting to the distorted-eyed lord of Umā as his refuge, he practised long austerities. Gratified with this, the three-eyed god, whose ensign is a bull, himself received his oblation, and offered him a boon, which he accepted. Hear how [he did so]. The king (Jayadratha) said to the god, 'May I vanquish all the five Pāṇḍavas with their chariots in battle.' The god said, 'No; thou shalt withstand them all, though they are unconquerable and not to be slain, excepting only the great-armed Arjuna, who is called Nara, the lord of the gods, who performed austerity at Badari, attended by Nārāyaṇa, who is invincible by all the worlds, and irresistible even by the gods. He obtained the Pāśupata, a divine, incomparable missile, given by me, and thunderbolts and other weapons from the guardians of the worlds. For the infinite Viṣṇu, the god of gods, the chief of the deities, the chief spirit (Puruṣa), the undiscernible, the soul of all things, the universal-formed, at the end of the yuga burns up the world, with its mountains, oceans, continents, rocks and forests.'" Mahādeva then goes on to relate how the destruction and the restoration of the world is effected by Viṣṇu, and describes his various incarnations. He concludes by saying that Arjuna who was aided by him could not be conquered even by the gods. In this legend it will be observed that the warrior goes to worship Mahādeva, and not Viṣṇu, though the latter is represented as being magnified by the rival deity. But this part of the story may be interpolated.

In the Santi-parva also (vv. 1748 f.), it is related how Paraśurāma worshipped Mahādeva on the mountain Gandhamādana, and obtained his celebrated axe, by which he became renowned in the world (toṣayitvā Mahādevam parrate Gandhamādane | astrāṇi varayāmāsa paraśuṃ chāti-tejasam | sa tenākunṭha-dhāreṇa jvalitānala-carchasā | kuthāreṇā-prameyeṇa lokeshv apratimo bhavat |). Then follows the story of Kārttavīrya.

In the following passage, Jarāsandha is introduced as a zealous votary of Mahādeva. Yudhisthira had been purposing to celebrate a Rājasūya sacrifice, which presupposed that he was the most powerful of contemporary monarchs; but Kṛṣṇa in the following words tells him that he cannot do so while Jarāsandha lives:

naḥ sarve jīvā Girivraje | kandare parvatendrasya simheneva mahā-dvipāḥ | sa hi rājā Jarāsandho yiyaxur vasudhādhipaiḥ | Mahādevam mahātmānam Umāpatim arindama | ārādhya tapasogreṇa nirjitās tena pārthivāḥ | pratijñāyās cha pāraṁ sa gataḥ pārthiva-sattamaḥ | sa hi nirjitya nirjitya pārthivān pritanāgatān | puram āniya buddhvā cha chakāra puruṣa-vrajam | vayaṁ chaiva mahārāja Jarāsandha-bhayāt tadā | Mathurāṁ samparityajya gatā Dvāravatīm purīm |

“But whilst the powerful Jarāsandha lives, a Rājasūya sacrifice cannot be attained by thee; such, king, is my opinion. For all the kings have been conquered, and are imprisoned by him in Girivraja, as elephants by a lion in a cave of a great mountain. For this monarch Jarāsandha desired to sacrifice to the glorious Mahādeva, the lord of Umā, with these kings as victims, and they were conquered by him after he had worshipped the god with dreadful austerities. And this eminent prince has attained to the accomplishment of his design. For after repeatedly conquering the princes who had come against him in battle, he has brought them to his capital, confined them, and made them a human herd. And we too,” (confesses Krishna) “from dread of Jarāsandha, deserted Mathurā, and went to the city of Dvāravati.”

Krishna returns, a little farther on, to Jarāsandha's cruelty to the kings:

Sabhā-parva, v. 653. — Ratna-bhājo hi rājāno Jarāsandham upāsate | na cha tushyati tenāpi bālyād anayam āsthitāḥ | mūrdhābhishiktaṁ nṛpatim pradhāna-puruṣo balāt | ādatte na cha no dṛishṭo 'bhāgaḥ puruṣhataḥ kvachit | evaṁ sarvān vaśe chakre Jarāsandhaḥ satāvarān | taṁ durbala-paro rājā katham Pārtha upaishyati | proxitānām pramṛishṭānām<sup>218</sup> rājñām Paśupater grihe | paśūnām ivā kā prītir jivite Bharat-arshabha | “For jewelled kings wait upon Jarāsandha; and yet he is not contented even with that, having through folly become imprudent. A prince seizes by force a consecrated king, and no mortal that we see is more wretched than such a man. In this manner Jarāsandha has reduced to subjection in all at least a hundred persons; how, then, can a feeble prince approach him? What pleasure can those princes have in existence, when they have been devoted to slaughter and designated as victims like beasts in the temple of Paśupati (Mahādeva)?”

Krishṇa afterwards proceeds to Jarāsandha's capital with Bhīma and Arjuna, with the view of slaying their enemy. They are admitted to his palace in the disguise of Brahmans, and after some conversation, Krishṇa says to Jarāsandha :

Sabhā-parva, vv. 861 ff. — Tvayā chopahṛitā rājan xatriyā loka-vāsinaḥ | tad āgaḥ krūrām utpādya manyase kim anāgasam | rājā rājñāḥ katham sādhuṁ hiṁsyuṁ nṛipati-sattama | yad rājñāḥ sannigrihya tvaṁ Rudrāyopajihṛshasi | asmāṁs tad enopagachchhet kṛitaṁ Vāḥadratha tvayā | vayanṁ hi śaktā dharmasya raxane dharma-chārīṇaḥ | manushyānām samālambho na cha dṛiṣṭaḥ kadāchana | sa katham mānushair devaṁ yoshtam ichhasi Śaṅkaram | savarṇo hi savarṇānām<sup>219</sup> paśu-saṅjñāṁ karishyasi | ko 'nya evaṁ yathā hi tvaṁ Jarāsandha vṛithā-matiḥ | yasyām yasyām avasthāyām yat yat karma karoti yaḥ | tasyām tasyām avasthāyām tat-phalaṁ samacāpnuyāt | te tvām jñāti-xaya-karaṁ vayanṁ arttānusārīṇaḥ | jñāti-vṛiddhi-nimittārthaṁ vinihantum ihāgatāḥ | . . . Jarāsandha uvācha . . . 882 : Devatārtham upāhṛitya rājñāḥ Krishṇa katham bhayāt | aham adya vimuchhye yaṁ xātraṁ vratam anusmaran |

“Thou, king, hast devoted [to Mahādeva] Kshattriyas dwellers in this world. Having devised this cruel iniquity, dost thou regard thyself as guiltless? How should a king injure virtuous kings? Inasmuch as thou hast confined kings, and seekest to offer them up to Rudra, the guilt committed by thee, son of Vṛihadratha, will attach to us. For we who practise righteousness are able to protect righteousness. And [such a thing as] the immolation of men has never been seen. How [then] dost thou seek to sacrifice to the god Śaṅkara with human victims? For thou, belonging to the same tribe [as those princes], wilt designate as victims men of thine own tribe. What other person, Jarāsandha, is so foolish as thou? Whosoever, in any condition, perpetrates any particular act will reap the fruit of it in that particular condition. We, the avengers of the afflicted, seeking the welfare of our kindred, have come hither to slay thee, the destroyer of thy kindred.” Krishṇa, then, after some further arguments, calls upon Jarāsandha either to liberate the kings, or to submit to be destroyed in combat. Jarāsandha (v. 880) says he has conquered the kings, and has a right to act as he is doing. He adds (v. 882): "How, Krishna, can I, who have devoted the kings to the god, remembering my duty as a Kshattriya, to-day release them from fear?" He then accepts the challenge, and is killed by Bhīmasena.

The birth of Jarāsandha is thus related in the Sabhā-parva; and the narrative contains at the close a reference to his being a worshipper of Mahādeva. His father, Vṛihadratha, had two wives, who after having been long barren, at length bore him two halves of a boy (v. 711), which being regarded with horror, were thrown out (v. 714). A female demon (Rāxasī) named Jarā, an eater of flesh, takes them up (v. 715) and puts them together in order that they may be more easily carried away. A boy is thus formed, who cries; and people in consequence come out of the inner apartments of the palace, and among them the two queens and the king. The Rāxasī assumes a human shape, and gives the child to the king, who then asks who she is. She replies (vv. 729 ff.):

Jarā-nāmā 'smi bhadrāṁ te Rāxasī kāma-rūpiṇī | tava veśmani rājendra pūjitā nyavasāṁ sukhāṁ | grihe grihe manushyānāṁ nityaṁ tishṭhāmi rāxasī | griha-devitī nāmnā vai purā śrīṣṭā Svayambhuvā | dānavānāṁ vināśāya sthāpitā divya-rūpiṇī | yo mām bhaktyā liṅhet kundye saputtrāṁ yauvanānvitāṁ | grihe tasya bhaved vridhīr anyathā xayam āpnuyāt | tvad-grihe tishṭhamānā tu pūjitā 'haṁ sadā vibho | likhitā chaiva kundye 'ham putrair bahubhir āvṛitā | gandha-pushpais tathā dhūpair bhaxyair bhojyaish supūjitā | sā'ham pratyupakārārthaṁ chintayamy anīṣāṁ tava | tavame pultra-śakale dṛishṭavaty asmi dhārmika | saṁśleshite mayā daivāt kumārāḥ samapadyata | tava bhāgyād mahārāja hetu-mātram ahaṁ tv iha | Meruṁ vā khādituṁ śaktā kim punas tava bālukaṁ | griha-sampūjanāt tushṭyā mayā pratyarpitas tava |

"I am, bless thee, a Rāxasī named Jarā, who can change my shape at will. Worshipped in thy house, I have dwelt there in comfort. Named the house-goddess, I dwell constantly in every separate house of men, having been created of old by Svayambhū; and placed [there], of celestial form, for the destruction of the Dānavas. Prosperity will remain in the house of that man who devoutly paints me in a youthful form, together with my sons, upon his wall;—otherwise he shall decay. Abiding in thy house, o king, and continually revered, painted upon the wall, surrounded by my numerous sons, worshipped with odours and flowers, with incense, and various kinds of food, I continually consider how I may benefit thee in return. I saw, righteous prince, these two pieces of thy son; I put them together by chance, and a boy was produced, through thy good fortune, o great king, and I was merely the instrument. I could devour mount Meru, much more thy son: but being gratified by the domestic worship I have received, I have restored him to thee."

The Rāxasī then disappears. King Vṛihadratha orders a great festival to be celebrated among the people of Magadha in her honour; and calls the boy Jarāsandha because he had been put together (sandhitah) by the Rāxasī Jarā (v. 738: Ājñūpayach cha rāxasyā Magadheshu mahotsavam | tasya nāmākaroch chaiva Pīlāmaha-samah pitū | Jarayā sandhito yasmāj Jarāsandho bhavaty ayam |). The rishi Chanḍakaūsika arrives on a certain occasion in the country of the Magadhas, and prophesies the future greatness of Jarāsandha (vv. 745 ff.). He ends by saying that this mighty prince of Magadha should have a manifest vision of Rudra, Mahādeva, Hara, the destroyer of Tripura (v. 753: Esha Rudram Mahādevam tripurānta-karam Haram | sarva-lokeshv atibalo sūxād draxyati Māgadhaḥ |).

The description here given by the Rāxasī of the worship paid to herself, furnishes, as Lassen (who quotes it, i. 609) remarks, an instance of the local adoration of particular deities in ancient India.

In the account given of the transactions connected with the Rājasūya sacrifice which Yudhishtīra sought to celebrate, we find (as Lassen, i. 673, remarks) the Pāṇḍavas represented as the partisans of Kṛishṇa; and this legendary narrative may perhaps be taken as an indication that they actually were the votaries of Vishṇu, and opposed to the worship of Mahādeva. In the story of Śiśupāla, which has been given above (pp. 171 ff.), we have seen that, in the assembly of princes who were gathered together on the occasion of that ceremonial, Kṛishṇa's claims to veneration were strongly maintained by the Pāṇḍavas, and others who, on this point at least, took their side, while they were strenuously resisted by Śiśupāla, an adherent of the Kauravas, and according to Lassen,<sup>220</sup> a representative of the Śaiva worship. The same opposition to the worship of Kṛishṇa was, as I have already

It is true that there is one passage (referred to above, p. 240, note 216) to which Lassen has drawn attention, in which Duryodhana is represented as having offered up a sacrifice to Vishnu; and as this legend exhibits some features of interest, I shall give some account of it here. In the Vana-parva, 15274 ff., Karna, after having conquered the earth, says to Duryodhana that the earth was now his, and he should rule over it like Indra. Duryodhana answers that he wished to celebrate a Rājasūya sacrifice. Karna replies that he should make preparation for that purpose (15278 ff.). Duryodhana then sends for his priest (purohita), whom he desires to perform the sacrifice (15284). The priest, however, states that the Rājasūya sacrifice cannot be celebrated by Duryodhana while Yudhishtira lives, and while his own father, Dhritarāshtra, survives (15285 ff.); but he suggests that there is another great sacrifice which Duryodhana may offer (15287 ff.):

rājendra śrinu chedaṁ vacho mama | ye ime prithivī-pālāḥ kara-dās tava pārthiva | te karān samprayachhantu surarnaṁcha kritakṛitāṁ | tena te kriyatām adya lāṅgalaṁ nṛipa sattama | yajña-rājasya te bhūmiḥ
kṛishyatām tena Bhārata | tatra yajño nṛipa-śreṣṭha prabhūtānnaḥ susaṁskṛitāḥ | pravarttatām yathānyāyāṁ sarvato hy anivāritāḥ | eṣha te
Vaiṣṇavo nāma yajñāḥ satpurushochitāḥ | etena neshtarān kaśchid rite
Vishnum purātanam | rāja-sūyaṁ kratu-śreṣṭhaṁ sparidhaty eṣha mahākratuḥ |* “But there is another great ceremonial equal to the rājasūya, with which, o great king, do thou sacrifice: and hear this which I have to say. Let those princes who are your tributaries present to you their contributions, and gold both wrought and un-wrought. With this let a plough be to-day made, and with it let the ground of thy sacrificial enclosure be ploughed. There let a sacrifice, well-arranged, and with abundant food, be duly celebrated; for it will be completely unobstructed. This is to thee the Vaishnava sacrifice (the sacrifice of Vishnu), a ceremony suitable for virtuous men.<sup>221</sup>
With it no one ever sacrificed except the ancient Vishnu. This great ceremonial rivals the rājasūya, the most excellent of sacrifices.”

Duryodhana and his friends consented to this proposal (15295 f.), and the sacrifice was accordingly performed (15301 ff.). Amid the rejoicings which followed the ceremony, however, some ill-natured persons said to Duryodhana that his sacrifice was not a sixteenth part so good as Yudhishtira's Rājasūya sacrifice, while his friends said that this sacrifice surpassed all other ceremonies, and that Yayāti, Nahusha, Māndhātṛi, and Bharata, had celebrated this rite, and had in consequence gone to heaven (15327 ff.): Apare tv abruvans tatra vātikās tam mahīpatim | Yudhishtīrasya yajñena na samo hy esha te kratuh | naiva tasya krator esha (?) kalām arhati shodāśīm | evaṁ tatrābruvan kechid vātikās taṁ janeśvaram | suhṛidas tv abruvans tatra atī sarvān ayaṁ kratur ityādi |

I am not aware of any passage of the Mahābhārata in which Duryodhana is represented as a special worshipper of Mahādeva; but in a passage in the Karna-parva, quoted above, pp. 187 ff., (which, however, I have supposed may be a later interpolation) he is declared to have narrated a legend descriptive of Mahādeva's prowess, and in which Vishṇu is generally subordinated to his rival. Duryodhana is also in two passages of the Mahābhārata connected (as if he was considered to be heretically disposed) with a Rākshasa named Chārvāka, and is represented as his friend (Sānti-parva, 1414-1442), and as calling him to mind after he has received his death-blow, and expressing a belief that if once informed of his fate, Chārvāka would perform an expiation for him in the holy lake Samantapanchaka.<sup>222</sup>

In his Indische Studien, i. 206, Professor Weber conjectures that "the Kurus may have been the representatives of the Rudra-, or Śiva-worship, and the Pandus or Panchālas of the Indra- (?) or Vishṇu-worship," and this supposition seems to derive support from the considerations which have just been adduced. ✓ describing to Yudhishtira the different partisans of Jarāsandha) appears as if it contained a tradition indicating some struggle, at a period antecedent to that of the writer, between the worship of Viṣṇu, and that of some local deity who was venerated in the provinces east of Magadha.

Jarāsandhaṁ gatas tv eva purā yo na mayā hataḥ | Purushottama-vijñāto yo 'sau Chedishu durmatih | ātmānam pratijānāti loke 'smin Purushottamam | ādatte satatam mohād yaḥ sa chiknaṁ cha māmakam | Vāṅga-Puṇḍra-Kirāteshu rājā bala-samanvitah | Pauṇḍrako Vāsudeveti yo 'sau loke 'bhiviśrutaḥ | “And he who formerly was not slain by me, has also taken the side of Jarāsandha—(I mean) the wicked man who is known as Purushottama among the Chedis, who in this world professes himself to be Purushottama, who through infatuation continually assumes my mark—he who is a powerful king among the Bangas, Pundras, and Kirātas, and is celebrated in the world as the Vāsudeva of the Pundras.<sup>223</sup>

<sup>223</sup> On this Lassen remarks (i. 608): “Since these (Purushottama and Vāsudeva) became in later times two of the most venerated names of Viṣṇu, it is clear from this passage, that among the Eastern tribes, and those too not of Arian origin, a supreme god was worshipped, whose name was afterwards transferred to Viṣṇu.”

CHAPTER III.

HYMNS, AND THE BRAHMANAS.

IN the preceding chapter I have quoted a variety of passages from the Mahābhārata, which, though primarily adduced to illustrate the ideas entertained of Kṛishṇa's character, afford at the same time a pretty full representation of the attributes of Mahādeva as he was conceived in the period of the epic poems and Purāṇas. I have thus found it necessary to anticipate much that would otherwise have found its place towards the close of the present chapter, of which it is the purpose to compare the earlier and the later accounts furnished to us by Indian literature of the deity or deities to whom the name of Rudra was applied. I shall now proceed to adduce the passages relating to this divinity which occur (1) in the Rīg-veda, (2) in the Yajur-veda, (3) in the Atharva-veda, and (4) in the Brāhmaṇas, and to compare the representation which they contain with those which are found in the texts descriptive of Mahādeva which I have quoted in the preceding chapter.

SECT. I.—Rudra as represented in the Hymns of the Rīg-veda.

IN the present Section I purpose to quote all the texts of the Rīg-veda in which the word Rudra occurs in the singular, whether as an epithet of Agni or as the name of a separate deity.

R. V. i. 27, 10 (S. V. i. 15; Nir. x. 8).—Jarābodha tad vividdhi viśe viśe yajñiṇyāya stomaṁ rudrāya dṛiṣṭikam | “Thou who art skilled in praise, utter therefore for every tribe, a beautiful hymn to the adorable, the terrible (Agni)." In connection with this verse, Yāska remarks :

Nir. x. 7 and 8.—Agnir api rudra uchryate | tasyaishā bhavati . . . jarā stutīh | jarateh stuti-karmanah | tām bodha tayā bodhayitar iti vā | tad rividdhī tat kuru manushyasya manushyasya yajanāya stomañ Rudrāya darsanīyam | "Agni also is called Rudra, as in this verse (the one before us). Jarā means 'praise.' One who perceives it, or awakens [another] by it, is jarābodha. Compose that for the worship of every man,—a sightly hymn for the terrible." Roth (Illust. of Nir., p. 136) remarks that rudra in this verse is an epithet of Agni, to whom the whole trichu or aggregate of three verses in which it occurs, is addressed ; and he refers to R. V. x. 70, 2, 3, and R. V. viii. 26, 5, where the same epithet is applied in the dual to Mitra and Varuna, and to the Aśvins, respectively. Roth also quotes from Jayatīrtha the following short itihāsa in reference to this verse, which, however, applies it to Rudra : Agniḥ stūyamānaḥ Śunahśephā uvācha "Rudraṁ stūhi vaudrā hi paśavaḥ" iti | Su tam pratyuvācha "nāhañ jānāmi Rudraṁ stotuṁ tram evaitaṁ stūhi" iti tad idam uchryate "He jarābodha Rudra-stuti-vettas tat kuru" ityādi | "Agni, when he was being praised, said to Śunahśepha, 'Praise Rudra, for cattle (or victims) belong to him.' He (Śunahśepha) answered, 'I do not know how to praise Rudra ; do thou praise him.' It is this which is here expressed, 'O thou who art skilled in the praise of Rudra, do thou do so.'"

R. V. i. 43, 1 ff.—Kad Rudrāya prachetase mīlhushtāmāya taryase | vochema śantamañ hṛide | 2. Yathā no Aditīḥ karat paśve nṛibhyo yathā gave | yathā tokāya rudriyam | 3. Yathā no Mitro Varuṇo yathā Rudraś chiketati | yathā viśve sajośasaḥ | 4. Gūtha-patim mēdha-patim Rudraṁ jalāsha-bheshajam | tat śaṁyoh sumnam imaho | 5. Yah śukra iva sūryo hiraṇyam iva rochate | śreṣṭho devānāṁ vasuḥ | 6. Suñ nah karaty arvate sugam meshāya meshye | nṛibhyo nāribhyo gave | "What can we utter to Rudra, the intelligent, the most bountiful, the strong, which shall be most pleasant to his heart? 2. That so Aditi may bring Rudra's healing to our cattle, and men, and kine, and children. 3. That so Mitra, Varuna, Rudra, and all the [gods] united, may think of us. 4. We seek from Rudra, the lord of songs, the lord of sacrifices, who possesses healing remedies, his auspicious favour. 5. [We seek this from him] who is brilliant as the sun, who shines like gold, who is the best and the brightest of the gods. 6. He grants prosperity and welfare to our horses, rams, ewes, men, women, and cows."

R. V. i. 64, 2—Te jajñire diva rishvāsa uxano Rudrasya maryā asurā arepasah | pāvakāsaḥ śuchayah sūryā iva satvāno na drapsino ghōra-varpasah | 3. Yuvāno Rudrā ajarā abhogghano vavaxur adhrigāvaḥ parvatā iva | drīḥa chid viśvā bhuvanāni pārthivā prachyāvayanti div-yāni majmanā | . . . 12. Ghṛishum pāvakaṁ vaninaṁ vicharshanīm Rudrasya sūnuṁ havasā grīṇimasi | rajasturaṁ tavaṣam mārutaṁ gaṇam rīḥishinaṁ vṛishanaṁ sāśchata śriye | "These sons of Rudra have been produced from the sky, exalted, fertilizing, spiritual, sinless, purifiers, bright as suns, resembling spirits, shedding water, fearful in form. 3. The youthful Rudras, undecaying, destroyers of the impious, resistless, [firm as] mountains, have increased [in vigour]. By their power they cast down all the firm terrestrial and celestial worlds. . . . 12. We praise with invocations the fierce, purifying, rain-dispensing, all-beholding offspring of Rudra. May he give us a share of damsels. 11. This soma is purified for the god with braided hair, like sweet butter. May he give us a share of damsels." The word is also applied to the Tritsus in R. V. vii. 83, 8. . . . Svītyāñcho yatra namasū kaparddino dhīyā dhīvanto asapanta Tritsavah | . . . "Where the white-robed Tritsus with braided hair have worshipped you with obeisances and prayers." With this compare daxīnatas-kaparddōh in R. V. vii. 33, 1. The word Kaparddin also occurs in R. V. x. 102, 8.

“We present these prayers to Rudra, the strong, with braided hair, ruling over heroes, that there may be prosperity to the two-footed and four-footed creatures, that everything in this village may be well fed and free from disease. 2. Be gracious to us, Rudra, and cause us happiness; let us with obeisance worship thee, the ruler over heroes. Whatever prosperity and blessing our father Manu has earned by worship, may we attain it all under thy guidance, Rudra. 3. May we by our worship of the gods obtain the goodwill of thee, Rudra, who art the ruler of heroes, and beneficent; act favourably towards our people: may we, with our warriors unharmed, offer thee our oblation. 4. We invoke to our succour the impetuous Rudra, the fulfiller of sacrifice, the crooked-goer, the wise. May he drive far away from us the anger of the gods, for we desire his favour. 5. We invoke with obeisance the dark-hued celestial boar (cloud?), with braided hair, a brilliant form. Carrying in his hand most choice remedies, may he give us protection, defence, shelter. 6. This magnifying hymn, sweeter than the sweetest, is uttered to Rudra, the father of the Maruts. Bestow on us, o immortal, the food of mortals; be gracious to ourselves, our children, and descendants. 7. Slay neither our great, nor our small, neither our growing nor our grown, neither our father nor our mother; injure not, Rudra, our dear selves. 8. Injure us not in our children and descendants, nor in our men, nor in our cattle, nor in our horses. Slay not our warriors in thine anger: we continually worship thee with offerings. 9. Like a keeper of cattle I have prepared for thee hymns: bestow on us your favour, o father of the Maruts. For kind and most gracious is thy benevolence, and now we desire thy succour. 10. Far from us be thy cow-slaying and thy man-slaying [weapon]: ruler of heroes, let thy sympathy be with us. Be gracious to us, o god, and intercede for us, and bestow on us prosperity, lord of both worlds. 11. We have uttered to him our adoration, desiring his help. May Rudra, attended by the Maruts, listen to our invocation. May Mitra, Varuṇa, Aditi, Sindhu, Earth and Sky, grant us this."

In Sāyana's annotations on the 6th verse, he quotes the following modern story to explain how Rudra (here identified with the later Mahādeva) came to be called the father of the Maruts:

Rudrasya Marutām pitṛitvam evam ākhyāyate | purā kadāchid Indro 'surān jigāya | tadānīm Ditiḥ Asura-mātā Indra-hanana-samartham putrām kāmāyamānā tapasā bharttuḥ sakāśād garbhaṁ lebbe | imāṁ vṛittāntam avagachhann Indro vajra-hastāḥ san sūxma-rūpo bhūtvā tasyā udaram praviśya taṁ garbhaṁ saptaadhā bibhedu | punar apy ekaikāṁ sapta-khaṇḍam akaroḥ | te sarve garbhaika-deśā yoner nirgatyārudan | etasmīn uvasare līlārthaṁ gachhantau Pārvatī-paramēśvarāv imān da-dṛīsatuḥ | Maheśam prati Pārvatī evam avochat | "ime māṁsa-khaṇḍā yathā pratyekam putrāḥ sampadyantām evāṁ tvayā kāryyam mayi chet prītir asti" iti | sa cha Maheśvaras tām samāna-rūpān samāna-vayasāḥ samānūlaṅkāṛān putrān kṛtvā Gauryyai pradadau "tavame putrāḥ santu" iti | atah sarveshu Māruteshu sūkteshu Maruto Rudra-putrā iti stūyante Raudreshu cha Marutām pitā Rudra iti |

"The story of Rudra being the father of the Maruts is thus recounted. Formerly, once on a time, Indra overcame the Asuras. Then Diti, the mother of the Asuras, desiring a son who should be able to slay Indra, through austerity became pregnant by her husband. Indra, learning this news, entered into her womb in a very minute form, with a thunderbolt in his hand, divided her foetus into seven parts, and again made each of these parts into seven. All these being parts of the foetus, issued from the womb and wept. At this conjuncture, Parameśvara (Mahādeva) and Pārvatī were passing by for amusement, and saw them. Pārvatī spoke thus to Parameśvara, 'If you love me, effect that all these bits of flesh may become severally sons.' Maheśvara made them all of the same form and age, and with the same ornaments, and gave them to Gaurī (Pārvatī), saying, 'Let these be thy sons.' Hence in all the hymns addressed to the Maruts, they are lauded as the sons of Rudra; and in the hymns to Rudra, he is praised as the father of the Maruts."

R. V. i. 122, 1.—Pra vah pūtaṁ raghu-manyavo 'ndho yajñaṁ Rudrāya mīlhushe bharadvam | divo astoshi asurasya virair ishudyā iva Maruto rodasyoh | "Present, ye mild-tempered priests, to the bountiful Rudra, the draught of soma, your offering. The praise of the divine Marut is celebrated in heaven and earth."

R. V. i. 129, 3.—Dasmo hi śmā vṛishanum pinvasi tvachaṁ kaṁ chid yāvīr ararum śūra marttyam parivṛinaxi marttyam | Indrota tubhyaṁ tad dive tad Rudrāya sa-yaśase | Mitrāya vochaṁ Varuṇāya saprathaḥ sumṛīḷikāya saprathaḥ | "Thou, who art energetic, causest the teeming skin (the cloud) to be expanded: thou, hero, hast chased away every hostile mortal, thou puttest to flight the mortal. Indra, I have uttered this at length to thee, and to the Sky, and to Rudra, who derives his renown from himself, and to Mitra, and to Varuṇa, at length to the very bountiful."

R. V. ii. 1, 6.—Tvam Agne Rudro asuro maho divas tvam sardho mārutam prīxa īśishe | tvam vātair aruṇair yāsi saṁgayas tvam Pūṣhā vidhataḥ pāsi nu tmanā | "Thou, Agni, art Rudra, the deity (asura) of the great sky. Thou art the host of the Maruts. Thou art lord of the sacrificial food. Thou, who hast a pleasant abode, movest onward with the ruddy winds. Thou [being] Pūshan, by thyself protectest those who worship thee."

See above (p. 66) the third verse of this hymn, where Agni is identified with Indra, and Vishnu, in the same way as he is identified with Rudra and Pūshan in the verse before us.—See also verses 4, 5, and 7.

Sāyana, in his commentary on this verse, gives two derivations of the word Rudra :

Rud duḥkhaṁ duḥkha-hetur vā pāpādih | tasya drāvayitā etan-nāmako devo'si | "Rudro vā esha yad Agnir" ity ādishv Agneḥ Rudra-śabdena vyavahārāt | yadvā tvam Rudraḥ | rauti | mām anishtvā narā duḥkhe patishyanti | Rudras tādṛīšo 'si | "Rut means suffering, or sin, etc., which causes suffering. Thou art the god so called, who drives this away (Rud-drāvayitā); for Agni is commonly expressed by the word Rudra in such passages as this, 'He who is Agni is Rudra.' Or, thou art Rudra. He cries. Not worshipping me, men will fall into grief. Thou art such a Rudra," etc.

R. “1. Father of the Maruts, may kindness come from thee: remove us not from the sight of the sun. May the hero spare our horses: may we, Rudra, increase in offspring. 2. Through the auspicious remedies conferred by thee, Rudra, may I attain a hundred winters. Drive away far from us enmity, and sin, and divers diseases. 3. Thou, Rudra, art in glory the most eminent of beings, the strongest of the strong, o wielder of the thunderbolt. Thou carriest us happily across our sin: repel all the assaults of evil. 4. Let us not, Rudra, provoke thee by our prostrations, by our unsuitable praises, vigorous [deity], or by our common invocations. Raise up our heroes by thy remedies: I hear that thou art the greatest physician of physicians. 5. May I with hymns propitiate that Rudra who is invoked with praises and oblations. Let not him who is mild, easily-invoked, tawny, with a beautiful chin, deliver us up to this will [of our enemies]. 6. The mighty [god] attended by the Maruts, has gladdened me his suppliant with invigorating nourishment. May I free from injury obtain [thy protection], as it were, shade from the heat [of the summer]: may I seek the favour of Rudra. 7. Where, Rudra, is that thy gracious hand which is healing and restorative, removing the evil which comes from the gods? Forgive me, thou vigorous [deity]. 8. I send forth an exceedingly great encomium to this tawny, vigorous, fair-complexioned god. Reverence the fiery [deity] with prostrations: we celebrate the glorious name of Rudra. 9. Firm of limb, multiform, fierce, tawny, he has been invested with bright golden ornaments.<sup>227</sup> Divine power is ever inseparable from Rudra, the lord of this vast world. 10. god, mounted on his chariot, like a terrible wild beast, destructive, and fierce. Be gracious to thy worshipper, Rudra, when praised : may thy hosts destroy some one else than us. 12. Even a boy, when his father approaches and salutes him, makes obeisance to him in return ; [so] o Rudra, I praise [thee], the giver of much [good], the lord of the excellent. Thou, when lauded, grantest to us remedies. 13. Those pure remedies of yours, Maruts, those which are auspicious, ye strong [gods], those which are beneficent, those which our father, Manu wished—those, as well as the blessing and favour of Rudra, I desire. 14. May the bolt of Rudra avoid us ; may the great malevolence of the fiery [deity] depart far from us. Unbend thy strong bows [so as not to strike] thy wealthy worshippers. Dispenser of good, be gracious to our children and descendants. 15. <sup>229</sup> Prof. Roth (Illust. of Nir. p. 135) considers the word svadhāvat to signify "independent," "whose glory is inherent," etc., and refers to R. V. vii. 20, 1; vii. 37, 2; vii. 86, 4. At p. 40 f. of his Illust. Roth assigns to svadhā the sense of "according to one's own determination," "according to pleasure," and quotes the following passages where it has this sense, viz.: R. V. i. 6. 4; i. 33, 11; i. 81, 4; ii. 3, 11; iii. 47, 1; vii. 78. 4; and viii. 20, 7.

Prof. Roth (Illustrations of Nirukta, p. 164) understands the keśin or "long-haired being" who is the subject of the hymn, to be an unshorn ascetic, who by his austerities has gained supernatural powers, and placed himself upon a level with the gods, and refers to R. V. vii. 56, 8. In his Lexicon, however, Roth refers to keśin as an epithet of Rudra in Atharva-veda, xi. 2, 18 (to be quoted below), with which he also compares the present passage. Yāska understands keśin of the Sun whose locks are rays. The allusion in the 7th verse to Rudra drinking water (visha) may possibly have given rise to the legend of his drinking poison (visha).—See above, p. 43.

R. V. x. 169, 1.—Mayobhūr vāto abhivātu usrāḥ ūrjasvatīr oshadhīr āriśantām | pīvasvatīr jīva-dhanyāḥ pibantu avasāya padvate<sup>232</sup> Rudra mṛiḥa | “May the wind, causing prosperity, blow upon our cows. Let them consume invigorating plants; let them drink, being fat and life-sustaining: Rudra, be gracious to our moving sources of food.”

I now proceed to quote from the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā the principal texts which it contains relative to Rudra.

Vaj. S. 3, 57 ff.—Esha te Rudra bhāgaḥ saha svasrā Ambikayā taṁ jushasva svāhā | esha te Rudra bhāga ākhus te paśuḥ | 58. Ava Rudram adīmahy ava devam tryambakam | yathū no vasyasas karad yathū naḥ śreyasas karad yathū no vyavasāyayāt | 59. Bheshajam asi bheshajam gave'svāya purushāya bheshajam | sukham meshāya meshyai | 60 (=R. V. vii. 59, 12). Tryambakam yajāmahe sugandhim pushti-vardhanam | urvārukam iva bandhanād mṛityor mūṣya mā'mṛitāt | tryambakam yajāmahe sugandhim pativedanam | urvārukam iva bandhanād ito mūṣya mā'mutaḥ | 61. Elat te Rudra avasām tena paro Mājavato atihī | avatata-dhanvā pinākavasah kṛitti-vāsā ahimsan naḥ śivo 'tīhi | 62. Tryāyusham Jamadagneḥ Kāśyapasya tryāyusham | yad deveṣu tryāyusham tad no astu tryāyusham | 63. Śivo nāmāsi svadhitis te pitū namaḥ te astu mā mā himsīḥ | nivartayāmy āyushe annādyāya prajananāya rāyas-poshāya suprajāstvāya suvīryāya | favour, may it be fortunate (svāhā). This is thy portion; thy victim is a mouse. 58. Let us satisfy Rudra; let us satisfy the god Tryambaka,<sup>233</sup> that he may make us most opulent, most happy, that he may prosper us. 59. Thou art a medicine, a medicine for kine and horses, a medicine for men, a [source of] ease to rams and ewes. 60. We worship Tryambaka, the sweet-scented, the increaser of fatness. May I, like a cucumber [severed] from its stem, be freed from death, not from immortality. We worship Tryambaka, the sweet-scented, who causes us to find our husbands. Like a cucumber [severed] from its stem, may I be released from this [world], not from that. 61. This, Rudra, is thy provision; with it depart beyond the Mūjavat, with thy bow unbended, with thy goad slackened, clothed with a skin, without injuring us, gracious, cross over.<sup>234</sup> 62. Let us have a triple life, the triple life of Jamadagni, the triple life of Kaśyapa, the triple life which exists among the gods. 63. Thou art gracious (śiva) by name; a thunderbolt [or an axe] is thy father. Reverence be to thee: destroy us not. I empower thee [o sacrificer] to obtain life, food to eat, the power of procreation, the possession of wealth, abundant offspring, and eminent prowess.”<sup>235</sup>

The next passage which I shall quote is the famous Satarudriya, a prayer the holiness and efficacy of which are celebrated in two passages quoted above (pp. 162 and 167) from the Mahābhārata (see also p. 155).

“Reverence, Rudra, to thy wrath, and to thy arrow. Reverence to both thy arms. 2. Shine upon us, dweller in the mountains, with that holy body of thine which is auspicious,<sup>237</sup> not terrible, and which does not betoken harm. 3. The arrow, o dweller in the mountains, which thou bearest in thy hand to discharge, make it, o lord of the mountains, auspicious; do not slay men and cattle. 4. With auspicious words we supplicate thee, dweller in the mountains, that all our men and cattle may be healthy and cheerful. 5. May the intercessor, the first divine physician, intercede for us. Destroying all serpents, strike down and drive away all Yātudhānīs (female goblins). 6. We deprecate from us the wrath of that auspicious deity who is copper-coloured, ruddy, and brown, and of those Rudras who in thousands surround him on all sides. 7. May he who glides away, blue-necked and red-coloured, and whom cowherds and female drawers of water<sup>238</sup> have seen,—may he, when seen, be gracious to us. 8. Reverence to the blue-necked, to the thousand-eyed, to the bountiful; and to his attendant spirits I offer reverence. 9. Loosen the string from both ends of thy bow; and throw away, o divine being, the arrows which are in thy hand. 10. May the bow of the god with braided hair be stringless, and his quiver contain pointless shafts. May his arrows perish, and his sword-sheath be empty. 11. That bow, o most bountiful, and that weapon which is in thy hand, with it, rendered innocuous, do thou protect us on every side. 12. May the shaft from thy bow avoid us in every direction; and deposit thy quiver far from us. 13. Unbending thy bow, o thousand-eyed, and thousand-quivered, and blunting the ends of thy arrows, be gracious and kind to us. 14. Reverence to thy violent weapon, unstrung, to both thy arms, and to thy bow. (Verses 15 and 16 correspond nearly with R. V. i. 114, 7, and 8.—See above, p. 256). 17. Reverence to the golden-armed leader of armies, to the lord of the regions, to the green-haired trees, to the lord of beasts,<sup>232</sup> who is yellow

“Bhava and Śarva, be gracious to us, be not hostile, lords of spirits, lords of beasts; reverence to you twain. Discharge not a long arrow; destroy not our bipeds and quadrupeds. 2. Abandon not our bodies to the dog or the jackal, to carrion birds, to vultures, to thy greedy black flies, lord of beasts; let not thy birds get us to devour. 3. We offer reverence to thy shout, to thy breath, and to thy arrows, Bhava, and o immortal Rudra, to thee the thousand-eyed. 4. We offer reverence to thee from before, and from behind, and from below, and from thy domain in the sky: reverence to thy firmament. 5. Reverence to thy face, Paśupati, to thine eyes, Bhava, to thy skin, to thy form, to thine aspect from before and behind. 6. Reverence to thy limbs, to thy belly, to thy tongue, to thy mouth, to thy teeth, to thy odour (nose?). 7. May we never contend with that archer whose locks are dark, who has a thousand eyes, the horseman, with Rudra the slayer of Ardhaka (?). 8. May he (Bhava) everywhere avoid us, may Bhava avoid us as fire avoids the waters. May he not bear malice towards us: reverence be to him. 9. Four times, eight times, be reverence to Bhava: ten times be reverence to thee, Paśupati. Thine are these five distinct sorts of animals—kine, horses, men, goats, and sheep. 10. Thine, Ugra, are the four regions, the sky, the earth, and the wide atmosphere; thine is everything which has a spirit and which breathes upon the earth. 11. This is a vast and wealthy store-house of thine, within which all these worlds are contained. Do thou favour us, Paśupati; reverence be to thee. Far from us be jackals, unlucky omens, dogs: may shrieking female demons with dishevelled hair go far from us. 12. Long-haired god, thou carriest a yellow and golden bow, which smites thousands and kills hundreds. Rudra's arrow, a celestial bolt, flies abroad: reverence be to it from hence in whatever direction it goes. 13. Thou pursuest after the adversary who settles down and seeks to overcome thee, Rudra, as a man tracking the steps (?) of a wounded [animal]. 14. Bhava and Rudra, who are always united and concordant, both fierce, ye advance to [deeds of] heroism. Reverence be from hence to them twain in whatever direction they are. 15. Reverence to thee coming, and to thee departing; reverence to thee, Rudra, standing, and to thee sitting. 16. Reverence in the evening, in the morning, by night and by day: I have offered reverence to Bhava, and to Sarva, both of them. 17. Let us not with our tongue injure Rudra, who rushes on, thousand-eyed, viewing all the world, who hurls his shafts in our presence, and who is manifoldly wise. 18. We approach first [with our worship] the god who has horses, is dark, black, destroying, who sets in motion the terrible car of the long-haired god (the Sun?): reverence be to him. 19. Do not hurl at us thy harrow (?),<sup>248</sup> thy celestial bolt: be not incensed at us, Paśupati; reverence be to thee. Brandish thy celestial arrow over some other than us. 20. Slay us not; intercede for us; avoid us; be not angry with us; let us not contend with thee. 21. Do not covet our cattle, our men, our goats, and sheep. Fierce god, betake thyself elsewhere; slay the offspring of the wicked. 22. Reverence be to him whose consumption, whose cough, whose bolt, assails some one like the neighing of a stallion—to him who determines [his victims?] in order. 23. Be reverence paid with ten śakvari verses to him who abides fixed in the atmosphere, smiting the despisers of the gods who offer no sacrifice. 24. For thee the beasts of the wood, deer, well-winged swans, and various birds are placed in the forest; worship of thee (?), Paśupati, exists in the waters: to magnify thee the celestial waters flow. 25. Porpoises, great serpents, purikayas, sea-monsters, fishes, rajasas, upon which thou hurlest [thy weapon]. There is to thee, Bhava, nothing far, nor anything which stands [near] around thee. At a glance thou lookest around the whole earth: from the eastern thou slayest in the northern ocean. 26. Do not assail us, Rudra, with consumption, or with poison, or with celestial fire: cause this lightning to descend elsewhere than upon us. 27. #### SECT. IV.—Passages relating to Rudra from the Satapatha and Sāṅkhāyana Brāhmaṇas.

In the following text (which has been already quoted in the second volume of this work) Rudra is identified with Agni :

Satapatha Brāhmaṇa. i. 7, 3, 8.—Agnir vai sa devas tsayaitūni nāmāni Sarva iti yathā prāchyā āchazate Bhava iti yathā Bāhikāḥ Paśu-nām pati Rudro 'gnir iti | tāny asya āsāntāny eva itarāni nāmāny Agnir ity eva sātātāmanam | “Agni is a god. These are his names : Sarva, as the eastern people call him,<sup>252</sup> Bhava, as the Bāhikas, Paśū-nāmpati (lord of beasts), Rudra, and Agni. These other names of his (i.e. all the foregoing except Agni) are ungentle. Agni is his gentlest appellation.”

The following passage describes the birth of Rudra, and at the same time identifies him with Agni :

“This foundation existed. It became the earth (bhūmi). He extended it (aprathayat). It became the broad one (prithivī). On this foundation beings, and the lord of beings, consecrated themselves for the year (samvatsara). The lord of beings was a householder, and Ushas was his wife. Now these ‘beings’ were the seasons. That ‘lord of beings’ was the Year. That wife Ushas was Aushasī (the daughter of the dawn).<sup>253</sup> Then both those beings, and that lord of beings, the Year, impregnated Ushas, and a boy (Kumāra)<sup>254</sup> was born in a year. The boy wept. Prajāpati said to him, ‘Boy, why dost thou weep, since thou hast been born after toil and austerity?’ The boy said, ‘My sin indeed has not been taken away, and a name has not been given to me. Give me a name.’ Wherefore when a son has been born [to any man], let a name be given to him; that takes away his sin; and [let] also a second and a third [name be given] in succession: that takes away his sin. Prajāpati said to him, ‘Thou art Rudra.’ Inasmuch as he gave him that name, Agni became his form, for Agni is Rudra. He was Rudra because he wept (arodit from rud, ‘to weep’). The boy said, ‘I am greater than one who does not exist: give me a name.’ Prajāpati replied, ‘Thou art Sarva.’<sup>255</sup> Inasmuch as he gave him that name, the waters became his form, for the waters are Sarva (All), because all this is produced from the waters (see above, p. 21). The boy said, ‘I am greater than one who does not exist: give me a name.’ Prajāpati replied, ‘Thou art Paśupati.’ Inasmuch as he gave him that name, the Plants became his form, for the Plants are Paśupati. Hence, when beasts obtain plants, they become lords (or strong ?) The boy said, 'I am greater than one who does not exist : give me a name.' Prajāpati said to him, 'Thou art Ugra.' Inasmuch as he gave him that name, Vāyu (the Wind) became his form. Vāyu is Ugra (or the 'Fierce'). Wherefore when it blows strongly, men say, 'Ugra blows.' The boy said, 'I am greater than one who does not exist : give me a name.' Prajāpati said to him, 'Thou art Aśani.' Inasmuch as he gave him that name, Vidyut (Lightning) became his form. Lightning is Aśani. Hence they say that Aśani has struck a man whom lightning strikes. The boy said, 'I am greater than one who does not exist : give me a name.' Prajāpati said to him, 'Thou art Bhava.' Inasmuch as he gave him that name, Parjanya (the god of rain) became his form. For Parjanya is Bhava (Being); because all this [universe] arises from Parjanya. The boy said, 'I am greater than one who does not exist : give me a name.' Prajāpati replied, 'Thou art Mahādevaḥ (the 'Great god').' Inasmuch as he gave him that name, Chandramas (the Moon) became his form. Prajāpati is the Moon : Prajāpati is the 'Great god.' The boy said, 'I am greater than one who does not exist : give me a name.' Prajāpati replied, 'Thou art Īśāna (the ruler).' Inasmuch as he gave him that name, Aditya (the Sun) became his form. For the Sun is Īśāna, because he rules (īśhī) over this universe. The boy said, 'I am so much : do not give me any further name.' These are the eight forms of Agni. Kumāra (the boy) is the ninth. This is the threefoldness (trivṛttā) of Agni. Since there are, as it were, eight forms of Agni, the gāyatrī metre has eight syllables. Hence men say, 'Agni pertains to the gāyatrī.' This boy (Kumāra) entered into the forms. Men do not see Agni as a boy; it is these forms of his that they see; for he entered into these forms."

This passage appears to be the original from which the story of the birth of Rudra in the Purāṇas is borrowed. That legend, as given in the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa (in nearly the same words as in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa) is as follows :

Mārka. Pur. Sect. 52, 2 ff.—Kalpādāv ātmanas tulyaṁ sṛtam pradhīyataḥ prabhoh | 3. Prādur-āsīd athāṅke 'sya kumāro nīlu-lohitaḥ | ruroda sūsvaram so 'tha dravañś cha dvija-sattama | kiṁ rodishiti tam Brahmā rudantam pratyuvācha ha | nāma dehiti tam so 'tha pratyuvācha

*jagat-patim | Rudras tvam deva namnā 'si mā rodīr dhairyyam āvaha |
evam uktas tataḥ so 'tha sapta-kṛitro ruroda ha | tato 'nyāni dadau tas-
mai sapta nāmāni vai prabhuh | sthūnāni chaishām aślūnām patnīh
puttrāṁś cha vai devja | Bhavaṁ Sarvaṁ tatheśānaṁ tathā Paśupatim
prabhuh | Bhīmam Ugram Mahādevam uvācha sa Pitāmahaḥ |*

“When, at the beginning of the kalpa, the lord (i.e. Brahmā) was meditating on a son similiar to himself, there was manifested in his lap a boy of a blue and red colour, (3) who then wept loudly, running about. Brahmā said to him when he was weeping, ‘Why dost thou weep?’ He answered the lord of the world, ‘Give me a name.’ [Brahmā rejoined] ‘Thou, o deity, art called Rudra; do not weep; be patient.’ Being thus addressed [the boy] wept again seven times. Then the lord gave him seven other names, and the places of these eight, and wives, and sons. The Progenitor (Brahmā) called him [beside Rudra] Bhava, Sarva, Īśāna, Paśupati, Bhīma, Ugra, Mahādeva.”

These names (except Bhīma, which is substituted for Āśani) are the same as those in the Brāhmaṇa. The same legend is given in a somewhat different form in the Sāṅkhāyana or Kaushītaki Brāhmaṇa, and an abstract of that passage is furnished by Prof. Weber in his Indische Studien, ii. 300 ff. For the text of the passage I am indebted to Prof. Aufrecht, who has copied it from the MS. of the Sāṅkhāyana in the Bodleian Library at Oxford.

“Prajāpati, being desirous of progeny, performed austerity. From him when he had [thus] performed austerity five [children] were born, Agni, Vāyu, Āditya, Chandramas (Moon), and Ushas (dawn) the fifth. He said to them, ‘Do you also perform austerity.’ They consecrated themselves. Before them, when they had consecrated themselves, and had performed austerity, Ushas, the daughter of Prajāpati, assuming the form of an Apsaras (celestial nymph), arose. Their attention was rivetted upon her, and they discharged seed. They then came to Prajāpati their father, and said to him, ‘We have discharged seed; let it not lie there in vain.’ Prajāpati made a golden platter, of the depth of an arrow, and of equal breadth. In this he collected the seed, and from it there arose a being with a thousand eyes, a thousand feet, and a thousand arrows. 2. He came to his father Prajāpati, who asked him, ‘Why dost thou come to me?’ He answered, ‘Give me a name. I shall not eat this food, so long as no name has been given to me.’ ‘Thou art Bhava,’ said Prajāpati; for Bhava is the Waters. Therefore Bhava does not slay this man, nor his offspring, nor his cattle, nor any [creature of his] who speaks. And further, whoever hates him is most wicked. Such is not the case with him who knows this. His rule is, let a man wear a garment. 3. He (this newly-produced being) came a second time to Prajāpati, who asked him, ‘Why dost thou come to me?’ ‘Give me,’ he replied, ‘a second name: I shall not eat this food with only one name.’ ‘Thou art Sarva,’ Prajāpati answered; for Sarva is Agni. Wherefore Sarva does not slay him, nor his offspring, nor his cattle, nor any [creature of his] who speaks. Further, whoever hates him is most wicked. Such is not the case with him who knows this. His rule is, let not a man eat every sort of food. 4. He came the third time to Prajāpati, who said to him, ‘Why dost thou come to me?' 'Give me a third name,' he replied; 'I shall not eat this food with only two names.' 'Thou art Paśupati,' Prajāpati answered; for Paśupati is Vāyu (wind). Wherefore Paśupati does not slay him, etc. etc. His rule is, let no one slander a Brāhman. 5. He came the fourth time to Prajāpati, who said to him, 'Why dost thou come to me?' 'Give me a fourth name,' he replied; 'I shall not eat this food with only three names.' 'Thou art Ugradeva (the fierce god),' Prajāpati answered; for Ugradeva is plants and trees. Wherefore Ugradeva does not slay him, etc. etc. His rule is, let not a man look upon the shame of a woman. 6. He came the fifth time to Prajāpati, who said to him, 'Why dost thou come to me?' 'Give me a fifth name,' he replied; 'I shall not eat this food with only four names.' 'Thou art Mahādeva (the great god),' Prajāpati answered; for Mahādeva is Aditya (the Sun). Wherefore Mahādeva does not slay him, etc. etc. His rule is, let no man look upon him (the Sun) rising or setting. 7. He came the sixth time to Prajāpati, who said to him, 'Why dost thou come to me?' 'Give me a sixth name,' he replied; 'I shall not eat this food with only five names.' 'Thou art Rudra,' Prajāpati answered; for Rudra is Chandramas (the Moon). Therefore Rudra does not slay him, etc. etc. His rule is, let no man eat anything decomposed, or any marrow. 8. He came the seventh time to Prajāpati, who said to him, 'Why dost thou come to me?' 'Give me a seventh name,' he replied; 'I shall not eat this food with only six names.' 'Thou art Īśāna,' Prajāpati answered; for Īśāna is food. Wherefore Īśāna does not slay him, etc. etc. His rule is, let no one reject him who desires food. 9. He came the eighth time to Prajāpati, who said to him, 'Why dost thou come to me?' 'Give me an eighth name,' he replied; 'I shall not eat this food with only seven names.' 'Thou art Aśani,' Prajāpati answered; for Aśani is Indra. Wherefore Aśani does not slay him, etc. etc. His rule is, let a man speak truth, and keep gold. This is the Mahādeva (great god) who has eight names, and who is formed in eight ways. The progeny to the eighth generation of the man who possesses this knowledge, eats food, and ever wealthier men will be born among his descendants."

The following is the account given in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa of the object and name of the Satarudriya :

*atra esha sarvo 'gnih saṁskṛitah | sa esho 'tra Rudro devatā | tasmin devā etad amṛitāṁ rūpam uttamam adadhuh | sa esho 'tra dīpyamāno 'tishṭhad annam ichhamānah | tasmād devū abibhayur yad vai no 'yam na hiṁsyād iti | 2. “He now offers an oblation with the Satarudriya. Here this universal fire has been prepared; and here this Rudra is the deity. In him the gods placed this most excellent immortal form. Here he rose up flaming, desiring food. The gods were afraid of him, ‘lest’ (they thought) ‘he should destroy us.’ 2. They said, ‘Let us collect food for him, and with it appease him.’ They collected for him this food with which a deity is appeased, and with it they appeased him. Inasmuch as they appeased this god with this, it is therefore called Śānta-devatya (“that with which a god is appeased”). They call this Śānta-devatya esoterically Sāta-rudriya; for the gods love what is esoteric.”

On this the commentator remarks: Vihito 'yaṁ homo Rudra-rūpatā-pannasya Agner upaśamanārtham | “This oblation is offered in order to appease Agni who has taken the form of Rudra.”

The same work gives, a little further on, a different account of the origin of Rudra, and a different etymology for the Satarudriya :

Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, ix. 1, 1, 6 ff. — *Prajāpater visrastād devatā udakrāmaṁs tam eka eva devo nūjahād Manyur eva | so 'sminn antar vitato 'tishṭhat | so 'rodit | tasya yāny āsrūṇi prāskanduṁs tāny asmin Manyau pratyatishṭhan | sa eva śāta-śīrshā Rudrah samabhavat sahasrāṁś śateshudhiḥ | atha yū anyā viprusho 'pataṁs tā asaṅkhyātā sahasrāṇi<sup>256</sup> imān lokān anuprāvīṣan | tad yad ruditāt samabhavaṁs tasmād Rudrah | so 'yaṁ śātaśīrshā Rudrah sahasrāṁś śateshudhir<sup>257</sup> adhijya-dhanvā prati-hitāyī bhīshayamāno 'tishṭhad annam ichhamānah | tasmād devū abibhayuh | 7. “From Prajāpati, when he had become divided, the deities sprang forth. Only one god, Manyu, did not leave him, but continued extended within him. He (Prajāpati) wept. The tears which fell from him remained in that Manyu. He became a Rudra with a hundred heads, a hundred eyes, and a hundred quivers. Then the other drops which fell from him in unnumbered thousands entered into these worlds. They were called Rudras because they sprang from him when he had wept. This Rudra with a thousand heads, eyes, and quivers, stood with his bow strung, holding arrows, causing terror, and demanding food. The gods were afraid of him. 7. They said to Prajāpati, ‘We are afraid of this being, lest he destroy us.’ Prajāpati said to them, ‘Collect for him food, and with it appease him.’ They collected for him this food, the śatarudriya, and with it they appeased him. From the fact that with this they appeased the hundred-headed Rudra, it is “that wherewith the hundred-headed Rudra is to be appeased” (Sata-śīrsha-rudra-śamanīyam). This they esoterically call Satarudriya; for the gods love what is esoteric.”

In the descriptions of Mahādeva which are found in the passages quoted in the last chapter from the Mahābhārata, though that deity is occasionally identified with Agni, as he is with other gods (see above, p. 169), he is generally represented in a different aspect, and with different characteristics. In the legend of the birth of Skanda or Kārttikeya,<sup>258</sup> however, which is narrated in the Vana-parva of that poem, we find some trace of the early connexion of Rudra with Agni. We are there told that, after Skanda had been installed in his office of general of the gods (v. 14424), Mahādeva and Pārvatī arrived :

ayaṁ śiśuḥ | tatra jātas tataḥ Skando Rudra-sūnus tato 'bhavat | Rudrasya Vahneḥ Svāhāyāḥ śaṇṇāṁ strīṇāṁ cha Bhārata | jātāḥ Skandāḥ sura-śreṣṭhā Rudra-sūnus tato 'bhavat |

“The god whose banner is a bull, arriving with his goddess, paid him honour, well pleased. Brāhmans call Rudra Agni; consequently he (Kārttikeya) is the son of Rudra. The seed which was discharged by Rudra became the white mountain. And the seed of Pāvaka (Agni) was formed (?) by the Kṛittikās on the white mountain. Having seen Guha (Kārttikeya) thus honored by Rudra, all the deities consequently call him, who is the most excellent of the gifted, the son of Rudra. For this child was produced by Rudra when he had entered into Fire. Being there born, Skanda was the son of Rudra. Skanda, that most eminent deity, being born from Rudra, [who was] Agni, and from Svāhā [and] the six wives, was the son of Rudra.”

The allusions in this passage will become more intelligible if I give an outline of the preceding part of the allegorical story, which commences with v. 14241. Indra being distressed at the defeat of the armies of the gods (deva-senā) by the Dānavas (v. 14245 ff.) is meditating on this subject, when he hears the cry of a female calling for help, and asking for a husband to protect her. Indra sees that she has been seized by the demon Keśin, with whom he remonstrates; but the demon hurls his club at Indra, who, however, splits it with his thunderbolt. Keśin is disabled in the next stage of their combat, and goes off. Indra then finds out from the female that her name is Devasenā (army of the gods), and that she has a sister called Daityasenā (army of the Daityas), and that they are both daughters of Prajāpati. Her sister, she says, loves Keśin, but she herself does not, and wishes Indra to find for her a proper husband, who shall be able to overcome all the enemies of the gods. Indra takes Devasenā with him to Brahmā and desires him to provide her with a martial husband; and Brahmā promises that a helpmate of that description shall be born (14279 f.). Indra then departs with Devasenā. It happened that Vasiṣṭha and other rishis had been offering a sacrifice, whither the gods headed by Indra proceeded to drink the soma-juice. Agni too, being invoked, descended from the region of the sun, entered into the fire, received the oblations of the rishis, and presented them to the gods. The story then proceeds (v. 14287):

“Issuing forth, he beheld the wives of these great [rishis] seated in their own hermitages, and sweetly sleeping, resembling golden altars (?), pure as beams of the moon, like to flames of fire, all wonderful as stars. Perceiving that, his senses became agitated. Beholding the wives of the Brahmans, Agni was overcome by desire. Again and again he reflected, ‘It is not proper that I should be thus agitated: I am enamoured of the chaste spouses of the Brahmans, who are not in love with me. They cannot be looked upon or questioned by me without reason. Entering into the domestic fire, I shall gaze upon them close at hand.’ ‘Entering the domestic fire, touching, as it were, with his flames, all of them, who were bright as gold, and beholding them, he was delighted. Dwelling thus there for a long time, fixing his attention upon these beautiful women, and enamoured of them, Agni was overcome. His heart being distressed with desire, Agni, failing to obtain the Brahmans' wives, resolved to abandon his corporeal form, and went into the forest. Then Svāhā, the daughter of Daxa, first fell in love with him. This amorous and blameless goddess for a long time sought for his weak point, but as the god was watchful, she could not find any. But being perfectly aware that he had gone into the wood, and that he was really disturbed by desire, the amorous goddess thus reflected: 'I who am distressed by love, will take the form of the seven rishis' wives, and will court the affection of Agni who is enchanted by their beauty. By doing so he will be pleased, and I shall obtain my desire.' Assuming first the form of S'ivā, the wife of Angiras, who possessed a good disposition, beauty, and excellent qualities, the beautiful goddess (Svāhā) went to Agni, and thus addressed him: 'Agni, thou oughtest to love me, who am disturbed with love for thee: if thou wilt not do so, look upon me as dead. Agni, I, S'ivā, the wife of Angiras, have come, sent by virtuous women, and having considered my determination.' Agni replied: 'How dost thou, and how do all the other beloved wives of the seven rishis whom thou mentionest, know that I am distressed with love?' S'ivā answered: 'Thou hast always been beloved by us, but we are afraid of thee. Knowing thy heart by external signs, I have been sent to thee. I have come to be embraced: come quickly and fulfil your desire. The other females are awaiting me; I shall depart, Hutāsana (Agni).' Agni then with joy embraced the delighted S'ivā. The goddess filled with delight took his seed in her hand. She reflected, 'All those who shall see this form of mine in the forest, will falsely allege the transgression of Brahmans' wives with Agni. Wherefore preserving this, I shall become Garuḍī; and thus my egress from the wood will become easy. She then, becoming Suparnī, issued from the great forest, and beheld the white mountain surrounded by palisades of arrows, guarded by wondrous seven-headed serpents whose very glance was venomous, by Rāxasas, Piśāchas, and by hosts of Rudra's demons, filled with Raxasīs, and numerous beasts and birds. The beautiful goddess, having then gone quickly to the summit of the mountain, which was difficult of access, hastily threw the seed into a golden reservoir. Thus this goddess, assuming in succession the resemblance of the wives of the seven great rishis, loved Agni. But she could not take the divine form of Arundhatī (the wife of Vāśiṣṭha), owing to the power of the latter's austerity, and her obedience to her husband. Six times was the seed of Agni thrown by the enamoured Svāhā into the reservoir on the pratipad (the first day of the lunar fortnight). Discharged there and collected, that seed by its energy generated a son. That [seed] which was discharged (skanna), being worshipped by the rishis, gave to this son his character of Skanda. Kumāra (Kārttikeya) was born with six heads, a double number of ears, twelve eyes, arms, and feet, one neck, and one belly." Kārttikoya marries Devasenā (vv. 14446 ff.). The six rishis' wives, his mothers, afterwards come to him, complaining that they had been abandoned by their husbands, and degraded from their former position, and asking him to secure their admission into paradise (svarga). The story then proceeds (v. 14514 ff.): "When Skanda had done what was gratifying to his mothers, Svāhā said to him, 'Thou art my genuine son: I desire the love, difficult to obtain, which thou givest.' Skanda then asked her, 'What love dost thou desire?' Svāhā replied, 'I am the beloved daughter of Daxa, by name Svāhā. From my childhood I have been enamoured of Agni. But, my son, Agni does not thoroughly know me who am enamoured of him. I wish to dwell perpetually with Agni.' Skanda rejoined: 'Whatever oblation of Brahmans is introduced by hymns, they shall always, goddess, lift and throw it into the fire, saying, 'Svāhā.' From this day forward, virtuous men, abiding in the right path, shall grant [thee this]. Thus, o beautiful goddess, Agni shall dwell with thee continually.' Being thus addressed by Skanda, Svāhā, gratified, worshipped by Skanda, and united with Agni as her husband, worshipped Skanda. Then Brahmā Prajāpati said to Mahāsena (Skanda), 'Go to thy father Mahādeva, the vexer of Tripura. Thou unconquered hast been produced for the good of all worlds by Rudra who had entered into Agni, and Umā who had entered into Svāhā."

SĒCT. V.—Passages relating to Rudra in the Upanishads.

To the preceding passages, descriptive of Rudra, from the Brāhmaṇas, I shall now subjoin a few of a different character from the Upanishads.

Svetāśvatara Upanishad, iii. 1 ff.—Ya eko jālarān īsato īsanībhiḥ sarvān lokān īsate īsanībhiḥ | ya evaika udbhare sambhave cha ye etad vidur amṛitās te bhavanti | 2. Eko hi Rudro na dvitīyāya tasthur<sup>259</sup> ya imān lokān īsate īsanībhiḥ | pratyap janāms tishṭhati sañchukopānta-kāle<sup>260</sup> sañsṛīya viśvā bhuvanāni gopāh | 3. (R. V. x. 81, 3, above, p. 5.) Viśvatas-chaxur uta viśvato-mukho viśvato-bāhur uta viśvatas-pāt | sam bāhubhyām dhamati sam patatir dyāvābhūmī janayan deva ekah | 4. Yo devānām prabhavaś chodbhavaś cha viśvādhipo Rudro maharshiḥ | Hiranyagarbhaṁ janayāmāsa pūrvaṁ<sup>261</sup> sa no buddhyā śubhayā saṁyupaaktu | 5 and 6=Vāj. S. xvi. 2, 3 (see above, p. 268). . . . iv. 21: Ajāta ity evaṁ kaśchid bhīruḥ pratipadyate | Rudra yat te dāṇam mukham tena mām pūhi nityam | 22=R. V. i. 114, 8, and Vāj. S. xvi. 16 (see above). “He who alone, the enchanter, rules by his powers, rules all worlds by his powers, he who in source and in production is alone,—they who know this become immortal. 2. For Rudra who rules these worlds by his powers, is but one; [the wise] do not assert (?) a second. Having, a preserver, created all worlds, he abides in men severally; he absorbs them at the time of the end. 3. This one god, who has on every side eyes, on every side a face, on every side arms, on every side feet, when producing the heaven and earth, blows them forth with his arms and with his wings. 4. May Rudra, the lord of all, the great sage, the cause of production and the source of the gods, who first generated Hiranyagarbha,—may he put us in possession of an excellent understanding. . . . Ibid. iv. 21. Some fearful man approaches (thinking) thus—'[Thou art] unborn.' Rudra, protect me with thy southern face."

The next passage is from the commencement of the Atharva-śiras<sup>202</sup> Upanishad. The MSS. which I have consulted vary very much in their readings :

“The gods went to heaven. They asked Rudra, ‘Who art thou?’ He said, ‘I alone was before [all things], and I exist, and I shall be. No other transcends me.’ He entered into one space after another, and into the space of the sky. ‘I am eternal and not eternal, discernible and undiscernible, I am Brahma, I am not Brahma,<sup>268</sup> I am the eastern, western, southern, northern [breaths, etc. Comm.], I am below and above, the regions, and the intermediate regions, I am male, eunuch, and female, I am the sāvitṛī, I the gūyatrī, I the trishṭup (metres), I am metre, I am the household, the southern,

By my own energy I satisfy the earth with rays (or the cow with cows), the Brahmans with brahmanhood, oblations with oblation, life with life, truth with truth, righteousness with righteousness.' Then the gods did not behold Rudra. They meditated upon him. Then the gods, with arms raised aloft, praised him: 'He who is Rudra is divine, and he who is Brahmā, to him be adoration. He who is Rudra is divine, and he who is Viṣṇu, to him be adoration. He who is Rudra is divine, and he who is Mahāśvara, to him be adoration. All the gods reside in the heart, situated in the heart and the breath. Thou who art continually in the heart, [art] the three letters, but he is beyond. To the north of him is the head, to the south the feet; that which is the north is the omkāra. The omkāra is the pranava, which (pranava) again is all-pervading, which ('all-pervading') again is infinite, which again is that which delivers, which again is subtile, which again is white, which again has the nature of lightning, which again is the supreme Brahma. He is the one; he is the only Rudra, he is Isāna, he is divine, he is Maheśvara, he is Mahādeva. Now whence does the omkāra get its name? Inasmuch as soon as it is uttered, it raises up the whole body, it is called omkāra. (The same enquiry is then made and answered in regard to the words pranava, sarvavyāpin ['all-pervading'], ananta ['infinite'], the 'deliverer,' 'subtile,' 'white,' 'having the nature of lightning,' and 'the supreme Brahma.' Then eka 'one' is explained.). Now why is he called 'one?' He who evolves, creates, variously creates, sustains all worlds, is therefore called the 'one.' 'There is only one Rudra; there is no place for a second. He rules this fourth world, controlling and productive; living beings abide within [him?]. At the time of the final conjunction he annihilates all worlds, the protector.'<sup>272</sup> Wherefore he is called the one Rudra. Then why is he called Isāna? He it is who rules all worlds by his ordinances, and supreme creative powers. 'We, o heroic Indra, like unmilked cows, approach with our praises thee who art the heavenly lord (isāna) of this moving, and the lord of this stationary, [world].'<sup>273</sup> Hence he is called Isāna. (Bhagavat is then explained). Then why is he called Maheśvara? He who, a devourer, constantly devours, creates, variously creates, sustains all worlds, is therefore called Maheśvara. Then why is he called Mahādeva? He who, abandoning

all forms of being, is magnified in the great divine power of absorption in the knowledge of himself, is therefore called Mahādeva. Such is the history of Rudra. 'This god [abides] throughout all regions; he was the first born; he is within the womb; it is even he who has been born, and he is still to be born; he exists, o men, with his face turned to every side.' (Vāj. S. 32, 4.) 'The one god, who has on every side eyes, on every side a face, on every side arms, on every side feet, when producing the earth and sky, blows them forth with his arms, and with his wings.' (R. V. x. 81, 3, above, p. 6.) . . . Rudra is mentioned again in the following verses. "In Rudra they say there is oneness, and that Rudra is eternal and primeval," etc. The Pāśupata rite is thus described: "This is the Pāśupata observance; 'Agni is ashes, Vayu is ashes, water is ashes, dry land is ashes, the sky is ashes, all this is ashes, the mind, these eyes are ashes.' Having taken ashes while pronouncing these preceding words, and rubbing himself, let a man touch his limbs. This is the Pāśupata rite, for the removal of the animal bonds. The Brahman who reads the Atharva-śira is purified with fire, with air, with the sun, with soma (or the moon); he becomes truth, he becomes all, he has bathed in all the holy places, he is read in all the Vedas, he has practised the observances prescribed in all the Vedas, he is known by all the gods, he has sacrificed with all sacrificial rites; by him hundreds of thousands of itihāsas, purāṇas, and passages relating to Rudra, and a hundred thousand Gāyatrīs have been muttered, ten thousand oms have been uttered; at every recitation he purifies ten generations of ancestors, and ten future generations of descendants; he purifies a row of men as far as the eye can reach; thus says the divine Atharva-śiras. Having muttered it once, he becomes clean, pure, and fit for the ceremonial; having muttered it a second time, he obtains dominion over hosts; having muttered it a third time, he enters, om, into the true god. 'Adoration be to Rudra Agni, who resides in fire, and in the waters, who has entered into these plants, who formed all these worlds.'"

I shall not make more than a few further extracts from this mystical Upanishad, which throws little light on Rudra's character or history. The three gods, Brahmā, Viṣṇu, and Rudra, are mentioned together, along with Indra (Brahmā-Viṣṇu-Rudreन्द्रāḥ); and Sambhu (one of the names of Rudra) is said (in a passage which, as it seems to be corrupt, I cannot perfectly make out) to be possessor of all divine qualities, and to be lord of all; while the benefits of worshipping him are described (kūraṇaṁ tu dhyeyaḥ sarvaiśvarya-sampannaḥ sarveśvaraś cha Śambhur ākāśa-madhye dhruvaṁ stabdhvā 'dhikaṁ xanāṁ ekaṁ kratu-satasypāi chatuḥ-saptatyā yat phalaṁ tad avāpnoti kṛtsnam oṁkāra-gataṁ cha sarva-dhyāna-yoga-jñānānāṁ yat phalam oṁkāra veda-para īśo vā śiva eko dhyeyaḥ śivaṅkaraḥ sarvaṁ anyat parityajya).

In the Kaivalya Upanishad (translated by Weber, Ind. Stud. ii. 10 ff.) Aśvalāyana asks Brahmā to explain to him the science of divine things (Athāśvalāyano bhagavantam parameshthinam upasametyovācha adhihi bhagavān brahma-vidyāṁ ityādi |). Brahmā (pitāmaha) among other things tells him as follows: Antyāśrama-sthaḥ sakalendriyāṇi nirudhya bhaktyā sva-gurum pranamya | kṛt-pundarikāṁ virajāṁ viśuddhaṁ vich-intya madhye viśadaṁ viśokam | anantam avyaktam achintya-rūpaṁ śivam praśāntam amṛitam brahma-yoniṁ | tam ādi-madhyānta-vihinam ekaṁ vibhuṁ chidānanda-svarūpam adbhutam | Umāśahāyam paramēśvaram prabhuṁ trilochanaṁ nīla-kantham praśāntam | dhyātvā munir gachhati bhūta-yoniṁ samasta-sāxiṁ tamasah parastāt | sa Brahmā sa Śivah Sendraḥ so 'xaraḥ paramaḥ svarāt | sa eva Viśnuḥ sa prāṇaḥ sa ātmā paramēśvaraḥ | <sup>274</sup> sa eva sarvaṁ yad bhūtam yachecha bhavyaṁ sanātanam | jñātvā taṁ mṛityum atyeti nānyaḥ panthā vimuktaye | . . . yaḥ śata-rudriyam adhite so 'gnipūto bhavati sa Vāyu-pūto bhavati ityādi | “A man in the last (or fourth) religious order (i.e. that of a mendicant) restraining all his senses, making obeisance to his teacher, meditating within on the lotus of the heart, [which is] spotless, pure, lucid, undisturbed,—the infinite, undiscernible, inconceivable, auspicious (śiva), tranquil, immortal, source of Brahma, [or, of divine knowledge],—contemplating him who is without beginning, middle, or end, the one, the pervading, the spiritual and blessed, the wonderful, the supreme lord, the consort of Umā, the three-eyed, the blue-throated, the tranquil,—[doing this] a Muni, [passing] beyond darkness, attains the source of being, the universal witness. on it is said : "He who reads the Satarudriya becomes purified by fire, purified by air," etc. etc.

In one of the MS. collections of Upanishads belonging to the library of the East India Office, I find another work of that description, called the Nilarudropanishad, which begins thus : Apasyaṁ chāvarohantaṁ divitaḥ prithivimayaḥ | apasyam apasyaṁ taṁ Rudraṁ nīlagrivaṁ śikhandinam | "I, formed of earth, beheld descending from the sky, I beheld, I beheld, that blue-necked, crested Rudra." This composition contains many verses from the Satarudriya.

In the earlier parts of this work I have given a variety of extracts from the Rāmāyana, Mahābhārata, etc., which exhibit the character of Mahādeva as he was conceived in the epic period (see pp. 138, 147, 148, 153–170, 187–190, 194 f., 203 ff., 225 ff., 236 ff., and 241 ff.). I shall now adduce such other passages from the Itihāsas, or Purāṇas, as may appear to throw any light on the history of the conceptions entertained of this deity, and of his relations to the other members of the Indian pantheon.

Rudra is briefly alluded to in the passages of the Rāmāyana i. 14, 1 ff. ; i. 75, 14 ff. ; and Yuddha-Kāṇḍa, 119, 1 ff., quoted in pp. 138, 146 f., and 148 f. The other texts of the Rāmāyana in which I have observed any allusion to him are the following ; and the representations which are there given of this god appear generally to bear a stamp of greater antiquity than those which are found in the Mahābhārata.

In Rāmāyana i. 25, 10 ff. (ed. Schl.), Rudra curses the embodied Kandarpa (the Indian Cupid) who wished to enter into him after his marriage, at a time when he was performing austerity ; and Kandarpa in consequence becomes bodiless (ananga). (Kandarpo mūrttimān āsīt Kāma ity uchyate budhaiḥ | āveshtum abhyagāt tūrṇaṁ kṛitodvāham Unāpatim | tapasyantam iha Sthānuṁ nimayena samāhitam | dharshayāmāsa durmedhū hunḁkrītaś cha mahātmanā | avadhyātasyā Raudreṇa chazushā Raghunandana | vyaśīryanta śarīrāt svāt sarva-gātrāṇi durmateḥ |)

In i. 36, 20, it is mentioned that the mountain-god, Himavat, gave his daughter Umā to the “unequalled Rudra” (Rudrāya apratirūpāya). In chapter xxxvii. of the same book, vv. 5 ff. the connubial intercourse of Śiva with Umā is described in most undignified language, as follows : Purā Rāma kṛitodvāhaḥ Śitikanṭhaḥ mahātapāḥ | Umā cha sparddhayā devī maithunāyopachakratuḥ | tasya saṁkrīḍamānasya Mahādevasya dhīmataḥ | Śitikanṭhasya deryāścha diryaṁ varsha-śataṁ gataṁ | evam manmatha-yuddhe tu tayoṛ nāsīt parājayajāḥ | na chāpi tanayo Rāma tasyām āsīt parantapa | “Formerly, after his marriage, Śitikanṭha (Śiva) the great devotee, and the goddess Umā, began to indulge emulously in connubial love. A thousand years of the gods passed while the wise Mahādeva Śitikanṭha and the goddess were thus sporting. In this contest of love neither of them was overcome : nor, o Rāma, vexer of thy foes, was any son born to Umā.” The gods being alarmed at the prospect of the formidable character of the offspring which might be born to Mahādeva, entreated him and his spouse to practise chastity. To this Mahādeva consented ; but asked what would become of the seed which he had already discharged. This, the gods said, should be received by the earth. The gods then desired Agni, along with Vāyu, to enter into this seed. This Agni did, and the white mountain was produced in consequence (see above, p. 292), where Kārttikeya was born. The gods then worshipped Śiva and Umā, but the latter imprecated sterility on all their wives. The thirty-eighth section relates the birth of Kārttikeya. While Tryambaka (Śiva), the lord of the gods, was performing austerity, the other deities went to Brahmā and asked for a general in the room of Mahādeva who, it seems, had formerly acted in that capacity. “He,” they said, “whom thou didst formerly give us as a leader of our armies (i.e. Mahādeva) is now performing great austerity, along with Umā” (yo naḥ senāpatir deva datto bhagavatā purā | sa tapaḥ param āsthāya tapyate sma sahomayā |). Brahmā says, that in consequence of the curse of Umā, no son could be born to any of the wives of the gods ; but that Agni could beget a son on the river Gangā, who should be the general of the gods. The gods accordingly went to mount Kailāsa, and appointed Agni to effect their object. Agni accordingly impregnated the Gangā, who brought forth Kārttikeya, so called because he was nursed by the Krittikās.”

In the forty-third section it is related how king Bhagīratha performed austerity in order that the Gangā might descend from heaven and purify the ashes of the sons of Sagara (who had been destroyed by Kapila, sect. 41, at the end); and might by this means elevate them to paradise. Brahmā appeared to the king and told him that he ought to propitiate Śiva, who was the only being who could sustain the shock of the falling Gangā. Bhagīratha (as is told sect. 48) continued his austerities till Śiva the lord of Umā, the lord of animals (Paśupati) appeared to him, and said he would receive the Gangā on his head. He accordingly mounted the Himālaya, and called on the Gangā to descend. The Gangā was indignant at this summons, but came down in great volume and with great force on his head, thinking to sweep him down along with her into Pātāla. The god, however, determined to humble her pride, and she was compelled to circle for a long period of years in the labyrinth of his matted locks, without being able to reach the earth. Being again propitiated by Bhagīratha, Śiva at length allowed her to reach the lake Vindu, to flow to the sea, and eventually into the infernal regions, where she purified the ashes of the sons of Sagara and enabled them to ascend to heaven.

In the forty-fifth section is described the production of nectar from the churning of the ocean of milk by the rival sons of Diti and Aditi, who wished to obtain some specific which should render them immortal. In the first place, however, a fiery poison was vomited from the mouths of the serpent Vāsuki, which was used as the rope in the process of churning. The gods then resorted to Śiva to deliver them from this portent :

Rudram trāhi trāhīti tusttvaḥ | prādūrāsīt tato 'traiva śaṅkha-chakragadādharah | uvāchainaṁ smitaṁ kṛtvā Rudram śūla-dharaṁ Hariḥ | daivatair mathyamāne tu yat pūrvaṁ samupasthitam | tat tadāyāṁ suraśreṣṭha surāṇāṁ agrajo hi yat | agra-pūjāṁ iha sthitrā grīhāṇedaṁ

devatānāṁ bhayaṁ dṛiṣṭvā śrutvā rākyaṁ tu Śārṅgiṇaḥ | halāhalāṁ
viśaṁ ghoraṁ saṁjagrāhāmṛitopamaṁ | devān viśṛjya deveśo jagāma bhagavān Hariḥ |* "Then the deities, seeking as their refuge Mahādeva, Śankara, went to Rudra Paśupati, and lauded him [calling out]
'deliver, deliver.' Then Hari appeared on that very spot, bearing the shell, the discus, and the mace, and smiling, said to Rudra, the wielder of the trident: 'That which has first appeared, when the ocean was being churned by the deities, belongs to thee, most eminent of the gods, since thou art the first-born among them. Standing here, receive, lord, this poison as the earliest offering.' Having thus spoken, the most eminent of the gods disappeared on the spot. Perceiving the alarm of the deities, and having heard the words of Vishṇu, he (Śiva) took the deadly poison, as if it had been nectar. The divine Hara then dismissed the gods and departed."

The gods and Asuras proceeded with the churning, but were obliged now to call in the aid of Vishṇu, as the mountain with which the operation was being performed sank down into the infernal regions. Vishṇu, however, assumed the form of a tortoise and supported the mountain on his back. At length nectar was produced, which Vishṇu carried off.

In the description of the northern region contained in the Kishkindhyā-kāṇḍa of the Rāmāyana, Kailāsa is spoken of as the residence of Kuvera, and no mention is made of Śiva as residing there:

Kishk. 44, 27 ff.—Taṁ tu sīghram atikramya kāntāraṁ loma-harshanam | pāṇḍuraṁ draxyatha tataḥ Kailāsaṁ nāma parvatam | tatra pāṇḍura-meghābhaṁ Jāmbūnada-parishkṛitam | Kuvera-bhavanaṁ divyaṁ nirmitaṁ Viśvakarmaṇā | "Having quickly passed over that dreadful desert, you shall then see the white mountain, called Kailāsa, and there the celestial palace of Kuvera, formed by Viśvakarman, in colour like a brilliant cloud, and decorated with gold."

Another passage relating to Rudra which occurs in Gorresio's recension of the Rāmāyana is the following (though it is not to be found in the corresponding section of the Calcutta edition):

Kishk. 44, 46 ff.—Taṁ tu deśam atikramya Trisṛiṅgo nāma parvataḥ | tasya pāde saro divyam muhat kāñchana-pushkaram | tataḥ prachyavate divyā tixṇa-śrotās tarangiṇī | nadī naika-grahākīrṇā kuṭilā loka-bhāvinī | tasyaikaṁ kāñchanaṁ śṛiṅgam parvatasyāgni-sannibham | vaidūryyamayam ekañcha śailasyāsya samuchhhṛitam | Anutpamneshu bhūteshu babhūva kila bhūmitaḥ | agrajaḥ sarva-bhūtānām Viśvakarmeti viśrutaḥ | tat tasya kila paurāṇam agnihotram mahātmanaḥ | āsit trisīkharāḥ śailaḥ prarṇitās tatra ye 'gnayaḥ | tatra sarvāṇi bhūtāni sarvamedhe mahāmakhe | kṛtvā 'bhavad mahātejāḥ sarva-loka-maheśvaraḥ | Rudrasya kila

Thence flows a divine billowy river, with rapid stream, swarming with crocodiles, winding, gladdening the world. That mountain has one golden peak, [one] resembling fire, and it has also one elevated point formed of lapis lazuli. When no creatures had as yet come into existence, there sprang from the earth the first of all beings, known as Viśvakarman. This triple-peaked mountain was the scene of the ancient agnihotra sacrifice of that great being, where all the fires were employed. Having formed all beings there at this great universal sacrifice, he became the mighty lord (maheśvara) of all worlds. This lake of the universal sacrifice is the abode of Rudra; and from it issues the river Sarayū, abounding in dreadful crocodiles. Gods, Gandhavas, birds, Piśāchas, snakes, and Dānavas, do not enter that region, which is like blazing fire. Having overpassed that great mountain, protected by Mahādeva,” etc.

In regard to the legend of Viśvakarman, which is not usually met with in the Purāṇas, and does not harmonize well with the course of their cosmogony, compare the two hymns in pp. 5, 6, the story from the Nirukta in pp. 7, 8, above, and the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa xiii. 7, 1, 14, p. 1002 :

Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, xiii. 7, 1, 14.—Tena haitena Viśvakarmā Bhāvana ṛje | teneshtvā 'tyatishṭhat sarvāni bhūtāni idam sarvam abhavat | atitishṭhati sarvāni bhūtāni idam sarvam bhavati ya evam vidvān sarva-medhena yajate yo vaitad evaṁ veda | 15. Taṁ ha Kāśyapo yājayañcha-kāra | tad api bhūmih ślokaṁ jagau | “na mā martyaḥ kaśchana dātum arhati Viśvakarman Bhāvana manda āsitha | upamaṇxyati syā satilasya madhye mṛishaisha te saṅgarah Kāśyapāya” iti | “With this sacrifice, Viśvakarman, the son of Bhūvana, sacrificed. Having sacrificed with it, he overpassed all beings, and became all this. That man overpasses all beings and becomes all this, who, knowing this, sacrifices with the sarva-medha (‘universal sacrifice’)—he who thus knows this. 15. Kāśyapa performed this sacrifice for him. Wherefore also the earth recited a verse :<sup>275</sup> 'No mortal ought to bestow me. Viśvakarman, son of Bhuvana, thou wast foolish. She (the earth) will sink into the midst of the water. This promise of thine to Kaśyapa is vain.' "

It would appear as if the author of the preceding passage of the Rāmāyaṇa intended to identify Rudra with Viśvakarman, when he says that the latter "became the mighty lord (maheśvara) of all worlds." Compare the passages from the Kūrma Purāṇa and Mahābhārata quoted below in notes 280 and 282, pp. 316 and 317. If Mahādeva is identified with Viśvakarman, he must, according to the Rāmāyaṇa, be regarded as sprung from the earth, and therefore not eternal.

In the following passage<sup>276</sup> Mahādeva is represented as paying a visit to Kuvera on mount Kailāsa, and as acknowledging the divine character of Rama :

Ram. v. 89, 6 ff.—Atha pradhāno dharmātmā lokānām īśvaraḥ prabhuh | taluḥ sabhāyām devasya rājño Vaiśravaṇasya saḥ | dhanādhyaxa-sabhām devaḥ prāpto hi Vṛishhabha-dhvaḥ | Umā-sahāyo devēso gaṇaiś cha bahubhir vṛitah | avatīryya vṛishāt tūrṇam mahitah śūla-dhṛig vi-bhuh | gires tasya mahātejah pravishṭas tu sabhām Marah | Riddhyā sahāya-yuktas cha tathā Vaiśravaṇaḥ svayam | anyonyam tau samālingya upaviṣṭāc ubhāv api | sabhāyām tatra tau devau te cha devā yathākramam | upaviṣṭā gaṇās chaiva yaxās cha saha Guhyakair | axa-dyūtau tatas tābhyām pravṛittam samanantaram | etasminn antare tatra Rāxasendraṁ Vibhūṣaṇam | dṛiṣṭvā Paulastyaṁ āyāntam Sivaḥ prāha dhaneśvaram | ayaṁ Vibhūṣaṇaḥ prāptaḥ śaraṇam tava pāṛthiva | man-yunā 'bhipluto vīro Rāxasendra-cimānitah | ityādi |

<sup>275</sup> The commentator observes on this : Asmai cha Viścōkarmā bhūmim dātum iyesha tatra cha kālē bhūmir api imāṁ ślokaṁ gītavati | teṣāṁ tu mandah manda-matir janah āsitha bebhūvitha jūta ity arthaḥ | upa-sabdo ni-sabdasyārthe | yaś chūśa-kyam pratijñānte munda ity abhiprāyaḥ | "Viśvakarman desired to give the earth to him; and at that time the earth also sang this verse. Thou wast dull, dull of understanding. The preposition upa is here used in the sense of ni. And the sense is that he who promises what is impossible is foolish." Compare the passage of the Mahābhārata, Vana-paṇḍita, v. 10209 (in the First Part of this work, p. 157), where the earth is said to have been given to Kaśyapa by Paraśurāma; and another text from the Anuśāsana-parva, vv. 7232 ff. (ibid. p. 164), where the earth is said to have become offended with king Anṛga, who desired to bestow her on the Brahmans, and to have in consequence abandoned her form. Kaśyapa afterwards entered into her and she became his daughter. Compare also Satapatha Brāhmaṇa vii. 4, 3, 5 (quoted above, p. 23).

“Now the righteous and mighty ruler of the worlds, whose banner is a bull, the god of gods, accompanied by Umā, and attended by numerous hosts, came then to the assembly of the divine king Vaiśravaṇa (Kuvera), the lord of riches. Alighting quickly from his bull, Hara, the mighty lord, the wielder of the trident, received with honour, entered into the assembly on that mountain (Kailāsa, v. 4); and at the same time Vaiśravaṇa himself, with Riddhi (? his wife), and attended by his companions, [came in]. Having embraced each other, those two gods and the other deities sat down in order in the assembly, together with their hosts, and the Yaxas and Gulyakas. The two gods then began to play at dice. In the meantime, beholding the eminent Raxasa Vibhishana, the son of Pulastya, approaching, Śiva says to the lord of riches, ‘This, o king, is the hero Vibhishana, who has resorted to thee, overwhelmed by distress, having been dishonoured by the chief of the Raxasas (Rāvaṇa),’ etc. etc.

While Śiva is speaking, Vibhishana arrives, and bows down before the deities, who tell him to stand up; and go to Rāma, who will install him king of the Rāxasas (vv. 21 ff.). Vibhishana stands, with his head bent downwards, and sunk in contemplation, when Śiva again speaks to him (vv. 37 ff.): Taṁ dhyāyamānam bhagavān ucāha prabhuḥ ary-ayah | uttishṭhottishṭha rājendra sukham āpuhi śāśvataṁ | . . . 39. Tas-mād uttishṭha gachha tvaṁ purāṇam prabhuṁ arya-yaṁ | ādhārāṁ sarva-bhūtānāṁ śāśvataṁ niravagraham | sa hi sarva-nidhānaṁ cha gatir gati-matāṁ varah | kṛtsnasya jagato mātāṁ tasmād gachhasva Rāghavam | “The divine, imperishable lord said: ‘Stand up, stand up, prince of kings, obtain ever-during happiness. . . . Stand up, therefore, go to the ancient, imperishable lord, the support of all beings, eternal, uncontroled. For he, the most excellent, contains all things, and is the refuge of all who seek a refuge, the root of the whole world: wherefore go to Rāghava (Rāma).’” Vibhishana then departs through the air, to go to Rāma.<sup>277</sup>

iii. 30, 27 (ed. Calc.), and iii. 35, 93 (Gorr.): Sa papāta Khara bhūmas dahyamānah śarūgninī | Rudreṇeva vinivṛjagdhah Śvetaṁ rāṇye purā 'ndhakaḥ | “[The Raxasa] Khara fell on the ground, burnt by the fire of the arrow, like Andhaka [who was] of Mahādeva, and those of other deities, in regard to adoration of the former. It may perhaps be inferred from the passages cited in pp. 224-246, also, that the worship of this god, as practised by some tribes, was regarded by others with aversion, or even with horror. Some further indications of this aversion may be discovered in the myth of Daxa's sacrifice, as related in the Mahābhārata, and in the Vayu and other Purāṇas (see Wilson's Vishṇu Purāṇa, pp. 61 ff.).

Evam uktas tu Janakaḥ pratyuvācha mahāmuniṃ | śrūyatām asya dhanuṣho yad-artham iha tishṭhati | Devarāta iti khyāto Nimeḥ shashṭho mahīpatiḥ | nyāso 'yañ tasya bhagavan haste datto mahātmanaḥ | Daxa-yajña-badhe pūrvaṃ dhanur āyamyā vīryavān | vidhvasya tridaśān Rudraḥ salilam idam abravīt | "yasmād bhāgārthino bhāgūn nākalpayata me surāḥ | varāṅgāni mahārkhāni dhanushā śūṭayāmi vaḥ | tato vimanasaḥ sarve devā vai muni-puṅgava | prāsūdayanta deveśān teshāṃ prito 'bhavad Bhavaḥ | prītaśchāpi dadau teshāṃ tāny aṅgāni mahaujusaṃ | dhanushā yāni yūny āsan śātītāni mahātmanā | tad etad deva-devasya dhanū-ratnam mahātmanaḥ | nyāsa-bhūtaṃ tadā nyastaṃ asmākam pūr-vake vibho | <sup>278</sup>

formerly consumed by Rudra in the Ś'veta forest." iv. 5, 30 (Gorr.): Yathā kruddhasya Rudrasya Tripuraṃ vai vijigryushaḥ | "[The frowning face of Rāma] like that of the incensed Rudra, who had conquered Tripura." vi. 51, 17 (Gorr.): The Rāksasa trembled when smitten by Laxmana's arrow, like the dreadful portal of Tripura, when struck by the bolt of Rudra" (Rudra-vūṇāhataṃ ghoram yathā Tripura-gopuram |). In the following verse allusion is made to Rudra as a slaughterer of animals: vi. 73, 37 f. Hatair aśvair padātair cha tad babhūva raṇājiram | ākrīḍa iva Rudrasya kruddhasya nighnataḥ paśūn | "With slain horses and footmen, that battle-field became like the garden of the enraged Rudra when slaughtering animals." I do not know what the next verse refers to, vi. 55, 88 (Gorr.): Kumbhasya patato rūpam bhagnasyorasi muṣṭinā | Īṣvareṇābhipannasya rūpam Paśupater iva | "The appearance of Kumbha when struck on the chest by the fist of Sugrīva, was like the appearance of Paśupati (Ś'iva) when overcome by Īṣvara." The commentator quoted by Gorresio has the following note in explanation: Īṣvareṇa pralaya-kālena hetunā abhipannasya lokān abhisrastasya Paśupate Rudrasya rūpam iva rūpam babhūva ity arthaḥ | The Calc. ed. (76, 93) reads in the second line: babhu Rudrābhipannasya yathā rūpaṃ Gaṇāmpateḥ | which the commentator renders, "appeared like the form of the sun, over me by Rudra."

“Janaka, being thus addressed, replied to the great muni: ‘Hear, regarding this bow, from what cause it is here. A king called Deva-rāta was the sixth in descent from Nimi. This [bow] was a deposit committed to the hands of this great personage. Formerly, at the destruction of Daxa’s sacrifice, the heroic Rudra, when he had drawn this bow, and routed the gods, thus spake in derision: Since, ye gods, ye have divided to me no portion, though I desired it, I cut off your principal and most precious limbs with my bow. Then all the deities, being distressed, propitiated the god of gods, who became favourable to them, and restored the limbs of those glorious beings which had been cut off by the mighty bow. This is the precious bow of the great deity, which was at that time deposited with our ancestor.’”

In this version of the myth there is no mention of Rudra commissioning Virabhadra, or any other demons, to destroy the sacrifice or put the gods to flight. He is simply said to wound the gods with his bow.<sup>279</sup>

The same story is told in greater detail in the Sānti-parva of the Mahābhārata, in verses 10226–10258, and is immediately afterwards repeated in vv. 10275 ff. According to the first account (which is given in answer to a question regarding the origin of Jvara, Fever), Umā, Siva’s wife, seeing the gods passing by in chariots, enquires of her husband where they are going, and is told by him that they are proceeding to Daxa’s horse-sacrifice. The goddess then asks why her lord also does not go. He replies: Surair eva mahābhāge pūrvam etad anushṭhitam | yajñeshu sarveshu mama na bhāga

upakalpitaḥ | pūrcopāyopapannena mārgeṇa varavarṇini | na me surāḥ prayachhanti bhūgaṃ yajñasya dharmataḥ | “The former practice of the gods has been, that in all sacrifices no portion should be divided to me. By custom, arising out of early arrangements, the gods lawfully (dharmataḥ) allot me no share in the sacrifice.” Umā is extremely chagrined that her husband, a god of so great dignity, should be so treated. Perceiving his wife’s distress, Siva goes, with his attendants, and puts an end to the sacrifice. The sacrifice takes the form of a deer, and is followed by Siva to the sky. A drop of sweat falls from his forehead, from which a fire proceeds, out of which again a formidable being is born Jvara (fever) which burns up the sacrifice, puts the gods to flight, etc. On this Brahmā appears to Siva, and promises that the gods shall henceforth give him a share in the sacrifice (bhavato ’hi surāḥ sarve bhūgaṃ dāsyanti vai prabho), and proposes that Jvara (fever) shall be allowed to range over the earth. Siva is propitiated, and assents to Brahma’s proposal, and has ever afterwards obtained a share in the sacrifice (ity ukto Brahmaṇā devo bhūge chāpi prakalpito | bhagavantam tathety āha . . . parāṇcha pritiṃ agamad utsmayaṃścha Pināka-dhrik | arūpa cha tadā bhūgaṃ yathoktam Brahmaṇā Bhurāḥ).

The second version of the story is as follows: vv. 10272 ff. Daxa formerly commenced a sacrifice at Gangādvāra in the Himālaya, which was attended by the various orders of divine beings, including Indra and Brahmā. Dadhīchi, however, a votary of Rudra, was indignant that no worship was to be offered to that deity. 10283 ff. Tān drishṭvā manyunā ”vishto Dadhīchir vākyaṃ abravīt | “nāyaṃ yajño na vā dharma yatra Rudro na ijjate | balha-bandham prapannā vai kinnu kālasya paryyayah | kinnu mohād na paśyanti rinūṣam paryyupasthitam | upasthitam mahāghoraṃ na budhyanti mahādheare” | Ity ukṭvā sa mahā-yogī paśyati dhyāna-charuṣhā | sa paśyati Mahādevaṃ devīṇcha vara-dām śubhām | Nāradaṇcha mahātmānaṃ tasyā devyāḥ samīpataḥ | santosham paramaṃ lebhe iti nīśchitya yoga-vit | eka-mantrās tu te sarve yenośo na nimantritaḥ | tasmād deśād apākramya Dadhīchir vākyaṃ abravīt | apūjya-pūjēnāchchaiva pūjyānāñchāpy apūjanāt | nṛi-ghātaka-samam pāpam śaśvat prāpnōti mānavaḥ | anṛitaṃ nokta-pūrvam me na cha vaxyē kadāchana | devatānām ṛishīnām cha madhyo satyam brācīmy aham | āgatam Paśubharttāraṃ srashṭāraṃ jagataḥ patim | adheare yajña-bhoktāraṃ sarveśhām paśyata prabhum | Daxa uvācha | Santi no balavo

 ‘This is no sacrifice, nor a legitimate ceremony, in which Rudra is not worshipped. [These gods] have become entangled in the bonds of destruction. Is this the adverse influence of time? or is it through delusion that they do not see that ruin is at hand? They perceive not that a great calamity is impending at the sacrifice.’ Having so spoken, this great devotee beholds with the eye of contemplation : he sees Mahādeva and his boon-bestowing and auspicious goddess, and close to her the great Nārada, and received the highest satisfaction. Dadhīchi, versed in meditation, having ascertained that all the gods had adopted a common resolution that they would not invite Mahādeva, issued forth from that [sacrificial] ground, and spake thus : ‘By worshipping that which ought not to be worshipped, and neglecting to worship that which ought to be worshipped, a man ever incurs sin equal to that of a murderer. I have never before uttered, neither shall I ever utter, falsehood. Among gods and risbis I declare the truth. Behold Paśubharttri (Śiva) arrived, the creator, the master of the world, the lord of all, the eater of the sacrifice.’ Daxa replied : ‘We have many Rudras, armed with tridents, and wearing braided hair, who occupy eleven places. I know not Maheśvara.' Dadhīchi answered: 'Owing to this preconcerted plan of all [the gods] (lit. this is a device of them all, by which) he (Mahādeva) has not been invited. Since I perceive Śankara, and no other deity, to be supreme, therefore this sacrifice of Daxa shall not be prosperous.' Daxa spake: 'I offer to the lord of sacrifice (Vishnu), in a golden vessel, this entire oblation purified by rites and by texts, the share of the incomparable Vishnu: he is the lord, the all-pervading, the sacrificial fire.'<sup>280</sup> Devī (who, without any preamble, is here introduced as speaking) said: 'What liberality or arduous austerity can I perform whereby my divine, incomprehensible, husband may to-day obtain a share, a half-share, or a third?' The god, delighted in aspect, addressed his troubled wife who had thus spoken: 'Thou knowest me not, goddess, slender of waist and limb; nor what speech befits the lord of sacrifice. I know, o large-eyed; but the wicked, devoid of reflection, know not: and the three worlds, including Indra and the gods, are to-day altogether bewildered with thy bewilderment. Worshippers praise me at the sacrifice, singers of the sāma chant the rathantara, Brahmans, versed in the veda (brahma), adore me, and adhvaryu (i.e. Yajurvedic) priests divide for me a portion.'<sup>281</sup> Devī replied: 'Doubtless, every common man

<sup>280</sup> Prof. Wilson (p. 63) has the following note on the parallel passage of the Vāyu Purāṇa: "The Kūrma Purāṇa gives also this discussion between Dadhīcha and Daxa, and their dialogue contains some curious matter. Daxa, for instance, states that no portion of a sacrifice is ever allotted to Śiva, and no prayers are directed to be addressed to him, or to his bride (sarvesho eva hi yajñeshu na bhūgaḥ parikalpitah | na mantrā bhāryayā sārddham Śankarasyeti neshyate |) Dadhīcha apparently evades the objection, and claims a share for Rudra, consisting of the triad of gods, as one with the sun, who is undoubtedly hymned by the several ministering priests of the Vedas (sa stūyate sahasrāmśeḥ samagādhvaryu-hotribhiḥ | paśyainām Viśvakarmūnām Rudram mūrṭti-trayīmayaṁ |) Daxa replies that the twelve Adityas receive special oblations; that they are all the suns; and that he knows of no other. The Munis, who overhear the dispute, concur in his sentiments (ye ete dvādaśādityā Āditya-yajña-bhūginah | sarve sūryā iti jñeyā na hy anyo vidyate raviḥ | evaṁ ukte tu munayah samāyātā didṛṣavah | vādham ity abruvan Daxam tasya sāvṛṇya-kārinah |) These notions seem to have been exchanged for others in the days of the Padma P. and Bhāgavata, as they place Daxa's neglect of Śiva to the latter's filthy practices—his going naked, smearing himself with ashes," etc. etc. An abstract of the story as given in the Bhāgavata will be found in the text.

praises and magnifies himself in an assembly of women.' Mahādeva answered: 'I praise not myself, queen of the gods; behold, slender-waisted, beautiful-complexioned [goddess], what being I shall create.' Mahādeva accordingly creates a dreadful being, who, attended by hosts of other frightful creatures, demolishes all Daxa's preparations for his sacrifice. Brahmā and the other gods humbly enquire of this destroyer who he is. He replies that he is neither Rudra nor Devī, but Virabhadra, sent to destroy the sacrifice, and exhorts them to submit to Mahādeva, whose wrath is better than the beneficence of any other god: (varāṁ krodho 'pi devasya vara-dānaṁ na chānyataḥ). Upon this Daxa sings the praises of Mahēśvara.<sup>282</sup> The latter then appears, and assents to Daxa's request that his preparations for sacrifice shall not be fruitless. Daxa then celebrates him by reciting his eight thousand names.

The following is an abstract of the same story as told in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, book iv. sections 2-7, with a colouring different from that of the Mahābhārata. Satī, the wife of Śiva, was the daughter of Daxa, as we are told in the same work (iv. 1, 47, 48): Prasūtim Mānaviṁ Daxa upayame hy Ajātmajah | tasyāṁ sasariṇa duhitṛiḥ shodaśāmala-lochanāḥ | trayodaśādād Dharmāya tathaikām Agnaye vibhuh | pitṛibhya ekāṁ yuktebhyo Bhavāyaikām bhava-chhīde | "Daxa, the son of Aja (the 'unborn'—he is said [v. 11] to be the son of Brahmā=Aja), married Prasūti, the daughter of Manu. On her he begot sixteen pure-eyed daughters. Of these this lord gave thirteen to Dharma, one to Agni, one to the meditative [or united] Pitṛis, and one to Bhava (Śiva), the destroyer of existence." Satī, however, bore no children to Śiva. 64. Bhavasya patnī tu Satī Bhavaṁ devam anuvratā | ātmanah sadriśam putraṁ na lebhe guṇa-śīlataḥ |

Library, and is as follows: Mamūdhvare saṁsītārah stuvanti rathantare sūma gūyanti geyam | abrahmaṇe brahma-satre yajante mamūdhvaryyavah kalpayante cha bhūgam | "At my sacrifice worshippers praise (me); in the rathantara they sing the sūma song; they adore (me) in a sacrifice of devotion without Brahmans; and the adhvaryu priests divide for me a portion." It is remarkable that Mahādeva's worship should be here described as performed without Brahmans.

<sup>282</sup> In this passage (v. 10332) Mahādeva is called Viśvakarman (Devo nūhūyate tatra Viśvakarmā Mahēśvarah). Compare the passage from the Rāmāyaṇa, above, p. 308 f., and note 280. There appears to be some confusion in the narrative as given in verses 10331 ff. Though Daxa had already made his submission to Mahādeva, the story seems to be begun over again.

In the second section we are informed how enmity arose between Mahādeva and his father-in-law Daxa. It appears that the gods and rishis were assembled at a sacrifice celebrated by the Prajāpatīs. On the entrance of Daxa, all the personages who were present, rose to salute him, excepting only Viriñcha (Brahmā) and Mahādeva. Daxa, after making his obeisance to Brahmā, sat down by his command; but was offended at the treatment he received from Śiva (iv. 2, 8 ff.): Prāṇ nishannam Mṛidaṁ drishṭvā nāmṛishat tad-anūdrītaḥ | uvācha vāmaṁ chakurbhṛyāṁ abhivīṛya dahann iva | śrūyatām brahmarshayo me saha-devāḥ sahāgnayah | sādhnāṁ bruvato vṛttam nājñānād na cha matsarāt | ayaṁ tu loka-pālānām yaśo-ghno nīrapatrapaḥ | sadbhir ācharītaḥ panthā yena stabdhena dūshitāḥ | esha me śishyatām prāpto yan me duhitur agrahīt | pāṇim viprāgni-mukha-taḥ sāvitryā iva sādhu-rat | grihītvā nṛiga-śācāxyāḥ pāṇim markata-locha-nah | pratyuthānābhlivādārhe rachā 'py akṛita nochitam | kṛpta-kriyāyā-śuchaye mānīne bhīma-setave | anichhann apy adām bālām śūdrāyevoshu-tīm giram | pretāvāseshu ghoreshu pretair bhūta-gaṇair vṛitāḥ | ataty unmatta-vad nagn vyupta-keśo hasan rudan | chitā-bhasma-kṛta-snānah pretā-sraṇ vrasthi-bhūṣaṇaḥ | śivāpadeśo hy aśiro matto matta-jana-priyaḥ | patiḥ pramatha-bhūtānām tamo-mātrātmatkātmānām | tasmā unmāda-nāthāya nashṭa-śauchāya durhṛide | dattā mayā vata sādheḥ chodite parameshthini | vinindyaivāṁ sa Giriśam apratīpam avasthitam | Daxo 'thāpa upasprīṣya kruddhaḥ śaptum prachakrame | ayaṁ tu deva-yajane Indropendrādibhir Bhavaḥ | saha bhāgaṁ na labhatām decar deva-gaṇādhamah | “Beholding Mṛida (Śiva) previously seated, Daxa did not brook his want of respect; and looking at him obliquely with his eyes, as if consuming him, thus spake: ‘Hear me, ye Brahman rishis, with the gods and the Agnis, while I, neither from ignorance nor from passion, describe what is the practice of virtuous persons. But this shameless being (Śiva) detracts from the reputation of the guardians of the world,—he by whom, hardened as he is, the course pursued by the good is transgressed. He assumed the position of my disciple, inasmuch as, like a virtuous person, in the face of Brahmans and of fire, he took the hand of my daughter, who resembled Sāvitri. This monkey-eyed [god], after having taken the hand of [my] fawn-eyed [daughter], has not even by word shewn suitable respect to me whom he ought to have risen and saluted. Though unwilling, I yet gave my daughter to this impure and proud abolisher of rites and demolisher of barriers, like the word of the Veda<sup>253</sup> to a Sūdra. He roams about in dreadful cemeteries, attended by hosts of ghosts and sprites, like a madman, naked, with dishevelled hair, laughing, weeping, smeared (lit. bathed) with the ashes of funeral piles, wearing a garland of dead men's [skulls], and ornaments of human bones, pretending to be Sīva (auspicious) but in reality Asīva (inauspicious), insane, beloved by the insane, the lord of Pramathas and Bhūtas (sprites), beings whose nature is essentially darkness. To this wicked-hearted lord of the infuriate, whose purity has perished, I have, alas! given my virtuous daughter, at the instigation of Brahmā.<sup>254</sup> Having thus reviled Gīrīśa (Sīva), who did not oppose him, Daxa having then touched water, incensed, began to curse him [thus]: 'Let this Bhava (Sīva), lowest of the gods, never, at the worship of the gods, receive any portion along with the gods Indra, Upendra (Vishnu), and others.' Having delivered his malediction, Daxa departed. A counter-malediction, as follows, was then uttered upon him and the Brahmans who took his part, by Nandiśvara, one of the chief of Mahādeva's followers:

<sup>253</sup> Usatīm giram, which the commentator explains veda-bhavanāṁ giram. It does not appear how usatī has this sense. In Wilson's Dictionary the participle usat has the sense of "inauspicious" (as discourse) assigned to it.

Devoted to domestic occupations and low duties, from a desire of vulgar pleasures, let him practise the round of ceremonies, with an understanding degraded by Vedic prescriptions.<sup>256</sup> Forgetting the nature of soul with a mind which contemplates other things, let Daxa, brutal, be excessively devoted to women, and have speedily the face of a goat. Let this stupid being, who has a conceit of knowledge, and all those who follow this contemner of Śarva (Śiva), continue to exist in this world in ceremonial ignorance. Let the enemies of Hara (Śiva), whose minds are disturbed by the strong spirituous odour and the excitement of the flowery words of the Veda, become deluded! Let those Brahmans, eating all sorts of food, professing knowledge and practising austerities and ceremonies [merely] for subsistence, delighting in riches and in corporeal and sensual enjoyments, wander about as beggars!”

words ‘in cemeteries,’ etc., are a mere disguise. He himself says ‘like a madman.’ Otherwise he would have said ‘a madman.’ Aśiva, un-fortunate, means he than whom none is more fortunate. The words matta and matta-jana-priya should be so divided as to be preceded by a negative, and thus mean ‘not insane,’ ‘beloved by the not-insane.’ The words ‘lord of Pramathas,’ etc., intimate his love for those devoted to him. The sense is that, removing their faultiness, he cherishes even those who have the quality of darkness. Nashṭa-sauchāya means that from him comes purity to the depraved. Durhṛit means he whose heart, feeling, suggests that ‘even these among the wicked are to be compassionated by me.’ Vata intimates joy. ‘Owing to the injunction of Brahmā, abandoning modesty, fear, etc., I gave my daughter :’ such is the sense.”

The wrath of Bhṛigu, one of the sages present at the sacrifice, is aroused by this curse :

27 ff.—Tasyaivam dadatah śāpaṁ śrutvā dvija-kulāya vai | Bhṛiguḥ pratyasṛijach chhāpam brahma-daṇḍaṁ duratyayam | Bhava-vrata-dharā ye cha ye cha tām samanuvratāḥ | pāśhaṇḍinas te bhavantu sachchhāstra-paripanthinaḥ | nashṭa-śauchā mūḍha-dhiyo jaṭu-bhasmāsthi-dhārinaḥ | viśantu Śiva-dīxūyaṁ yatra daivaṁ surāsavam | brahma cha brāhma-nāṁś chaiva yad yūyam parinindatha | setum vidhāraṇam puṁsām ataḥ pāśhaṇḍam āśritāḥ | esha eva hi lokānām śicāḥ panthā sanātanaḥ | yam pūrve chānusaṁtasthur yat-pramūṇaṁ Janārdanaḥ | tad brahma paramaṁ śuddhaṁ satām vartma sanātanam | vijarhya yāta pāśhaṇḍaṁ daivaṁ vo yatra bhūta-rāt | “Hearing him thus utter a curse against the tribe of Brahmans, Bhṛigu launched a counter-imprecation, a Brahmanical weapon, hard to be evaded : ‘Let those who practise the rites of Bhava (Mahādeva), and all their followers, be heretics, and opponents of the true scriptures. Having lost their purity, deluded in understanding, wearing matted hair, and ashes and bones, let them undergo the initiation of Śiva, in which spirituous liquor is the deity. Since ye revile the veda (brahma) and Brahmans, the barriers by which men are restrained, ye have embraced heresy. For this [veda] is the auspicious (śiva) eternal path of the people, which the ancients have trod, and wherein Janārdana (Vishṇu) is the authority. Reviling this veda (brahma), supreme, pure, the eternal path of the virtuous, follow the heresy in which your god is the king of goblins.’”

On hearing this imprecation, Śiva departed with his followers, while Daxa and the other Prajāpatis celebrated for a thousand years the sacrifice in which Vishṇu was the object of adoration.

The enmity between the father-in-law and son-in-law continues (sect. 3). Daxa being elevated by Brahmā to the rank of chief of the Prajāpatis, becomes elated. He commences a great sacrifice called Vṛihaspatisava. Seeing the other gods with their wives passing to this sacrifice, Satī presses her husband, Śiva, to accompany her thither. He refers to the insults which he had received from her father, and advises her not to go. She, however (sect. 4), being anxious to see her relatives, disregards his warning and goes ; but being slighted by her father, Daxa, she reproaches him for his hostility to her husband, and threatens to abandon the corporeal frame by which she was connected with her parent. She then voluntarily gives up the ghost. Seeing this, Śiva's attendants, who had followed her, rush on Daxa to kill him. Bhṛigu, however, throws an oblation into the southern fire, pronouncing a yajus text suited to destroy the destroyers of sacrifice (yajña-ghna-ghnena yajushā dacinūgnau juhāva ha). A troop of Ṛibhus in consequence spring up, who put Śiva's followers to flight. Śiva is filled with wrath when he hears of the death of Satī (sect. 5). From a lock of his hair, which he tore out, a gigantic demon arose, whom he commanded to destroy Daxa and his sacrifice. This demon proceeds with a troop of Śiva's followers, and they all execute the mandate. 15 ff. Rurujur yajña-pātrāṇi tathaike 'gnin anūśayan | kuṇḍeshv amūtra-yan kechid bibhidur vedi-mekhalāḥ | abādhanta munin anye eke patnīr atarjayan | apare jigrīhur devān pratyāsannān palāyitān | . . . juh-vataḥ sruva-hastasya śmaśrūṇi bhagavān Bhavaḥ | Bhṛigor luluṅche sadasi yo 'hasat śmaśru darśayan | Bhagasya netre bhagavān pālitasya rushā bhuvi | vjjhāra sadāḥstho 'cṇā yaḥ śapantam asūsuchat | Pūshnaś chāpātayad dantān Kāliṅgasya yathā Balaḥ | śapyamāne garimaṇi<sup>287</sup> yo 'hasat darśayan dataḥ | "Some broke the sacrificial vessels, others destroyed the fires, others made water in the ponds, others cut the boundary-cords of the sacrificial ground; others assaulted the Munis, others reviled their wives; others seized the gods who were near, and those who had fled. The divine Bhava (Śiva) plucked out the beard of Bhṛigu, who was offering oblations with a ladle in his hand, and who had laughed in the assembly, shewing his beard. He also tore out the eyes of Bhaga whom in his wrath he had felled to the ground, and who when in the assembly had made a signal to [Daxa when] cursing [Śiva]. He moreover knocked out the teeth of Pūshan (as Bala did the king of Kalinga's) who (Pūshan) had laughed, shewing his teeth, when the great god was being cursed." Śiva then cuts off the head of Daxa, but not without some difficulty. The gods report all that had passed to Svayambhū (Brahmā), who, with Viṣṇu, had not been present (sect. 6). Brahmā advises the gods to propitiate Śiva, to whom they had wrongfully refused a share in the sacrifice (athāpi yūyañ kṛita-kilviṣhā Bhavaṁ ye Jarhiṣho bhāga-bhājam parādūḥ). The deities, headed by Aja (Brahmā), accordingly proceed to Kailāsa, when they see Śiva "bearing the liṅga desired by devotees, ashes, a staff, a tuft of hair, an antelope's skin, and a digit of the moon, his body shining like an evening cloud" (lingaṅcha tāpasābhīṣṭam bhasma-danda-jatājīnam | angena sandhyā-bhara-ruchā chandra-lekhāṅcha bibhratam |). Brahmā addresses Mahādeva "as the eternal Brahma,—the lord of Sakti and Siva, who are respectively the womb and the seed of the universe,—who, in sport, like a spider, forms all things from Sakti and Siva, who are consubstantial with himself, and preserves and reabsorbs them:" (jāne ivāṁ īśaṁ viśvasya jagato yoni-rījayoḥ | Sakteḥ Sivasya cha param yat tad Brahma nirantaram | teva eva bhagavann etach Chhiva-Saktyoḥ sarūpayoḥ | viśvaṁ sṛjasi pāsy atsi krīḍann ūrna-paṭo yathā). Brahmā adds that it was this great being who had instituted sacrifice, and all the regulations which Brahmans devoutly observe; and entreats him who is beyond all illusion, to have mercy on those who, overcome by its influence, had wrongly attached importance to ceremonial works, and to restore the sacrifice of Daxa, at which a share had been refused to him by evil priests (na yatra bhāgaṁ tara bhāgino daduḥ kuyajinaḥ). Mahādeva partly relents (sect. 7), and allows Daxa to have the beard of a goat, Bhaga to see with Mitra's eyes, Pūshan to eat with the teeth of his worshipper, Bhṛigu to have a he-goat's beard, etc. Daxa, after having had a goat's head fitted to his body, celebrates the praises of Siva. The sacrifice is then recommenced, and in order to its completion, and to remove the pollution occasioned by the touch of Mahādeva's warriors, an oblation is made to Viṣṇu in three cups (Vaiṣṇavaṁ yajña-santatyai trikapaṇāṁ dvijottamāḥ | puroḍāsaṁ niracapan vira-saṁsarga-suddhaye). Hari (Viṣṇu) being meditated on, then appears, is saluted with the greatest reverence by Brahmā, Indra, and Siva (Tryaxanāyaka); is lauded successively by Daxa, by the priests, by Rudra himself, etc. etc., and at length expresses himself as follows, in such a manner as to demonstrate the futility of the dispute between Daxa and Mahādeva, and to shew that he himself was the one supreme deity, of whom all the others were only the manifestations :

teshu mat-parah | “I am Brahmā and Sarva (Śiva), the supreme cause of the world, the soul, the lord, the witness, the self-manifesting, (or, self-beholding) devoid of attributes. Entering into my own illusion consisting of the three guṇas (qualities)—creating, preserving, and destroying—I have assumed names corresponding to my several acts. In that one and only Brahmā, the supreme Spirit, the ignorant person perceives a distinction of Brahmā and Rudra, and creatures. But as a man does not think of his own members, his head, hands, etc., as belonging to another, so the man who is devoted to me [does not look upon] created things [as distinct from me].”

Daxa, after adoring Viṣṇu, worships the other gods, and offers to Rudra his proper share in the sacrifice. Satī, the daughter of Daxa, who had abandoned her original body, is born again as the daughter of Himavat and Menā (evaṁ Dāxāyaṇī hītvā Satī pūrva-kalevaram | jājñe Himavataḥ xetre Menāyām iti śūsruma |).<sup>288</sup>

The Śaiva compiler of the Līṅga Purāṇa takes his revenge on the Vaiṣṇava writers, who, like the author of the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, have exalted Viṣṇu at the expense of Śiva, by narrating the following legend of an undignified dispute between Brahmā and Viṣṇu regarding their respective claims to superiority, and of the apparition of the

“Pitāmaha (Brahmā, in answer to an enquiry of the gods and rishis) says: ‘Pradhāna (nature) is called the Linga, and Parameśvara is called Lingī’<sup>291</sup> (the sustainer of the Linga). It arose for the preservation of myself and Vishṇu in the ocean, o deities. When the Vaimānika’<sup>292</sup> creation had proceeded with the rishis to the Janaloka,<sup>293</sup> and when—the period of the continuance [of the world] having then been completed,—[all things] had been absorbed, at the end of the thousand sets of four yugas, and had departed to the Satyaloka—I, Brahmā, being at length reduced to a condition of equality [with other creatures] without dominion over them,<sup>294</sup> and all immoveable things having become altogether dried up from want of rain,—beasts, men, trees, Piśāchas, flesh-eating goblins, Gandharvas, etc., were by degrees burnt up by the rays of the sun. The one awful ocean being everywhere enveloped in darkness, the great-armed Nārāyaṇa, the soul of all things, formed of existence and non-existence, sleeps<sup>295</sup> upon the water, plunged in contemplation, spotless, tranquil, thousand-headed, the soul of the universe, thousand-eyed, thousand-footed, thousand-armed, omniscient, the source of all the gods, he who is himself through passion (rajas) Hiranyagarbha, through darkness (taṃas) Śankara, through goodness (sattva) the all-pervading Vishṇu, and in his universality Maheśvara, having the character of time, the name of time, white, black, free from the three qualities. Beholding the lotus-eyed deity in this condition, sleeping, I, deluded by his illusion, touching the eternal being with my hand, impatient, said to him, ‘Who art thou? speak.’ Roused by the strong and violent stroke of my hand from his snaky couch, sitting for a moment, self-restrained, the deity whose eyes are pure as the lotus looked up heavy with drowsiness. The divine Hari, invested by lustre, seeing me standing before him, rising up, said to me, sweetly smiling at the same time, ‘Welcome, welcome, my child, the glorious Pitāmaha.' Hearing these words of his, accompanied by a smile, o deities, my illwill being excited by passion (rajas), I said to Janārdana (Vishṇu): 'Dost thou, o sinless god, like a teacher speaking to his pupil, smiling inwardly, address the words child, child, to me [who am] the cause of creation and destruction, the undisputed maker of the worlds, and the mover of Prakriti (nature), the eternal, unborn, Vishṇu,<sup>296</sup> Viriñchī, the source and soul of all things, the disposer, the upholder, the lotus-eyed? Why dost thou foolishly address me thus? Tell me quickly.' He said to me, 'Perceive that I am the maker, the preserver, the destroyer of the worlds; thou hast issued from my imperishable body. Thou hast forgotten the lord of the world, the potent Nārāyaṇa, Puruṣa, the supreme Spirit, invoked of many, lauded of many, Vishṇu, the undecaying, the lord, the source and origin of the universe. In this there is no fault of thine: it arises from my illusion. Listen to the truth, o four-faced deity: I am the lord of all the gods, the maker, the director, the destroyer; there is no lord equal to me. I, even I, o Pitāmaha, am the supreme Brahmā, the supreme reality, the supreme light, the supreme spirit. Whatever thing, movable or immovable, has been seen or heard of in this world, know, o four-faced deity, that it is all formed of me. By me of old has been created everything that is discernible, consisting of the twenty-four principles; the atoms, which in their ultimate [and most subtle] form are eternal, have been united; and the beings sprung from my wrath<sup>297</sup> (Rudra), etc., have been created. From my complacency thou and numerous (mundane) eggs have been formed in sport. Intelligence (buddhi) has been created by me in sport, and then from it three-fold ahankāra: from it the five tanmātras, and thence mind, with the bodily senses, as also ether and the other elements, and things formed of the elements.' As soon as he and I had thus spoken, a direful and terrific fight arose in the sea of universal dissolution<sup>298</sup> between us twain, whose enmity had been roused by passion. At this time there appeared before us, to stay our contention and admonish us, a luminous Liṅga, encircled with a thousand wreaths of flame, incapable of diminution or increase, without beginning, middle, or end, incomparable, indescribable, undefinable, the source of all things. Bewildered by its thousand flames, the divine Hari said to me (Brahmā) who was myself bewildered, 'Let us on the spot examine the source of [this] fire. I will go down the unequalled pillar of fire, and thou shouldst quickly proceed strenuously upwards.' Having thus spoken, the universal-formed took the shape of a boar, and I immediately assumed the character of a swan. Ever since then men call me Hansa (swan), for Hansa is Virāj.<sup>299</sup> Whoever shall call me 'Hansa, Hansa,' shall become a Hansa (unimpassioned saint). Having become purely white, and fiery-eyed, with wings on every side, rapid as thought and as the wind, I went upwards. Nārāyaṇa too, the soul of all things, having taken the dark form of a boar, like a heap of blue collyrium, ten yojanas broad and a hundred yojanas long, bulky as mount Meru, with white sharp-pointed tusks, luminous as the sun of destruction, long-snouted, loud-grunting, short-footed, wondrous-limbed, victorious, strong, incomparable, proceeded downwards. Speeding thus downwards for a thousand years, Viṣṇu, the boar, beheld no base at all of the Linga. For the same period I went rapidly upwards, o destroyer of your foes, with all my might, desirous of learning its end; but I descended from the lapse of time, and so too the divine Viṣṇu of vast bulk, the source of all the gods, worn-out, with affrighted look, ascended rapidly. Meeting with me, that magnanimous deity, prostrating himself, bewildered by the illusion of Sambhu (Śiva), and disturbed in mind, bowing, along with me, before Parameśvara (Śiva), behind, at the side, and in front, exclaimed, 'What is this?' Then, o chief of the gods, there arose there the articulate sound om, om, distinct and protracted. Considering what this could be, he then, standing with me, beheld this eternal loud-resounding [monosyllable] upon the right side of the Linga; the first letter a-kāra, after it u-kāra, ma-kāra in the centre, and Om as the result of the sounds.' "

This is followed by a great deal of mysticism about the letters of the word om and the other letters of the alphabet, etc. etc.

The eighteenth section contains a hymn addressed by Viṣṇu to Rudra, which recites a list of the attributes of the latter deity. Mahādeva is gratified with this hymn, and tells Brahmā and Viṣṇu that they had both sprung from him, offers them a boon, and touches them with his auspicious hands. Nārāyaṇa asks as a boon that they may both entertain an eternal devotion for him; which Mahādeva as a matter of course grants. I cite the verses which follow, in the original :

I, the undivided supreme lord, am divided in a three-fold manner under the names of Brahmā, Viṣṇu, and Bhava, possessing the attributes of creating, preserving, and destroying. Relinquish, Viṣṇu, thy delusion ; cherish this Pitāmaha. He shall be thy son in the Pādma Kalpa. Then shalt thou behold me, and he also who sprung from the lotus (Brahmā), shall see me.’ Having thus spoken, the deity vanished. Thenceforward the worship of the Linga has been inaugurated in the worlds. The pedestal of the Linga is Mahādevī (Umā) and the Linga is the visible Maheśvara.”

<sup>300</sup> I cannot render this sentence otherwise than by taking vivādam for a neuter nominative, though nouns of this formation are masculine. The commentator explains sobhanam as meaning ubhayor api sama-balutvāch chhobhamānam, “brilliant from the equal powers of the two combatants.”

The reader will probably be of opinion that this story does not throw much light on the origin of the Liṅga-worship.

The Viṣṇu Purāṇa (i. 7, 6 ff.) does not assign a high rank to Rudra; but makes him the offspring of Brāhmā (as the Mahābhārata, quoted above, p. 225 f., makes him of Viṣṇu): Sanandanādayo ye cha pūrvañ śṛṣṭās tu Vedhasā | na te lokeshv asajjanta nirapeṛāḥ prajāsu te | sarve te chāgata-jñānā vīta-rāgā vimatsarāḥ | teshv evaṁ nirapeṛeshu lokas-ṛṣṭāu mahātmanah | Brahmano 'bhūt mahākrodhas trailokyā-dahanaxamah | tasya krodhāt samudbhūta-jvālā-mālā-vidīpitam | Brahmano 'bhūt tadā sarvaṁ trailokyam akhilam mune | bhrukūṭi-kūṭilāt tasya lalātāt krodhā-dīpitāt | samutpannas tadā Rudro madhyāhnārka-samaprabhah | ardha-nārī-nara-vapuḥ prachando 'ti-śārīravān | "vibhajātmānam" ity uktvā tam Brāhmā 'ntardadhe punah | tathokto 'sau deīdhā strītvam puruṣatvaṁ tathā 'karot | bibheda puruṣatvaṁ cha daśadhā chaikadhā cha saḥ | saumyāsaumyais tathā śāntāśāntaiḥ strītvam cha su prabhuh | bibheda bahudhā devaḥ svarūpair asitaiḥ silaiḥ | "Sanandana and the others who were before created by Vedhas (Brāhmā) had no regard for the worlds, and were indifferent about offspring, for they had all attained to knowledge, and were free from love and from hatred. As they were thus indifferent to the creation of worlds, the mighty Brāhmā was filled with fierce anger, sufficient to burn up the three worlds. The three worlds were illuminated in every part by the wreaths of flame engendered from the wrath of the god. From his forehead, wrinkled with a frown and enflamed with anger, Rudra then sprang forth, glorious as the noonday sun, his body half male and half female, fierce, and huge in bulk. Brāhmā disappeared after saying to him, 'Divide thyself.' Being thus addressed, he severed himself into twain, into a male and a female body. The god then divided his male form into eleven portions, gentle and ungentle; and in like manner his female body into many forms black and white."<sup>301</sup>

In the same way the Harivaṁśa says (v. 43): Tato 'srijat punar Brāhmā Rudraṁ roṣātma-sambhavam | "Then Brāhmā next created Rudra, the offspring of his anger."

The various texts quoted in Sections i.–iv. (pp. 252–291) from the Rig-, the Yajur-, and Atharva-vedas, and from the Brāhmanas, relative to Rudra, compose the principal materials which we possess for forming an idea of the characteristics ascribed to that deity in the more ancient portions of Indian literature anterior to the composition of the Epic poems and Purāṇas. The Upanishads from which I have derived the mystical extracts given in the fifth section (pp. 296 ff.) are of uncertain date, and their contents throw but little light on the development of the worship of Rudra. The extracts which I have given from the Rāmāyaṇa and Mahābhārata in chapter ii. (pp. 147, 153–170, 187–190, 194 f., 203 ff., 225 ff., 236 ff., and 241 ff.), and in the last section, while they contain some of the earliest descriptions of which I am aware, of Rudra in the new, and very different, aspect in which he has been conceived in the later ages of Hindū mythology, since he has come to be identified with Śiva or Mahādeva, are yet unfitted to elucidate the process by which he became elevated to the highest rank in the Indian pantheon. I shall, however, draw from these texts a summary of the attributes which they respectively assign to Rudra, and shall describe the successive mutations which the conception of this deity undergoes in the later, as compared with the earlier, passages. To my own remarks on this subject, however, I shall prefix some observations by Professors H. H. Wilson, Weber, and Whitney, on the character of the Vedic Rudra.

The following remarks by Professor Wilson are extracted from the Introductions to the first and second volumes of his translation of the Rig-veda :

“We have a Rudra, who, in after times, is identified with Śiva, but who, even in the Purāṇas, is of very doubtful origin and identification; whilst in the Veda he is described as the father of the winds, and is evidently a form of either Agni or Indra. The epithet kaparddin which is applied to him appears, indeed, to have some relation to a characteristic attribute of Śiva,—the wearing of his hair in a peculiar braid; but the term has probably in the Veda a very different signification—one now forgotten,—although it may have suggested in after-time the appearance of Siva in such a head-dress, as identified with Agni; for instance, kaparddin may intimate his head being surrounded by radiating flame, or the word may be an interpolation; at any rate, no other epithet applicable to Siva occurs, and there is not the slightest allusion to the form in which, for the last ten centuries at least, he seems to have been almost exclusively worshipped in India, that of the Linga or Phallus: neither is there the slightest hint of another important feature of later Hinduism,—the Trimūrti, or Tri-une combination of Brahmā, Vishṇu, and Siva, as typified by the mystical syllable om, although, according to high authority on the religions of antiquity, the Trimūrti was the first element in the faith of the Hindūs, and the second was the Lingam <sup>302</sup> (vol. i. pp. xxvi., xxvii.)

“Of Rudra also, the character is equivocal; but it may be doubted if it partakes, in any remarkable degree, of that fierceness and wrath which belong to the Rudra of a later date; he is termed, it is true, the slayer of heroes, but so is Indra: the effects of his anger upon men and animals are deprecated; but he is also appealed to as wise and bountiful, the author of fertility and giver of happiness, and his peculiar characteristics are evidently his presiding over medicinal plants and removal of disease, attributes of a beneficent, not of a malignant and irascible deity. As above remarked, the Maruts, or winds, are termed his sons; and this relationship would assimilate him to Indra. There is also a class of inferior deities, termed Rudras, who in one passage are worshippers of Agni, and in another are followers of Indra; being the same as the Maruts. So far, therefore, Rudra might be identified with Indra; but we have the name applied unequivocally to Agni in a hymn exclusively dedicated to that divinity (R. V. i. 27, 10). The term denotes, according to the Scholiast, the ‘terrible Agni,’ but there is no warrant for this in the text, and we may be content, therefore, with the latter, to regard Rudra as a form or denomination of fire (ibid. pp. xxxvii. f.).

“Rudra is described, as in the first book, by rather incompatible qualities, as both fierce and beneficent; but his specific province is here also the tutelarship of medicinal plants, and administration of medicine, and he is designated as a physician of physicians (R. V. ii. 33, 4).

With respect also to his presiding over medicinal plants, there occurs a passage worthy of note, as among the herbs are those, it is said, which Manu selected, alluding, most probably, to the seeds of the plants which Manu, according to the legend as related in the Mahābhārata, took with him into his vessel at the time of the deluge. There are more particulars of the person of Rudra than usual. He is sometimes said to be brown or tawny, but he is also said to be white-complexioned (R. V. ii. 33, 8); he is soft-bellied and handsome-chinned; he is armed with a bow and arrows, and brilliant with golden ornaments. He is also called the father of the Maruts. There is little, however, in all this, except his fierceness to identify him with the Rudra of the Purānas (vol. ii. pp. ix. f.).”

“In the beginning of the ninth book of the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa (see above, p. 289 f.), we obtain a complete explanation of the Satarudriya (see above, p. 268 ff.). When the preparation of the consecrated place for kindling the fire is completed (chity-upadhāna-parisamāpty-ānantaryam, Sāyana), and the fire has been kindled, and blazes up (dīpyamāno 'tishṭhat), the gods (i.e. the Brahmins<sup>303</sup>) are terrified by it, yad vai no yam na hīṃsyād iti (‘lest it should destroy us’): and with the view of appeasing this [howling, hungry] flame, which is conceived of as in the form of Rudra, i.e. to consecrate and propitiate the fire, they offer their adoration to Rudra, and to his supposed troop of associates, i.e. to all conceivable shapes of terror, and by this means render them favourable, and avert all their malevolent influences. Hence the Brāhmaṇa explains śata-rudriya by śānta-rudriya (as gata comes from the root gam); a double sense, which may perhaps have actually been, though indistinctly, contemplated, when the name was first given.<sup>304</sup> In this application of Rudra as the god of fire (independently of the other contents of the Satarudriya), we may find an indication of the time when it was composed. Though Rudra originally signifies generally the howler, and consequently can stand as well for an epithet of the crackling fire as of the raging storm, yet in the earliest period the word had been more specially used to denote the latter signification, and is therefore frequently used in the Rig-veda in the plural as an epithet of the Maruts. The unbridled fury (manyu) of the storm, its roaring, its tearing up (aufwühlen) of heaven and earth,<sup>305</sup> must have produced a strong and overpowering effect upon the Arian Indians in the high mountain valleys (perhaps of Kashmīr) in which we must conceive them to have lived at that early period; and it was thus in the natural course of things that they should connect everything terrible and horrible with the idea of the god of storms, and regard him as the lord, and the cause, of every evil:<sup>306</sup> numberless, indeed, were these aerial hosts, black, pierced only by the quivering gleams of the lightning, diffusing everywhere shuddering and horror.

<sup>303</sup> “In the Brāhmaṇas the thoughts of men are very frequently put into the mouths of the gods. For instance, when the gods go to Prajāpati, and request him to solve any difficulty, this is merely a transcendental expression for the fact of a few wise men applying for instruction to one still wiser than themselves.”

"It is true that Rudra 'is also appealed to as wise and bountiful, the author of fertility, and giver of happiness;' <sup>207</sup> but it is only indirectly that he is so addressed, and merely because he departs, and directs his destroying arrows towards some other quarter, against the enemies of the suppliant, and leaves the latter himself in peace; the worshipper flatters him with fair words, as if he were purely benevolent, to pacify his anger, and to render him gracious (śiva); and he only appears directly beneficent in so far as he chases away clouds and vapours, purifies and clears the atmosphere; in reference to this he is called a physician, and moreover acquainted with healing herbs: but he carries also diseases and contagions themselves as arrows in his quiver, and slays therewith men and cattle. ✓

"In the crackling flame of the fire, now, men thought that they heard again the wrathful voice of the storm, that in the consuming fierceness of the former, they perceived once more the destructive fury of the latter. In this way we have to explain how it happened that both deities became gradually identified, and lent their respective epithets to one another, particularly as at the same time the storm is, in bad weather, accompanied with gleaming and fiery lightnings. This identification seems to have extended not merely to Agni and Rudra themselves, but also to the Rudras, in so far as the latter, from being the raging and flaming companions of the storm, appear to have become the representatives of all sorts of terrific shapes in general, until in the epic period they retired completely into the background, while their ancient master, Rudra, in his combination with Agni, became continually more firmly condensed as the god of rage and destruction, and a new class of beings took the place of the Rudras as attendants upon him (in his capacity of Śiva).

“At the period when the Rudra-book (the Satarudriya) was composed, the blending of the two destructive deities (Storm and Fire) had evidently taken place; and the epithets which are there assigned to Rudra lead us back partly to himself, and partly to Agni. The epithets ‘dweller in the mountains’ (giriśa, giriśaya, giriśanta, giritra), and those of kapardin, vyūpta-keśa, ugra, and bhīma, bhīṣaj and śiva, śaṁbhu and śankara, belong to the Storm, while on the other hand those of nīla-grīva (= nīlakaṇṭha, spoken of smoke), śitikaṇṭha, hiraṇyabāhu (of flame), vilohita, sahasrāra (of sparks), paśupati (of sacrificial victims), śarva and bhava, etc., belong to Fire. Now almost all these epithets<sup>308</sup> are technical epithets and characteristics of the epic Śiva, and when applied to him are partially unintelligible, and become explicable only after they have been distinguished according to the two separate elements to whose combination this god owes his origin.<sup>309</sup> But as in the Rudra-book Rudra nowhere appears as Īśa or Mahādeva, and no character is assigned to him analagous to that of the epic Śiva; and as the word śiva is applied to him simply as an epithet (with its comparative śivatara annexed), the book in question must in any case be held to date from an earlier epoch of the Indian religion, whilst its elevation to the rank of an Upanishad may only have taken place in the epic period, and have been occasioned by the special worship of Śiva.”

The following remarks of Professor Whitney on the same subject are taken from the Journal of the American Oriental Society, vol. iii. p. 318 f. :

“To the second domain, the atmosphere, belong the various divinities of the wind and storm. God of the breeze, the gentler motion of the air, is Vayū (from the root vā ‘to blow’). He drives a thousand steeds; his breath chases away the demons; he comes in the earliest morning, as the first breath of air that stirs itself at daybreak, to drink the soma, and the Auroras weave for him shining garments. The storm-winds are a troop, the Maruts or Rudras: the two names are indifferently used, but the former is much the more usual (the etymology of neither is fully established). They ride on spotted stags, wear shining armour, and carry spears in their hands; no one knows whence they come nor whither they go; their voice is heard aloud as they come rushing on; the earth trembles and the mountains shake before them. They belong in (sic) Indra’s train; are his almost constant allies and companions. They are called the sons of Rudra, who is conceived of as peculiar god of the tempest. As their father he is very often mentioned; as a divinity with independent attributes, he is of much rarer occurrence; hymns addressed to him alone are but few. He is, as might be expected, a terrible god: he carries a great bow from which he hurls a sharp missile at the earth; he is called the ‘slayer of men,’ kshayadvīra; <sup>310</sup> his wrath is deprecated, and he is besought not to harm his worshipper; if not in the Rik, at least in the Atharva and Brāhmaṇas, he is styled ‘lord of the animals,’ as the unhoused beasts of the field are especially at the mercy of the pitiless storm. At the same time he is, to propitiate him, addressed as master of a thousand remedies, best of physicians, protector from harm: this may have its ground, too, partly in the beneficial effects of the tempest in freshening the atmosphere of that sultry clime. Rudra’s chief interest consists in the circumstance that he forms the point of connection between the Vedic religion and the later Śiva-worship. Śiva is a god unknown to the Vedas: his name is a word of not unfrequent occurrence in the hymns, but means simply ‘propitious;’ not even in the Atharva is it the epithet of a particular divinity, or distinguished by its usage from any other adjective. As given to him whose title it has since become, it seems one of those euphemisms so frequent in the Indian religion, applied as a soothing and flattering address to the most terrible god in the whole Pantheon. The precise relation between Śiva and Rudra is not yet satisfactorily traced out. The introduction of an entirely new divinity from the mountains of the north has been supposed, who was grafted in upon the ancient religion by being identified with Rudra; or again a blending of some of Agni's attributes with those of Rudra to originate a new development: perhaps neither of these may be necessary; Śiva may be a local form of Rudra, arisen under the influence of peculiar climatic relations in the districts from which he made his way into Hindostan proper; introduced among, and readily accepted by, a people which, as the Atharva shows, was strongly tending toward a terrorism in its religion."

The characters ascribed to Rudra in the hymns of the R. V. are most heterogeneous and frequently indefinite. I shall endeavour to gather from different places and to group together those epithets which have most affinity to each other. This god is described as wise, bountiful, and powerful (i. 43, 1; i. 114, 4), as the strongest and most glorious of beings (ii. 33, 3), as lord (īśāna) of this world, possessed of divine power (ii. 33, 9), as unsurpassed in might<sup>311</sup> (ibid. 10), as the father of the world,<sup>312</sup> mighty, exalted, undecaying (vi. 49, 10); as cognizant of the doings of men and gods by his power and universal dominion (vii. 46, 2); as putting the waters in motion (x. 92, 5); as self-dependent (vii. 46, 1), and as deriving his renown from himself (i. 129, 3; x. 92, 9); as the lord of heroes (i. 114, 1, 3, 10; x. 92, 9); as the lord of songs and sacrifices (i. 43, 4), the fulfiller of sacrifices (i. 114, 4); brilliant as the sun, and as gold (i. 43, 5), tawny-coloured (this epithet is frequently applied), with beautiful chin (ii. 33, 5), fair-complexioned (ibid. 8), multiform, fierce, arrayed in golden ornaments (ibid. 9), youthful (v. 60, 5), terrible as a wild beast, destructive (ii. 33, 11), wearing braided hair (i. 114, 1, 5); and as the celestial boar (ibid. 5). He is frequently represented as the father of the Maruts or Rudras (i. 64, 2; i. 85, 1; i. 114, 6, 9; ii. 33, 1; ii. 34, 2; v. 52, 16; v. 60, 5 vi. 50, 4; vi. 66, 3; vii. 56, 1; viii. 20, 17). He is once identified with Agni (ii. 1, 6). He is described as seated on a chariot (ii. 33, 11), as wielding the thunderbolt (ii. 33, 3), as armed with a bow and arrows (ibid. 10, 14; v. 42, 11; x. 125, 6), with a strong bow and fleet arrows, with sharp weapons (vi. 74, 4; vii. 46, 1; viii. 29, 5). His shafts are discharged from the sky, and traverse the earth (vii. 46, 3). He is called the slayer of men, nri-ghne (iv. 3, 6). His anger, ill-will, and destructive shafts are deprecated (i. 114, 7, 8; ii. 33, 1, 11, 14; vi. 28, 7; vii. 46, 3, 4). But he is also represented as benevolent (i. 114, 9), as mild, and easily-invoked (ii. 33, 5), beneficent (ibid. 7), gracious (śiva, x. 92, 9), as the cause or condition of health and prosperity to man and beast (i. 114, 1). He is frequently described as the possessor of healing remedies, and is once characterized as the greatest of physicians (i. 43, 4; i. 114, 5; ii. 33, 2, 4, 7, 12, 13; v. 42, 11; vi. 74, 3; <sup>313</sup> vii. 35, 6; vii. 46, 3; viii. 29, 5). He is supplicated for blessings (i. 114, 1, 2; ii. 33, 6), and represented as averting the anger of the gods (i. 114, 4; ii. 33, 7). In R. V. vi. 74, 1 ff. he is connected with Soma in the dual, and entreated along with the latter to bestow good and avert evil.

On a review of these passages and the hymns from which they are drawn, it appears that in most places Rudra has no very clearly defined function (such, for instance, as is ascribed to Indra and Agni, or even to Vishṇu) as an agent in producing the great phenomena of the physical world. It would be difficult to make out from the larger portion of the texts which I have cited to what region of the universe the activity of this god should be referred. It is true that he is repeatedly declared to be the father of the Maruts or Rudras (the winds or storms); and from this relation we might anticipate that he would be described as, still more eminently than they, the generator of tempests, and chaser of clouds. Except, however, in a small number of texts, as R. V. i. 114, 5; ii. 33, 3; and x. 92, 5, there are few distinct traces of any such agency being ascribed to him. The numerous vague epithets which are constantly applied to him would not suffice to fix the particular sphere of his operation, or even to define his personality, as most of them are equally applied to other deities. This is the case with the terms "fierce," "tawny-coloured," "with beautiful chin;" and even the word kapardḍin ("with braided hair"), which at a later period became a common, if not distinctive, epithet of Mahādeva, is in the R. V. applied also to Pūshan (see above, p. 254, note 224). While, however, the cosmical function of Rudra is thus but obscurely represented, he is described as possessing other marked and peculiar characteristics. It is, however, principally in his relation to the good and evil which befall the persons and property of men that he is depicted. And here there can be little doubt that, though he is frequently supplicated to bestow prosperity, and though he is constantly addressed as the possessor of healing remedies, he is principally regarded as a malevolent deity, whose destructive shafts, the source of disease and death to man and beast, the worshipper strives by his entreaties to avert. If this view be correct, the remedies of which Rudra is the dispenser, may be considered as signifying little more than the cessation of his destroying agency, and the consequent restoration to health and vigour of those victims of his ill-will who had been in danger of perishing. It may appear strange that opposite functions should thus be assigned to the same god: but evil and good, sickness and health, death and life are naturally associated as contraries, the presence of the one implying the absence of the other, and vice versa; and in later times Mahādeva is in a somewhat similar manner regarded as the generator as well as the destroyer. We may add to this that, while it is natural to deprecate the wrath of a deity supposed to be the destroyer, the suppliant may fear to provoke his displeasure, and to awaken his jealousy, by calling on any other deity to provide a remedy. When the destructive god has been induced to relent, to withdraw his visitation, or remove its effects, it is natural for his worshippers to represent him as gracious and benevolent, as we see done in some of the hymns to Rudra.

From the above description, however, it will be apparent that the elder Rudra, though different in many respects from the later Mahādeva, is yet, like him, a terrible and destructive deity; while, on the other hand, the ancient Vishṇu, like the modern god of the same name, is represented to us as a preserver, of a benignant, or, at least, of an innoxious, character (R. V. i. 22, 18; i. 155, 4; i. 186, 10; viii. 25, 12).

In the Yajur-veda we find the same characteristics assigned to Rudra as in the Rig-veda. Thus both a healing virtue (iii. 59; xvi. 5, 49) and a destructive efficacy are ascribed to him, the latter being depicted in the liveliest colours, and deprecated in every variety of expression.

Thus he is represented (iii. 61 ; xvi. 1, and elsewhere) as carrying a bow and arrows, and is earnestly supplicated (xvi. 9 ff., 51 ff.) to avert his shafts from the worshipper. Many of the epithets which are applied to him in the Rig-veda occur again here, such as "brown" or "tawny" (xvi. 6), the god "with braided hair" (ibid. 10), the "fierce" (ibid. 40), the "bountiful," the "gracious" (51), etc.; while a multitude of new appellations are heaped upon him (and his attendants), such as "blue-necked," "thousand-eyed" (ibid. 7), "thousand-quivered" (13), "clad in a skin" (iii. 61 ; xvi. 51), "the dweller in the mountains" (xvi. 2, 3, 4), and others far too numerous to repeat (xvi. 17-46). The imagination of the rishi runs riot in the invention of these epithets, which are of the most heterogeneous description. Some of the characteristics here attributed to Rudra are of a disgraceful nature, as where he is styled the "lord of thieves, the robber, the cheater, the deceiver, the lord of pilferers and robbers," etc. (vv. 20, 21). Several new names are ascribed to Rudra in this Veda, as Bhava, Śarva, Paśupati, etc. etc. (vv. 18, 28). Altogether an approximation is discernible in the epithets which occur in the Satarudriya to the fierce, terrific, impure, and repulsive character of the later Mahādeva. Ambikā is mentioned for the first time in the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā (iii. 5), and is described not as the wife, but as the sister of Rudra.

In the Atharva-veda also reference is made both to the therapeutic character of Rudra and to the destructive arrows and lightnings of Bhava and Śarva (ii. 27, 6 ; vi. 93, 1 ; x. i. 23 ; xi. 2, 1, 12, etc.). Rudra is identified with Agni (vii. 87, 1); and again with Savitri (xiii. 4, 4). On the other hand Bhava and Śarva, and again Bhava and Rudra, are spoken of in the dual (viii. 2, 7 ; x. i. 23 ; xi. 2, 1 ; xi. 2, 14, 16 ; xi. 6, 9 ; xii. 4, 17); and would thus appear to have been regarded by the rishi as distinct gods. Śarva is described as an archer, Bhava as a king (vi. 93, 2); and they, as well as Rudra, are said to have poisons and consumption at their command (vi. 93, 2 ; xi. 2, 26). In A. V. xi. 2, 2, 30, the devouring birds and dogs of Rudra are alluded to (compare Vāj. Sanh. xvi. 28). In another verse Bhava is said to rule over the sky and the earth, and to fill the vast atmosphere (A. V. xi. 2, 27).<sup>314</sup>

In the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa (i. 7, 3, 8) Sarva, Bhava, Paśupati, and Rudra are said to be all names of Agni; and of these appellations Sarva is said to be in use among the people of the east, and Bhava among the western tribe of the Bāhikas. Another passage (vi. 1, 3, 7 ff.) of the same Brāhmaṇa describes the birth of a boy (kumāra, a word applied to Agni in the Rig-veda, v. 2, 1) to whom the names of Rudra, Sarva, Paśupati, Ugra, Aśani, Bhava, Mahān-deva, and Īśāna were successively given, all of them, according to the writer, representing different forms of Agni. In the somewhat different version of the same story given in the Sāṅkhāyana Brāhmaṇa (see above, pp. 286 ff.) the newly-born deity is not identified with Agni. But the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa in another passage (ix. 1, 1, 1 ff.) referred to by Professor Weber (see above, pp. 289 f. and 334) appears again clearly to make this identification. Finally, traces of the early connexion of Rudra with Agni are discoverable, as I have already remarked (p. 291), in the legend of the birth of Kārttikeya which I have quoted from the Mahābhārata.

Though, however, these deities may have at one time come to be thus identified, the distinctive epithets applied to Rudra in the Rig-veda appear sufficiently to prove that he was generally discriminated from Agni by his early worshippers. The tendency visible both in the hymns of the Veda and in the Brāhmaṇas (see above, R. V. ii. 1, 6, p. 25; A. V. vii. 87, 1, and xiii. 4, 4, pp. 277 and 281; Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, as quoted in p. 284; Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, vi. 1, 1, 5, p. 20) to identify the different deities with one another appears to have arisen from a vague conception of the unity of the divine principle by which all these several divinities were supposed to be diversely animated.

Between the texts which I have cited from the Brāhmaṇas relative to Rudra, and the earliest descriptions of the same deity which we discover in the Epic poems, a wide chasm intervenes, which, as far as I am aware, no genuine ancient materials exist (for the Upanishads are of uncertain date) for bridging over. The Rudra of the Mahā-

Eka eva Rudro 'vatasthe na dritīyo raṇe vighnaṇ pritanāsu śatrūn | sāṃsṛjīya viśvā bhuvanāni goptā pratyaṇ janān sāṃchukochāntakāle | "One Rudra has existed and no second; slaying his enemies in the conflicts of the battle: having created all worlds, a preserver, he afterwards annihilates all beings at the time of the end." Durga does not inform us whence this verse is derived, and I cannot say (see above, p. 297, note). After ascribing a martial character to Rudra in the first line, it appears to assign to him, in the second, the threefold function of universal creator, preserver, and destroyer

bhārata is not indeed very different in his general character from the god of the same name who is portrayed in the Satarudriya; but in the later literature his importance is immensely increased, his attributes are more clearly defined, and the conceptions entertained of his person are rendered more distinct by the addition of various additional features, and illustrated by numerous legends. Instead of remaining a subordinate deity, as he was in the Vedic era, Rudra has thrown Agni, Vāyu, Sūrya, Mitra, and Varuṇa completely into the shade; and although Indra still occupies a prominent place in the Epic legends, he has sunk down into a subordinate position, and is quite unable to compete in power and dignity with Rudra, who, together with Viṣṇu, now engrosses the almost exclusive worship of the Brahmanical world. Ambikā, who was subsequently identified with the spouse of Rudra, is in the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā (above, p. 267) spoken of as his sister. Umā or Parvatī, with whom he was unconnected in the Vedic period, and of whom the earliest mention, as far as I know, occurs in the Kena Upanishad, and the Taitt. Ār.,<sup>315</sup> is now his acknowledged consort.<sup>316</sup> In systematic mythology the function of destroyer is assigned to him, as that of creator is to Brahmā, and that of preserver to Viṣṇu; but he is also worshipped under the emblem of the linga as the great generative power.

Lassen asserts (Indian Antiquities, i. 783) that no mention of the linga occurs in the Epic poems. I have, however (above, p. 161), quoted a passage from the Mahābhārata in which it is dwelt upon at length, though it is difficult to say to what age this passage may be referable. Comp. also the epithet mahāśeṣa in p. 160, which points to the same idea.

“And since, standing aloft, he consumes the lives of men, and since he is fixed, and since his liṅga is perpetually fixed, he is therefore called Sthānu. . . . 7516: And when his liṅga remains constantly in a state of chastity, and people reverence it, this is agreeable to the great [god]. The constant worshipper of the liṅga, who shall worship the imago (vighraha), or the liṅga, of the great [god], enjoys great prosperity. It is the liṅga, raised up, which the rishis, gods, Gandharvas, and Apsarases worship.”

Liṅgādhyaxaḥ surādhyaxaḥ . . . vījādhyaxo vīja-karttā . . . “He whose seed is raised up, whose liṅga is raised up, who sleeps aloft, who abides in the sky.” . . . v. 1191 : “The lord of the liṅga, the lord of the suras (gods) . . . the lord of seed, the former of seed.”*

We possess no records to shew how this phallic emblem became connected with Rudra. But, as Stevenson (Journal R. A. S. viii. 330<sup>317</sup>)

<sup>317</sup> In this paper on “the Ante-Brahmanical Religion of the Hindus,” the Rev. Dr. Stevenson asserts that the “worship of Śiva, especially under the form of the Liṅga,” is one of the practices for which he considers modern Hinduism is indebted to the ante-Brahmanical religion of India, i.e. to local superstitions prevalent among the aboriginal tribes anterior to the development of the existing Brahmanical system. This opinion in regard to Śiva is grounded by Dr. Stevenson on the facts (1) that Śiva is not named in the ancient Vedic hymns; (2) that Rudra does not occupy in those hymns the high position which the later Śiva holds; (3) that various particulars in the legend of Daxa, such as the general indisposition to acknowledge Śiva's right to share in the sacrifice, and the circumstance that his rites required no Brahmanical priest (see above, p. 317, note), point to a recent introduction of Śiva's worship (comp. Mahābhārata, Vana-parva, vv. 11001 ff., cited in p. 241 of this volume); (4) that there is no connection between the Liṅga and any of the ancient Brahmanical emblems; (5) that the principal seats of the Liṅga worship are to be found in the south and north-east of India, at a distance from the original Brahmanical settlements; (6) that in the Mahratta country no Brahman officiates as priest in a Liṅga temple, while, on the contrary, in the temples of Vishnu Brahmans alone officiate. [This distinction does not, I think, exist in Northern India. In the temple of Viśveśvara, at Benares, the officiating priests, if I am not mistaken, are Brahmans. The same is the impression of Prof. Fitz-Edward Hall, with whom I have communicated on the subject.—J. M.]

and Lassen (Ind. Ant. i. 783) imagine, it is not impossible that it may have been at first an object of veneration among the aboriginal or non-Arian Indians; and that it was subsequently adopted by the Brahmans from them, and associated with the worship of Rudra.

This conjecture would acquire additional probability if we were justified in supposing that the word śiśnadeva which occurs in two passages of the Rig-veda had any reference to a worship of this sort existing among the barbarous tribes towards whom the authors of the hymns so often express hostility, as the followers of a different religion from their own. The texts in which the word in question is found have been already adduced and translated in the Second Volume of this work (p. 407 and note 65). But I shall quote them again here with the contexts, and endeavour to elucidate them further. The first passage is as follows:

R. V. vii. 21, 3 ff.—*Tram Indra sravitāṁ apas kaḥ parishṭitā Ahinā śūra pūrviḥ | tvad vācakra rathyo na dhenū rejante viśvā kṛtrīmāni bhīṣhā | 4. “3. Thou, heroic Indra, hast caused to flow the abundant waters which had been obstructed by Ahi. Before thee the cows (waters) have turned their course, like warriors in chariots. All created things tremble for fear. 4. The terrible [god], knowing all things salutary to men, has with his weapons pierced the works of these [cloud-demons]. Indra, exulting, has shattered their cities; armed with the thunderbolt he has destroyed them by his might. 5. Neither demons impel us, Indra, nor, o puissant [deity], adorations with ordinances (?). May the glorious [Indra] triumph over the hostile beings: let not those whose god is the śiśna (membrum virile) approach our sacred ceremony. 6. Thou, o Indra, hast surpassed in power. When thou runnest thy course, the worlds have not comprehended thy greatness. By thine own might thou hast slain Vṛitra. No enemy hath attained the end of thee in battle. 7. The earlier gods have imparted (?) to thee powers to [augment] thy divine glory and energy. Indra having conquered, dispenses wealth. Let men invoke Indra to bestow food. 8. Indra, the bard hath invoked for protection thee, the lord of great prosperity. O thou who bringest a hundred succours, thou hast been a defence to us, the protector of the warrior who serves thee."

He, the noble and potent hero, has shattered for us the cities of the enemy (or of Nahush) in the conflict with the destroyers (Dasyus)."<sup>318</sup>

The following is Sāyaṇa's explanation of the word śiśnadeva in the first of the preceding passages, R. V. vii. 21, 5, and repeated briefly in his note on the second passage: Śiśna-devāḥ | śiśnena dīvyanti krīḍanti iti śiśna-devāḥ | abrahmacharyyāḥ ity arthaḥ | tathā cha Yāskaḥ | . . . "śiśna-devā abrahmacharyyāḥ" | . . . "Śiśnadevāḥ are those who sport with the śiśna (membrum virile), i.e. unchaste men; as Yāska says, 'Śiśnadevāḥ means the unchaste.'Schwanz-götter.

It does not appear to me that Sāyaṇa's interpretation has much to recommend it. There are some other words in the Veda in which the word deva forms the last member of the compound, as anṛita-deva (vii. 104, 14) and mūra-deva (vii. 104, 24). Sāyaṇa explains mūra-devāḥ as = māraṇa-krīḍāḥ, "those who make a sport of killing;" and he therefore takes deva there in the same sense as he does in śiśna-deva. But in the other word, anṛita-deva, he takes deva in the usual sense of "god," and interprets it as "he whose gods are false" (anṛitā asatya-bhūtā devā yasya tādrīṣaḥ). In the same way he understands anti-devam in R. V. i. 180, 7, as meaning "near the gods." And though in Boethlingk and Roth's Dictionary the word anṛita-deva is explained as signifying a "false player," this interpretation is afterwards withdrawn (in favour of that which Sāyaṇa gives of this word) at the close of the article on the word deva. Nor does the sense assigned by Sāyaṇa to śiśna-deva appear to be in itself a very probable one.

For the epithet "lascivious" would not necessarily be a term of reproach in the mouth of an Indian poet of the Vedic age, when, though the institution of marriage was recognized and honoured, no great amount of reprobation could have been attached to unchastity in the case of men (compare R. V. i. 167, 4; ix. 112, 4, and x. 86, 16, 17). On the other hand, if the word śiśna-deva is to be understood of human beings, and if it could be taken as describing any deviation from the contemporaneous Arian worship, it would find many parallels in the Rig-veda, as may be seen by a comparison of the words akarmān, adevayū, anriśh, anindra, anya-vrata, apavrata, avrata, abrahman, ayajean | "without ceremonies, no worshippers of the gods, without hymns, without Indra, following other rites, averse to rites, without rites, without priests, or prayers, offering no sacrifices," in the passages quoted in the Second Vol. of this work, pp. 374, 375, and 387-391.

It is, however, objected that śiśna cannot be taken as equivalent to linga, which means a sign, the phallus, and is therefore emblematic, while the śiśna denotes not an image, but the male organ itself. Śiśna has also the sense of "tail," as in R. V. i. 105, 8, pointed out to me by Professor Aufrecht, where the words mūśho na śiśnū vyadanti mā ādhyah mean "cares worry me, like mice gnawing their tails." The word śiśnadevāḥ, if understood of demons, may therefore mean, as Roth suggests, "tailed (or priapic) demons," and not "worshippers of the śiśna." The same difficulty which we encounter in fixing the meaning of the word dasyu, viz. whether it is to be understood of men or demons (see the Second Vol. of this work, pp. 380 ff; 404 ff.) recurs here. In the first of the passages quoted above (vii. 21, 5) it appears, so long as we are ignorant of the real sense of śiśna-deva, that it might be understood either of men or demons, either of whom would have been unwelcome visitors at an Arian ceremonial. Perhaps, as the word yātavaḥ (demons) precedes, it is most likely that the latter are intended: and the same remark may be held to apply to the second passage (x. 99, 3).

However interesting, therefore, it would be to find a proof of the existence of a phallic worship among the aboriginal tribes contemporary with the Vedic rishis, it must be confessed that the word śiśnadeva does not supply this evidence.

In a passage (in the Preface to the Tenth Vol. of his Rāmāyaṇa, p. ix.) which I have adduced in the Second Part of this work (pp. 436 f.),

Signor Gorresio expresses the opinion that the Southern race, whom he supposes to be symbolized under the appellation of Rākshasas, were specially addicted to the worship of "Rudra, or a terrible" and, as he believes, "a Hamitic deity." In note 35 (p. 291 of the same volume) on the destruction of Daxa's sacrifice, he says: "It appears to me that in this fact the struggle of the ancient religions of India is represented under a mythical veil. Siva (a deity, as I believe, of the Cushite or Hamitic tribes which preceded on the soil of India the Arian or Indo-Sanskrit races) wished to have a part in the worship of the conquerors, and in their sacrifices, from which he was excluded; and by disturbing their rites, and by a display of violence at their sacrifices, he succeeded in being admitted to participate in them." Signor Gorresio, however, offers very little proof of this assertion in regard to the worship of Siva being specially prevalent among the savage tribes of the South. In note 116, p. 370, of his Ninth Vol., indeed, he remarks as follows on a passage (Rāmāyaṇa vi. 19, 50 f.) where it is said that Indrajit, son of Rāvana, had a golden serpent for his banner: "The serpent was the special symbol in the worship of the Hamite races, and here therefore Indrajit, the black Rākṣasa, the Hamite, sets it up as his banner. Thus in the seventy-eighth chapter of the Sundara Kāṇḍa it is said that Indrajit was in the habit of sacrificing especially to Siva, the Hamitic deity, who possesses all the attributes of the Hamitic religion, and who entered into the Indo-Sanskrit Olympus by one of those religious syncretisms of which traces are so frequently to be found in the ancient systems of worship."

The passage of the Sundara Kāṇḍa to which Gorresio refers, occurs, in the Calcutta edition, in the seventh section of the Yuddha Kāṇḍa, vv. 18 f., as follows:

Tishṭha tvaṁ kim mahārāja śrameṇa tara vānarān | ayam eko mahārāja Indrajit pramathishyati | anena cha mahārāja Māheśvaram anuttamam | iṣṭvā yajñāṁ varo labdho loke parama-durlabhaḥ | "Stay, great king, what need is there of thy exertions? This one Indrajit will destroy the monkeys. For by him a boon, hard to be gotten, was obtained after he had offered the unequalled sacrifice to Mahādeva."

This passage is not sufficient to prove that Mahādeva was in a special degree the god of the savages of the South. We have already seen (pp. 243 ff.) by the cases of Arjuna, Jayadratha, Paraśurāma, and above all, of Jarāsandha, as recorded in the Mahābhārata, that the worship of Mahādeva (frequently for the purpose of obtaining some boon) was practised by the warriors of Northern India, just as it is here said to have been by Indrajit. Further, it is not Śiva alone whom the Rāxasas worshipped for their own purposes. It appears from the passage of the Rāmāyaṇa (cited above in p. 140) that Rāvana had obtained the gift of invincibility from Brahmā.

ripavāś cha parājitāḥ | surāśsurair abadhyatvaṁ dattam asmai Svayambhuvā* | By this contemplative (Rāxasa) Brahmā had been worshipped with austerities, and he had obtained weapons, and conquered his enemies. [The privilege] had been bestowed on him by Svayambhū that he should be indestructible by gods or Asuras."

In verse 26 he is described as "reverent to the aged, and an observer of the Vedas" (vṛiddha-sevī śruti-dharaḥ). Rāvana himself is represented in the Rāmāyaṇa as an observer of the Vedic ritual. Thus in Book vi. 93, 58 (Calc. ed.=vi. 72, 62 ff. of Gorr.) his minister, Supārśva (Avindhya<sup>319</sup> in Gorr.), who is described as "virtuous and pure," is introduced as saying to him: Veda-vidyā-vrata-snātas sva-karmāniratas tathā | striyāḥ kasmād badhaṁ vīra manyase Rāxaseśvara | "Why dost thou, heroic Rāvana, lord of the Rāxasas, who art initiated in the knowledge and practices of the Veda, and devoted to thy duty, meditate the slaughter of a woman?" And Vibhīṣaṇa, in his eulogy on his brother after his death, says (vi. 111, 24, Calc. ed.=vi. 93, 30 of Gorr.): Eśho hitāgnīś<sup>320</sup> cha mahātapās cha vedānta-gaḥ karmasu chāgrya-sūrah | "He had placed the sacrificial fire, was very austere, had read to the end of the Veda, and was eminently heroic in action."<sup>321</sup>

Again, it is related in the hundred and thirteenth section (Calc. ed.), that Rāvana was buried with the usual Brahmanical ceremonies, though the commentator says that the Brahmans who were concerned in them were Rāxasa-brahmans (Rāxasa-dvijāḥ).

lower firewood (arani), and the other pestle, in their proper places, they departed. The Rāxasas having then slain a victim to their prince in the manner prescribed in the Sāstras, and enjoined by great rishis, cast [into the fire] the coverlet of the king saturated with ghee. They then, Vibhishana included, with afflicted hearts, adorned Rāvana with perfumes and garlands, and with various vestments, and besprinkled him with fried grain. Vibhishana having bathed, and having, with his clothes wet, scattered in proper form tila seeds mixed with darbha grass, and moistened with water, applied the fire [to the pile].”<sup>327</sup>

Gorresio remarks (note 94, p. 310, vol. x) that the funeral rites of the Aryan Brahmans are here introduced as practised among the Rāxasas, a race of different origin and worship, in the same way as Homer represents Grecian ceremonies as having been celebrated in Troy.

Nor does it appear that in the rites described in the following passage (of Gorresio's edition) which are said to have been performed by Indra-jit, the son of Rāvana, there is anything, except the “Rāxasa texts,” contrary to Brahmanical usages. As, however, the commentator (in the Calc. ed) in his note on another passage, represents the worship at the Nikumbhilā as being offered to Kālī, and as the description is of some interest, I will quote it at length :<sup>328</sup>

<sup>327</sup> On this whole passage the commentator remarks : “Tatyajus tam mahābhāgam pañcha-bhūtāni Rāvanam | sarira-dhātavo hy asya mānsa-teag-rudhirāsu cha | brahmāstra-nirdagdhasya (sic) na cha bhasmūpy adriṣyata” iti Mahābhāratoktatvena kasya Vālmīkinā śmaśānānagana-pūrvaka-dāha uktaḥ iti chenna | tasya Rōma-vāṇa-varṇana-vishaye 'tyukty-alanākāra-paratvād iti vadati | “Since it is said in the Mahābhārata (Rāmopākhyāna, in Vana-parva 16529 f., where the readings differ somewhat from those here given) that ‘the five elements and the constituents of his body, flesh, skin, blood, and breath, forsook the great Rāvana, when he was burnt up by the divine weapon (brahmāstra), and not even any ashes were seen;’—who is it that is here alleged by Vālmīki to have been brought to the cemetery and then burnt? If any one raises this objection, I deny that there is any difficulty, as in the description of Rāma's arrow the Mahābhārata makes use of ornament and exaggeration.”

<sup>328</sup> The Calcutta edition gives the first verse and the first half of the second nearly as they stand in Gorresio's edition, and the second half of the second, with its sequel, as follows : Brahma-datta-varo vīro Rāvanāḥ krodha-mūrchhitāḥ | adriṣyo nisītān vāṇān mumochūṣāni-sannibhān | “The son of Rāvana, to whom a boon had been given by Brahmā, mad with rage, discharged sharp arrows, piercing as lightnings.” No mention is made of the sacrifice in the Calcutta text. In Rāmāyaṇa, book v. sect. 24 (Calc. ed.), it is related that the female Rāxasas had been threatening Sita after her capture by Rāvana, because she would not yield to his desires, and one of

“But Indrajit, being conquered in the conflict by the miracle-working son of Bāli, became inflamed with terrific anger. This wicked son of Rāvaṇa, fierce in battle, having become invisible, made an oblation to Pāvaka (Fire) in due form, on the sacrificial ground. When he was there throwing his oblation into the fire, wearing a red turban, gar-

them, S'ūrpanakhā, acceding to a proposal to eat her, says (v. 46 ff.): Surā chāñyātām xipraṁ sarva-śoka-vināśinī | māmusham māmśam āspadya nrityāmo 'tha nikumbhilām | “And let wine be quickly brought, which annihilates all griefs. Enjoying human flesh, let us dance at the Nikumbhilā.” The comment on this passage states that the Nikumbhilā was an image of Bhadrakālī on the west side of Laṅkā (Nikumbhilā nāma Laṅkāyāḥ pāścīma-bhāga-varttinī Bhadrakālī | tāṁ nrityāmaḥ tat-saṁnipaṇ gateḥ nrityāmaḥ). In the Uttara Kāṇḍa (sect. 30, v. 2) we are told that Rāvaṇa, with his attendants, entered “the Nikumbhilā, a grove in Laṅkā” (tato nikumbhilā nāma Laṅkopavamaṁ uttamam). The commentator says it was “a wood situated at the western gate of Laṅkā for the performance of rites” (Laṅkā-pāścīma-dvāra-deśa-vartti-karma-siddhi-hetu-bhūtaṁ-kāṇanam | ). His son Indrajit, with the aid of the Brahman Uśanas, had been celebrating there the seven sacrifices, the agnishōma, āśvamedha, rājasūya, gomedha (cow-sacrifice), the Vaiṣṇava ceremonial, etc. When he had performed the Māheśvara offering, he obtained boons from Mahādeva, who appeared to him. This is the ceremony alluded to above, in p. 349. But he had also been performing the Vaiṣṇava rite.

ments, and garland, the reverent Rāxasas brought thither*sharp-edged weapons, logs of wood, and myrobalan, blood-red vestments, and a ladle of black iron. Having heaped the fire all over with arrows, darts, and iron maces, and having drawn blood from the throat of a live black goat, he offered it as an oblation, being eager for battle. At the same time there appeared from the brightly-burning and smokeless fire omens which portended victory. Pāvaka himself rising with his flame sweeping round to the right, and luminous as refined gold, received the oblation. Then from the midst of the fire there arose a magnificent golden chariot, drawn by four lucky horses with golden head-ornaments. The glorious [Indrajit], lustrous as burning fire, becoming invisible, having satiated the sacrificial fire, the Daityas, Dānavas, and Rāxasas, having caused a benediction (svasti) to be pronounced, and been blessed by the Brahmans, ascended the beautiful chariot, drawn by self-directed horses, and furnished with various weapons. . . . . 50. A golden serpent, bright as the rising sun, and adorned with lapis lazuli, formed the banner of Indrajit. Having made an oblation to Fire with Rāxasa texts, he then spake," etc.

Chaityaṁ nikumbhilām adya prāpya homaṁ karishyati | Hutaṁ upayāto hi devair api sa-vāsavaih | durādharsho bhavaty esha saṅgrāme Rāvanātmajah | . . . . 16. Sa-sainyās tatra gacchāmo yāvat tanna samāpyate | . . . . 23. Samāpta-karmā hi sa Rāxasarshabho bhavaty adriśyaḥ samare surāsuraih | yuyutsatā tena samāpta-karmanā bhavet surāṇām api saṁśayo mahān | "Having to-day resorted to the sacrificial ground, he will offer an oblation (homa). When he approaches after making this offering, this son of Rāvaṇa is invincible by gods and Vāsavas. . . . 16. Let us go thither with our hosts before that ceremony is completed. . . . 23. For when he has accomplished his rite,<sup>329</sup> that prince of the Rāxasas becomes invisible by either gods or Asuras in battle; and even the gods would hesitate to encounter him if he desired to fight."

*prāptaṁ kāmagaś cha turāṅgamāḥ | sa esha saha sainyena prāptaḥ kila
nikumbhīlām | yady uttiśthet kṛitam karma hatān sarvāṁś cha vidhī naḥ | nikumbhīlām asamprāptam akritāgṇīm cha yo ripuḥ | tvām ātatāyinaṁ hanyāt Indrasātro sa te badhaḥ |* "This hero has obtained through austerity, and by the gift of Sṛayambhū, a weapon called brahma-sīras, and horses that go according to his will. He with his army has reached the sacrificial ground. If he rises after completing his ceremony you may regard us all as destroyed. But if any foe slays thee, thou cruel tyrant (Indrajit), before thou hast reached that ground,<sup>330</sup> and kindled the fire, this, o enemy of Indra, is the manner of thy

It is related in the following section (86, 14 f., Calc. ed.=65, 12 Gorr.) that they arrived before his rite had been completed :

*Śvam anīkaṁ viśannaṁ tu drisṭvā śatrubhir arditam | udatiśṭhata
durdharśaḥ sa karmany ananusthite | vṛirāndhakārād nirgamyā jāta-krodhaḥ sa Rāvaṇiḥ | ityadi |* "Hearing that his army was harassed by their enemies, and dispirited, the irresistible (Rāxasa) arose while his ceremony was unaccomplished. Issuing forth from the gloom of the tree, the son of Rāvaṇa, incensed, mounted his chariot," etc.

Again, in a passage of the Sundara Kāṇḍa, or Fifth Book, vv. 12 ff. (only found in Gorresio's, not in the Calc. ed.), which forms the sequel to the one given above, p. 310, Mahādeva is represented as receiving Vibhishana with favour, after he had deserted his brother Rāvaṇa. Now if the author of the poem had intended to represent Śiva as an especial object of adoration to the Rāxasas, he might have been expected to have described this deity as repaying their worship with an especial favour and affection ; but it is inconsistent with this that he should represent Śiva as receiving favourably a deserter from the Rāxasa camp.

cinct of the great Kālī—viz., the root of the nyagrodha tree so called." This tree is mentioned in vi. 87, 1 ff., Calc. ed. (=vi. 66, 2, Gorr. ed.): . . . *praviśya tu

There is a section (the forty-first) of the Yudha Kāṇḍa, or Sixth Book (which, however, is to be found only in Gorresio's ed.), wherein Rāvaṇa defies Viṣṇu at great length. But I do not consider this as any proof that the poet intended to attribute to the speaker any especial hostility to Viṣṇu's worship (particularly as Indra, Śiva, and Brahmā are also slightly spoken of), but rather as a demonstration called forth by the poetical necessities of the argument. If the poet represented Rāma as the incarnation of Viṣṇu, it was of course necessary to make the arrogant Rāvaṇa defy him. The fact is, that the traits ascribed to the Rākṣasas in the Rāmāyaṇa must be regarded as poetical far more than historical. The poet assigns to his personages such characteristics as he considered at the moment to be most conducive to the interest, and effective with a view to the action, of his poem. These characteristics are sometimes absolutely contradictory, as when Rāvaṇa is described both as an observer of the Vedas and at the same time as a persecutor of Brahmans and polluter of their sacrifices. I do not therefore see that the Rāmāyaṇa supplies any grounds for regarding the non-Arian tribes of Southern India as being especially addicted to the worship of Śiva.<sup>331</sup>

We have already seen (p. 267) that in the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā (3, 57) Ambikā, who at a later period is identified with the wife of Rudra, is declared to be his sister.

The earliest work, as far as I am aware, in which the name of Umā occurs, is the Talavakāra or Kena Upanishad. In the third section of that Treatise (see Dr. Roer's translation in the Bibliotheca Indica, vol. xv. p. 83 ff.) it is mentioned that on one occasion Brahma gained a victory for the gods. As, however, they were disposed to ascribe the credit of their success to themselves, Brahma appeared for the purpose

<sup>331</sup> It is also related in the Uttara Kāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa (sections 4-8, of which I shall give the substance in the Appendix) that a Rākṣasa named Sukeśa had formerly received a boon from Mahādeva and Pārvatī, and that his three sons, the lords of Āṇḍā, had made an attack upon the gods, but had been driven back and defeated by Viṣṇu, and compelled to take refuge in Pātāla. But neither does this, nor even the Linga-worship attributed to Rāvaṇa in the Uttara Kāṇḍa 36, 42 f., suffice to prove any special adoration of Śiva among the southern races.

of disabusing them of their mistake. The gods did not know him and commissioned first Agni, and then Vāyu, to ascertain who this object of veneration was. When, in answer to Brahma's enquiry, these two gods represented themselves, the one as having the power to burn, and the other as able to blow away, anything whatever, he desired them to burn and to blow away, respectively; a blade of grass; but they were unable to do this, and returned without ascertaining who he was. Indra was then commissioned (Kena Up. iii. 11, 12; and iv. 1, 2): Atha Indram abruvan "Maghavann etad vijānīhi kim etad yajam" iti ["tathā" iti tad abhyadravat tasmāt tirodadhe | 12. Sa tasminn evākāse striyam ājagūma bahu śobhamānām Umām Haimavatīm | tām hovācha kim etad yajam iti | iv. 1. Sā Brahmeti hovācha Brahmano vā etad-vijaye mahiyadhvan iti | tato haiva vidānchakāra Brahmeti | "They then said to Indra, 'Maghavan, ascertain what this object of adoration is.' He replied, 'So be it;' and approached that being, who vanished from him. In that sky he came to a woman who was very resplendent, Umā Haimavatī. To her he said, 'What is this object of adoration?' She said, 'It is Brahma. In this victory of Brahma, ye became exalted.' By this he knew Brahma." <sup>332</sup>

In his remarks <sup>333</sup> on this passage of the Kena Upanishad (Ind. Stud. ii. 186 ff.) Weber supplies an interesting and ingenious contribution to the mythological history of Umā. He says: "The representation in sections 3 and 4 indicates that the Kena Upanishad was produced at a time when,—in place of the three principal gods, Agni, Vāyu, and

Sūrya,<sup>334</sup> who had come to be regarded as the representatives of the divine principle on earth, in the atmosphere, and in heaven,—Agni, Vāyu, and Indra were regarded as such. These are properly only two, since Indra is essentially identical with Vāyu. Though I have found numerous examples of the first triad, especially in the two Yajur-vedas, I have noticed only one other of the second triad, which is properly only a duad, viz. in the Rik-text of the Purusha Sukta (R. V. x. 99, 13). Nor am I able to give a satisfactory explanation of it. On the other hand, the totality of the divine was already comprehended in Brahma (neuter), and it is the object of the legend here to make clear and to enforce the supremacy of Brahma over all temporary divine manifestations, and even over the triad of such.

“But how shall we explain the position of Umā Haimavatī, who comes forward as mediatrix between the eternal Brahmā and the gods? According to Sankara, she is Vidyā (knowledge) who appears Umā-rupiṇī (in the form of Umā) to Indra. The same explanation is found in Sāyana, who (on Taitt. Ār. x. 1, 150) when interpreting the word soma, cites this passage, and remarks: Himavat-putryā Gauryyā brahma-vidyābhīmāni-rūpatvād Gauri-vāchaka Umā-sabho brahma-vidyām upalaxayati | ata eva Talavakāropanishadi brahma-vidyā-mūrtti-prastāve brahma-vidyā-mūrttiḥ paṭhyate “bahu śobhamānām Umām Haimavatīm tāṁ hovācha” iti | tad-vishayaḥ tayā Umayā saha varttamānavāt Somaḥ | “Since Gaurī, the daughter of Himavat, is the impersonation of divine knowledge, the word Umā, which denotes Gaurī, indicates divine knowledge. Hence in the Talavakāra Upanishad, in the passage on the impersonation of divine knowledge, the impersonation of divine knowledge is introduced in these words: ‘He said to the very resplendent Umā Haimavatī.’ Soma is he who has reference to her from his existing together with her. And again in the same commentary on Anuvāka 38, it is said: Umā brahma-vidyā tayā saha varttamāna Soma paramātman | ‘Umā is divine knowledge: thou who existest with her, o Soma, supreme spirit,’ etc. Further in the same commentary on Anuvāka 18, in explanation of the term Ambikā-pataye, we have the words: Ambikā jagannmātā Pārvatī tasyāḥ bharttre | ‘Ambikā is Pārvatī, the mother of the world,—to her husband,’ etc.; and the word Umāpataye (which stands in the Draviḍa, but not in the Āndhra, text of the Taitt. Ār.) is thus interpreted: Tasyā eva brahma-vidyātmako deha Umā-sābdenochyate tasyāḥ svāmīne | 'Her (Ambikā's) body representing divine knowledge is designated by the word Umā—to her (Umā's) husband,' etc. This last passage is the only one in the circle of the Vedic writings in which,—with the exception of that in the Kena Upanishad,—I have as yet directly met with the name Umā; for the expression Umā-sahāya in the Kaivalya Upanishad (see above, p. 304) no longer belongs to the Vedic period; and further, though the Commentaries in other places also<sup>335</sup> explain soma by Umayā sahita, 'accompanied by Umā' (as Sāyaṇa has done in the passage above cited), such an interpretation is just as groundless as in the texts commented on by Sāyaṇa, where the word signifies simply the Soma-libation. From the considerations just stated, therefore (i.e. partly from the unanimity of the Commentaries, and partly from the very position which Umā here assumes in the Kena Upanishad), the signification of this word might seem to be fixed with tolerable certainty as denoting brahma-vidyā, 'divine knowledge,' and Umā might appear to be directly related to Sarasvatī, the divine word, and we might even be tempted to bring her into etymological connection with the sacred word om. There are, however, some additional points which seem to place the original signification of Umā in quite a different light. First of all, why is she called Haimavatī? What has she to do with Himavat? Is it that the brahma-vidyā (divine knowledge) came originally from the Himavat to the Arians dwelling in Madhyadeśa (the central region of Hindustan)? We have learnt from the Kaushītakī Brāhmaṇa (Ind. Stud. i. 153) that the north of India was distinguished by greater purity of speech, and that students travelled thither to learn the language (vācāṃ śixitum) and on their return thence enjoyed great consideration and authority. Now it would have been quite natural if this state of things had not been confined to language, but had become extended to speculation also, and if the knowledge of the one, eternal Brahma, had been sooner attained in the peaceful vallies of the Himālaya, than was possible for men living in Madhyadeśa, where their minds were more occupied by the practical concerns of life. Such a view of Umā Haimavatī appears to me, however, to be very hazardous. For,—not to say that in our explanations of the ancient Indian deities we act wisely when we attach greater importance to the physical than to the speculative element,—we are by no means certain that Umā actually does signify divine knowledge (brahma-vidyā); and moreover, her subsequent position as Rudra's wife (in the Taitt. Ār.) would thus be quite inexplicable. Now there is among the epithets of this latter goddess a similar one, viz. Pārvatī, which would lead us in interpreting the word Haimavati, to place the emphasis not upon the Himavat, but upon the mountain (parvata): and with this I might connect the epithets of Rudra which we have learnt from the Satarudriya (see above, p. 268), Giriśa, Giriśanta, Giriśaya, Giritra, in which we recognize the germ of the conception of Śiva's dwelling on Kailāsa. He is the tempest, which rages in the mountains, and his wife is therefore properly called Pārvatī, Haimavati, 'the mountaineer,' 'the daughter of Himavat.' At the same time it is not clear what we have to understand by his wife;<sup>336</sup> and further she is, perhaps, originally not his wife, but his sister, for Umā and Ambikā are at a later period evidently identical, and Ambikā is Rudra's sister (Ind. Stud. i. 183). Besides, this identification of Umā with Ambikā leads us to a new etymology of the former. For as Ambikā, 'mother,' appears to be merely an euphemistic and flattering epithet, employed to propitiate the cruel goddess (see Mahādhara on Vaj. S. 3, 5,—just as Rudra was called Śiva), in the same way it appears that we must derive Umā from the root u, av, 'to protect.' It is true that a final vowel before ma commonly takes guṇa, or is lengthened, but the words sīma and hīma shew that this is not necessary, and the name of Rumā is perhaps (unless we derive it from ram) a perfectly analogous formation. It certainly remains a mystery how we are to conceive the cruel wife of Rudra coming forward here in the Kena Upanishad as the mediatrix between the supreme Brahma and Indra, for on that supposition this Upanishad would have to be referred to a period when her husband, Rudra, was regarded as the highest god, the Īśvara, and thus also as Brahma; i.e. it would belong to the period of some Śaiva sect. But since this remains questionable and improbable, we must first of all hold to the view that the conception entertained by the commentators of Umā as representing 'divine knowledge' rests solely upon this passage of the Kena Upanishad, unless indeed the original identity of Umā with Sarasvatī, which in the last note was regarded as possible, is here again visible.

"I consider the present opportunity a favourable one for speaking of some other names of Śiva's spouse. As in Śiva, first of all two gods, Agni and Rudra, are combined, so too his wife is to be regarded as a compound of several divine forms,<sup>337</sup> and this becomes quite evident if we look over the mass of her epithets. While one set of these, as Umā, Ambikā, Pārvatī, Haimavatī, belong to the wife of Rudra, others, as Kālī, Karālī (see Ind. Stud. i. 287) carry us back to the wife of Agni, while Gaurī and others perhaps refer to Nirṛiti, the goddess of all evil.

"The Tenth Book of the Taittirīya Aranyaka, in which she is several times invoked under different names, is particularly important for a knowledge of her character. The principal passage in which these invocations occur has been already noticed above (Ind. Stud. i. pp. 75 and 228<sup>338</sup>). It is, like the prayers which precede it, an imitation of

<sup>337</sup> "The most remarkable instance of this is to be found in Mahābhārata iv. 178 ff., in the hymn of Yudhishtira to Durgā, where he calls her Yasodā, Kṛishnā, 'born in the cowherd family of Nanda,' 'sister of Vāsudeva,' 'enemy of Kansa,' and 'having the same features as Sankarshana,' etc. etc. However late the date of this hymn may be, it is still in the highest degree remarkable."

the Gāyatrī, and runs thus: Kātyāyanāya vidmahe Kanyākumārī<sup>339</sup> dhīmahi | tan no Durgīḥ prachodayāt | “We think on Kātyāyana (nī ?) and meditate on Kanyākumārī; may Durgi advance us.”

. . . Now it is certainly difficult grammatically to find in this text the sense which Sāyaṇa puts into it,<sup>340</sup> and which must have been traditionally connected with it, as that sense is the basis of the modification of the passage as found in the Atharva collection of Upanishads. All the other gods who are invoked are male—viz., Rudra, Mahādeva, Danti, Nandi, Śaṇmukha, Garuḍa, Brahman, Viṣṇu, Nārasinha, Aditya, Agni; and it must therefore surprise us if we are to regard the twelfth deity as feminine, especially as the form is masculine. On the other hand, the sense of the words seems to compel us to adopt the traditional explanation. . . . Moreover, Kātyāyanī, Kanyākumārī, and Durgā, are already well known to us as names of Śiva’s consort: and, indeed, they all appear to carry us back to the flame of fire. It is true that as regards Kātyāyani this is somewhat difficult; though when we consider the great importance of the Kātya family in reference to the sacrificial system of the Brahmans, it does not seem very improbable that a particular kind of fire, which perhaps was introduced by one of

dhīmahi tan no Durgīḥ prachodayāt, are, in the Upanishad as it is given in the Atharva collection, changed into Kātyāyanāyai vidmahe Kanyākumārīṃ dhīmahi tan no Durgā prachodayāt | ‘This agrees with the sense which Sāyaṇa, in his interpretation, puts on the words.’ In the passage of the Linga Purāṇa ii. 48, of which the commencement is given in the ‘Third Vol. of this work, p. 161, this invocation of Durgā occurs as follows in verse 26: Kātyāyanāyai vidmahe Kanyākumārīyai dhīmahi tan no Durgā prachodayāt |

the Kātyas, was called after him, and that this name was then associated with Kālī, Karālī, and Durgā, which are originally mere appellations of fire. Kanyākumārī, or 'the maidenly,' is a very fitting epithet of the holy, pure, sacrificial flame; and even at the time of the Periplus, i.e. of Pliny, we find her worship extended to the southernmost point of India, to the Cape which was then, as now, called after her Cape Comorin: but does it not appear that she was then no longer worshipped as the sacrificial flame, but as the wife of Śiva? The hymn to Agni in the second anuvāka of the Taitt. Ār. (Andhra recension) seems pretty decisive in favour of our connecting Durgā with the sacrificial fire. "It is there said<sup>341</sup> in the second verse: Tām agnivarṇāṁ tapasā jvalantīm vairochanīm karma-phaleshu juṣṭām | Durgāṁ devīm śuraṇam aham prapadye sutarasi tarase namaḥ | ("I seek as my refuge the goddess Durgā, who is of the colour of fire, burning with austerity (or heat), daughter of the sun (or of fire), who delights to [bestow?] the rewards of rites: adoration be to thy energy, o impetuous [goddess]"). The five following verses repeat (as does also the Durgā-stava in the Parīśiṣṭa) the same thought, which is also expressed in R. V. i. 99,<sup>342</sup> that Agni would help the suppliant over all durga and durita (difficulties and evils). Verse second could certainly be understood as if the worshipper turned to the personified Durgatī (Evil) herself, and sought her protection, so that thus Durgā would have arisen out of Nirṛitī. But it appears to me better to understand the passage of the violent flame of the fire, which, like the fire itself, delivers, atones, and frees from all durga and durita, is a durgā, a protecting fortress, against them; so that this name would belong to the same class as Ambikā, Śiva, Umā. If at a later period Durgā decidedly appears to have taken the place of the evil goddess Nirṛitī, this is no proof that the case was so from the beginning, but only shews that the original signification had been lost; which is in so far quite natural, as the consort of Śiva bore a terrific character both from her connection with Rudra and also with Agni (compare Karālī).

Aranyaka x. is Varadā, in anuv. 34 (=Drāv. 26) and 36 (=Drāv. 30). It is true that there it appears rather to be the name of Sarasvatī, not of Durgā, when it is said : Āyātu varadā devī azaram brahma-sammitam | gāyatrīm chhandasām mātā idam (?) brahma jushasva me | . . . sarva-varṇe mahādevī sandhyā-vidye Sarasvatī |<sup>343</sup> But the words in anuv. 36 are not so clear : Uttame śikhare jātā bhūmyām parvata-mūrdhani | brāhmaṇebhyo 'bhyanuñjātā gachha devī yathāsukham | stuto (=stutā u) mayā varadā veda-mātā prachodayanti pavane dvijātā,<sup>344</sup> etc.; where especially the first strophe reminds us of Pārvatī and Haimavatī, and one does not rightly comprehend how Sarasvatī obtains such an epithet (unless we are to understand the waters streaming from the hills, since Sarasvatī is, as is well known, at once a river goddess and the goddess of speech). In the same way the names Mahādevī and Sandhyāvidyā (see Wilson under Sandhyā) belong at a later period exclusively to the consort of Śiva. The other names, however, sarva-varṇā, chhandasām mātā, veda-mātā, and finally Sarasvatī itself conduct us to Sarasvatī; and so does also the liturgical usage, and the sense itself of anuvākas 34-36. Thus there only remains to us the possibility of assuming here a blending (and so a reminiscence of the possible original identity) of both goddesses; as we may perhaps also assume in the case of Umā Haimavatī in the Kena Upanishad, agreeably to the conjecture intimated above, p. 360, note 336."

Two of the names alluded to in the above extract, which were afterwards applied to the consort of Śiva, viz. Kālī and Karālī, occur in an important passage of another of the Upanishads (the Muṇḍaka i. 2, 4), but they are there appellations of two of the different tongues of fire : Kālī Karālī cha Manojavā cha Sulohitā yā cha Sudhāmnavarṇā | Sphulinginī Viśvarūpī cha devī lelāyamānā iti sapta jihvāḥ | which is thus translated by Dr. Roer (Bibl. Ind. xv. 153): "The seven flickering tongues [of the fire] are—Kālī (the black one),

<sup>344</sup> The sense is "Born on the highest peak, on the earth, on the summit of the mountain, dismissed from the Brahmans, go, goddess, wherever thou wilt. Praised by me, the boon-bestowing goddess, the mother of the Veda, twice born in the air, stimulating us," etc.

Karālī (the terrific one), Manojavā (swift as the mind), Sulōhitā (the very red one), Sudhūmravarnā (of purple colour), Sphulinginī (emitting sparks), and the Viśvarūpī (all-shaped) goddess." The words "of the fire" are not in the original. The commentator, however, briefly remarks : Kālī Karālī Manojavā cha Sulohitā cha yā cha Sudhūmra-varnā Sphulinginī Viśvarūpī cha devī lelāyamānā dahanasya jīhvāḥ | Agner havir-āhuti-grasanārthā etāḥ sapta jīhvāḥ | "Kālī, Karālī, Manojavā, Sulohitā, Sudhūmravarnā, Sphulinginī, and the goddess Viśvarūpī, are the seven flickering tongues of fire. These are the seven tongues which Agni has for devouring oblations of butter."

On this passage Weber remarks (Ind. Stud. i, 286 f.): "The first two of these names were at a later period personified, and came to represent Durgā (the consort of Siva, who was developed out of Agni), who (Durgā), as is well known, became the object of a bloody sacrificial-worship under the names Kālī (the dark, black), Karālā, Karālavadanā, Kārālānanā, Karālamukhī. It is evident that a considerable time was required for the sense of the word to become developed from that of the 'dark, terrific, tongue of fire' to that of a goddess Kālī, Karālā, worshipped with bloody sacrifices: and since we find the latter in the drama of 'Mālatī-Mādhava,' by Bhavabhūti, who is assigned by Wilson to the eighth century, the Muṇḍaka Upanishad must be considerably older; unless, indeed, the ancient signification of these names maintained itself at a later period alongside of the popular one. The worship of Durgā, Umā, and Pārvatī, may be shewn in its beginnings, if not from this passage, at all events from the Upanishads of the Yajus, see Ind. Stud. i. p. 78." In a note Weber adds: "The third name (Manojavā) reminds us of Manojavas, the appellation of Yama, the god of death, in the Vāj. S. 5, 11. Does it at a later period denote his wife? for Yama too, like Siva, is one stage of Agni, the older, certainly, while Siva is the more recent."

In the passages quoted from the Bhāgavata and Viṣṇu Purāṇas in section vi. (pp. 317, 324), the spouse of Mahādeva is said to have been originally the daughter of Daxa, and to have become the daughter of Himavat only when she was born the second time after her voluntary death at Daxa's sacrifice. The following passage of the Rāmāyaṇa says nothing of this double birth and parentage:

Rāmāyaṇa i. 36, 13 ff. (ed. Schl.)—*Sailendro Himavān nāma dhātūnām ākaro mahān | tasya kanyā-dvayaṁ jātaṁ rūpenāpratimam bhuvī | yā Meru-duhitā Rāma tayoṛ mātā sumadhyamā | nāmnā Menā manojñā vai patnī Himavataḥ priyā | tasyāṁ Gangeyam abhavaj jyeshthā Himavataḥ sutā | Umā nāma dvitīyā 'bhūt kanyā tasyaiva Rāghava | . . . 19. The daughter of Meru, Menā by name, the pleasing and beloved wife of Himavat, was their slender-waisted mother. Of her was born Gangā, the eldest daughter of Himavat; and his second daughter was called Umā. . . . 19. The other daughter of the mountain, rich in austere observances, having undertaken an arduous rite, fulfilled a course of severe austerity. This daughter, Umā, distinguished by severe austerity, adored by the worlds, the Chief of mountains gave to the matchless Rudra. These, Rāma, were the two daughters of the king of mountains, Gangā, the most eminent of rivers, and Umā, the most excellent of goddesses."

The Harivaṁsa (vv. 940 ff.) gives the following history of Umā, which differs in some points from that of the Rāmāyaṇa, as it assigns three daughters to Himavat and Menā, among whom the Gangā is not included :

*Eteshām mānasī kanyā Menā nāma mahāgīreḥ | patnī Himavataḥ śreshthā . . . 943. 940. "Their (the Pitṛis') mental daughter was Menā, the eminent wife of the great mountain Himavat. . . . 943. The king of the mountains begot three daughters upon Menā—viz., Aparnā, Ekaparnā, and Ekapāṭalā. These three, performing very great austerity, such as could not be accomplished by gods or Dānavas, distressed [with alarm] both the stationary and the moving worlds. Ekaparnā ('One-leaf') fed upon one leaf. Ekapāṭalā took only one pāṭalā (Bignonia) for her food. One (Aparnā) took no sustenance, but her mother, distressed through maternal affection, forbade her, dissuading her with the words u mā ('o don't'). The beautiful goddess, performing arduous austerity, having been thus addressed by her mother on that occasion, became known in the three worlds as Umā. In this manner the contemplative goddess became renowned under that name. But this world shall remain [distinguished by?] having these three maids. All these three had mortified bodies, were distinguished by the force of contemplation, and were all chaste, and expounders of divine knowledge. Umā was the eldest and most excellent among the three. Distinguished by the force derived from deep contemplation, she obtained Mahādeva [for her husband]. Ekaparnā was given as a wife to the great Asita Deva, the wise teacher of the Yoga. And know that Ekapāṭalā was in like manner bestowed on Jaigīshavya." ✓

The following is the commencement of the hymn of Arjuna to Durgā, which, as has been mentioned in p. 170, he uttered at the suggestion of Kṛishṇa:<sup>345</sup>

“Reverence be to thee, Siddhasenānī (Generaless of the Siddhas), the noble, the dweller on Mandara, Kumārī, Kālī, Kāpālī, Kapilā, Krishna-pingalā. Reverence to thee, Bhadrakālī; reverence to thee, Mahākālī; reverence to thee, Chāṇḍī, Chāṇḍā; reverence to thee, o Tārīṇī (deliveress), o Varavarṇinī (beautiful-coloured), o fortunate Kātyāyanī, o Karālī, o Vijayā, o Jayā (victory), who bearest a peacock's tail for thy banner, adorned with various jewels, armed with many spears, wielding sword and shield, younger daughter [or sister] of the chief of cowherds, eldest, born in the family of the cowherd Nanda, delighting always in Mahisha's blood, Kauśikī, wearing yellow garments, loud-laughing, wolf-mouthed, reverence to thee, thou delighter in battle, o Umā, Sākambharī, thou white one, thou black one, o destroyer of Kaiṭabha. Reverence to thee, o Hiranyāxi, Virūpāxi, Dhūmrāxi (golden-, distorted-, dark-eyed), o Vedaśruti (tradition of the Veda), most pure, devout, Jātavedasī (female Agni), who dwellest continually near <sup>345</sup> ( . . . ?) mountain-ridges, and places of sacrifice. Of sciences thou art the science of Brahma (or of the Veda), the great sleep of embodied beings, o mother of Skanda, divine Durgā, dweller in wildernesses. Thou art called Svāhā, Svadhā, Kalā, Kūṣṭhā (minute divisions of time), Sarasvatī,<sup>346</sup> Sāvitrī, mother of the Vedas, and the Vedānta (or end of the Vedas). Thou, great goddess, art praised with a pure heart. By thy favour let me be ever victorious in battle. In deserts, fears, and difficulties, and in the preservation of thy devout servants, and in Pātāla, thou constantly dwellest, and conquerest the Danavas in battle. Thou art Jambhānī (destroyer ?), Mohinī, Māyā, Hri, Sṛī, Sandhyā,<sup>347</sup> the luminous, Sāvitrī, the mother, Tushṭi (contentment), Pushtī (fatness), Dhṛiti (constancy), Dīpti (light), increaser of the sun and moon, the power of the powerful in battle,—[all this] thou art seen by the Siddhas and Chāraṇas [to be].”

In another part of the Mahābhārata, Virāṭa-parva, 178 ff., there is another hymn (already referred to above, p. 361, note) addressed by Yudhishtira to Durgā, and very similar to the preceding. Among other things, she is there said to “have her perpetual abode on the Vindhya mountains, and to delight in spirituous liquor, flesh, and sacrificial victims” (Vindhye chaiva naga-śreshṭhe tara sthānaṁ hi śāśvatam | Kālī Kālī Mahākālī sidhu-māṁsa-paśu-priye |).

In the Harivaṁsa, vv. 3236 ff., it is related that with the view of defeating the designs of Kansa in regard to the destruction of Devakī's offspring, Vishṇu descended into Pātāla, where he sought the aid of Nidrā Kāla-rūpiṇī (Sleep in the form of time); and promised her in return that through his favour she should be a goddess adored in all the world (v. 3242). He desires her to be born as the ninth child of Yaśodā on the same night on which he was to be born as the eighth child of Devakī (3247), when he would be carried to Yaśodā and she to Devakī. He tells her that she would be taken by the foot, and cast out upon a rock; but would then obtain an eternal place in the sky, becoming assimilated to himself in glory; would be installed by Indra among the gods (3251 ff.), received by him as his sister under the name of Kauśiki, and would obtain from him (Indra) a perpetual abode on the Vindhya mountains, where, thinking upon him (Vishṇu), she would kill the two demons Sumbha and Niśumbha, and would be worshipped with animal sacrifices (taṭraiva trāṁ bhagiṇy-arthe grahīṣhyati sa Vāsavaḥ | Kuśikasya tu gotreṇa Kauśikī trāṁ bhaviṣhyasi<sup>348</sup> | sa te Vindhye naga-sreshṭhe sthānaṁ dāsyati śāśvatam | ityādi |). Vaiśampāyana then (vv. 3268 ff.) repeats a hymn to Āryā (Durgā) which had been “uttered by rishis of old,” beginning Nārāyaṇīm namasyāmi devīm tribhuvaneśvarīm | “I bow down before the goddess Nārāyaṇī, the mistress of the three worlds." She is here called by many of the names which we have already met in Arjuna's hymn (above, p. 367 ff.), such as Śrī, Dhṛiti, Kīrtti, Hrī, Sandhyā, Kātyāyanī, Kauśikī, Jayā, Vijayā, Tusṭi, Puṣṭi (3269 f.). She is also called the eldest sister of Yama (jyeshthā Yamasya bhaginī, v. 3271); and said to be worshipped by the [savage tribes of] Śavaras, Varvaras, and Pulindas (Śavaraiś Varbaraiś chaiva Pulindaiś cha supūjitā, v. 3274). She is also said to be fond of wine and flesh (surā-māṃsa-priyā, v. 3279), the goddess of wine (surā-devī, v. 3286), to be Sarasvatī in Vālmīki (comp. p. 360), and Smṛiti (memory) in Dvaipāyana, i.e. Vyāsa (Sarasvatī cha Vālmīke Smṛitir Dvaipāyane tathā), and to pervade the entire world (trayā vyāptam idaṁ sarvaṁ jagat sthāvara-jāṅgamam).

The object of this passage seems to be to take Durgā and her worship (the extensive prevalence of which could not be ignored by the Vaiṣṇavas) under the protection and patronage of Viṣṇu.

A hymn addressed to Durgā by Pradyumna, the son of Kṛṣṇa, is also to be found in Harivaṁśa vv. 9423; and another uttered by Aniruddha, son of Pradyumna and grandson of Kṛṣṇa, occurs in vv. 10235 of the same work. The latter hymn is repeated by Vaiṣampāyana after he had made obeisance to the "infinite, imperishable, celestial, eternal primeval-god Nārāyaṇa" (anantam avayam dīryam ādi-devaṁ sanātanam | Nārāyaṇaṁ namaskṛitya, 10232); and he talks of the goddess as being "adored by rishis and gods with flowers of eloquence" (rishihir daicataiś chaiva vāk-puṣhpaiś architāṁ śubhām, 10234). The hymn addresses Durgā as the sister of Indra and Viṣṇu (Mahendra-Viṣṇu-bhaginīm, v. 10235), as Gautamī, and by many of the names which we have already found in the preceding hymns, as well as by many new appellations, and goes on thus (v. 10256 ff.): Brahmā Viṣṇuś cha Rudraś cha chandra-sūryāgni-mārutāḥ | . . . . kṛtsnaṁ jagat idaṁ proktaṁ devyā nāmānukīrttanāt | "Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra, the sun, moon, and wind . . . . all this world is pronounced by uttering the name of this goddess."

The worship of this goddess reaches its climax in such works as the Devī-māhātmya in the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa, sections 81 ff.; where it is remarkable that she is connected with Viṣṇu, and not with her proper consort, Mahādeva. She is there called Mahāmāyā (the great Illusion), Yoganidrā (the Sleep of meditation), etc.

It is there said of her (v. 47 ff.): Nityaiva sã jagan-mũrttir tayã sarvam idaũ tatam | tathãpi tat-samutpattir bahudhã śrūyatãm mama | devãnãm kãryya-siddhy-artham āvirbhārati sã yadã | utpanneti tadã loka sã nityã 'py abhidhiyate | "She is the eternal form (or substance) of the world; by her all this [universe] is stretched out: and yet hear from me her manifold birth. Whenever she is manifested to effect the purposes of the gods, she, though eternal, is said in the world to be born." The narrative then proceeds, that when Vishṇu was sunk in this sleep of contemplation (Yoganidrã) at the end of the Kalpa, two demons, Madhu and Kaitabha, sprang from his ear and were about to kill Brahmã; when the latter seeing Vishṇu asleep, with the view of arousing him began to celebrate the praises of Yoganidrã, "his divine sleep who was abiding in his eyes, the mistress of the universe, the support of the world, the cause of its continuance and destruction;" (Hari-netra-kṛitãlayã | viśveśvarĩm jagaddhãtrĩm sthĩti-sãmhãra-kãrĩnĩm | nidrãm bhagavatĩm Viṣṇoḥ |). Some of the functions assigned to her are as follows (v. 56): Trayaiva dhãryyate sarvaũ trayaitat sṛijyate jagat | trayaitat pãlyate devĩ trãm atsy ante cha sarvadã | "By thee the universe is upheld; by thee the world is created, by thee it is preserved; and thou always devourest it at the end." Again, it is said of her (v. 63 ff.): Yacheha kũchit krachid vastu sad asad vã 'khillãtmake | tasya sarvasya yã śaktiḥ sã teaũ kiũ stūyasẽ tadã | yayã trayã jagat-sraśtã jagat-pãtã 'tti yo jagat | so 'pi nidrã-vaśaũ nĩlaḥ kas trãm stotum iheśvaraḥ | Viṣṇuḥ śartra-grahaṇam aham Īśãna eva cha | kũritãs te yato 'tas trãm kaḥ stotũm śaktimãn bharet | "Thou art the power (śakti) of whatever substance, existent or non-existent, anywhere is, o thou soul of all things: why art thou, then, lauded [by us who are unequal to the task]? Who is able to magnify thee by whom the Creator of the world, the Preserver of the world, and the Devourer of the world, have been subjected to sleep? Since thou hast caused Vishṇu, and me (Brahmã), and Īśãna (Śiva) to become incorporate, who has the power to praise thee?"

Mãrk. Pur. sect. 84, 1 ff.—Sũkrãdayaḥ sura-gaṇã nihate 'ticitryye tasmin durãtmani surãriḥale cha deryã | tãm tustṭuraḥ pranati-namra-śirodharãmsã vãgbhiḥ praharsha-pulakodgama-chãru-dehãḥ | deryã yayã

tām Ambikām akhila-deva-maharshi-pūjyām bhaktyā natāḥ sma vīda-
dhātu śubhāni sū naḥ | yasyāḥ prabhāvam atulam bhagavān Ananto
Brahmā Haraś cha na hi vaktum alam balañcha | sū Chāṇḍikā 'khilajagat-paripālānāya nāśāya chāśubha-bhayasya matiñ karotu |* "When the goddess had slain this very powerful and malignant [demon] and the host of the enemies of the gods,—the deities, headed by Indra, with their necks and shoulders bowed down in obeisance, and their bodies beautified by horripilation, delighted, lauded her with [these] words:
'We bow down with devotion before that goddess Ambikā, who stretched out this world by her own power, in whom are impersonated the various energies (śakti) of all the gods, who is to be adored by all the deities and rishis: may she confer upon us blessings. May Chāṇḍikā, whose majesty and might neither the divine Ananta (Vishṇu), nor Brahmā, nor Hara (Śiva) is competent to express, think upon the preservation of the world, and the destruction of the fear of evil."

These specimens may suffice to shew the dignity to which this goddess has eventually been elevated in the estimation of her worshippers; and a comparison of the characteristics which are here assigned to her with the descriptions quoted above from the Rāmāyaṇa, Mahābhārata, etc.
(pp. 306, 314 ff., 366 f.), will shew that she has now attained a far higher rank in the Indian pantheon than was originally enjoyed by the daughter of Daxa and Himavat.

sun is described as Brahma;—its description. Verily at first this was non-existent; that non-existence became existent; it developed,—it became an egg: it remained [quiet] for a period of one year; it burst into two; thence were formed two halves of gold and silver. Thereof the argentine half is the earth, and the golden half the heaven. The inner thick membrane [of the egg] became mountains, and the thin one cloudy fog; the blood-vessels became rivers, and the fluid became the ocean; and lastly, what was born therefrom is the sun, Āditya. On its birth arose loud shouts [or shouts of ‘ulu-ulu’], as well as all living beings, and their desires. Hence on the rising, and re-rising [day after day] of the sun, arise shouts of ‘ulu-ulu,’ as well as all living beings and their desires.” (Bibl. Ind. No. 78, p. 65.)

From Weber's Ind. Stud. i. 78, I find that in the Taittirīya Aranyaka also, the earth is said to have been “raised by a black boar with a hundred arms” (varāheṇa kṛishṇeṇa śata-bāhūnā uddhṛitā).

In the Uttara Kāṇḍa, also, of the Rāmāyaṇa (4, 9, Calc. ed.), it is said: Prajāpatih purā sṛishṭvā apaḥ salila-sambhavaḥ | tāsāṃ gopāyane sattvān asṛijāt padma-sambhavaḥ | “The lotus-born Prājapati, sprung from the waters (or, the source of the waters), having formerly created the waters, created beings to protect them;” who from their agreeing to protect the waters, were called Rāxasas (from the root rac, “to protect”).

On this verse the commentator remarks: “Apaḥ sṛishṭvā” bhūmer adho-varttinīr apaḥ sṛishṭvā ity arthaḥ | tatra “salila-sambhavaḥ” Prajāpatir abhūd ity anvayaḥ | . . . tathā “apo rā idam agre salilam asīt tasmin Prajāpatir vāyur bhūtvā ’charat | sa imām apaśyat tāṃ Varāho ’bhūtvā ”harat” iti śruteṣha | “‘Having created the waters:’ the sense is, having created the waters existing beneath the earth. In them the ‘water-born’ Prājapati arose,—such is the connection.” He then quotes Maṇu i. 8 f. (see p. 26 above), and another text from the Veda, and afterwards goes on: “. . . and from the Vedic text, ‘this universe was formerly waters, water. In it Prājapati becoming wind, moved. He beheld this earth: becoming a boar, he raised her.’”

In the Kishk. K. of the Rāmāyaṇa, 43, 54 ff. (Calc. ed.), Brahmā (in the masculine) is identified with the soul of the universe: Tam atikramya śailendram uttaras toyasām nidhiḥ | tatra Soma-girir nāma madhye hemamayo mahān | 55. Sa tu deśo viśūryyo 'pi tasya bhāsā prakāśate | sūryya-lakṣmyā 'bhivijñeyas tapateva vīrasvatā | 56. Bhagavāns tatra viśvātmā Sambhur eko daśātmakeḥ | Brahmā vasati deveśo brahma-marshi-parivāritah | na kathañchana gantaryaṁ Kurūṇām uttareṇa cha | ityādi | “Beyond that chief of mountains (in the land of the northern Kurus) is the northern ocean. There in its centre is the great golden Soma-giri (mountain of Soma or the Moon). That region, though sunless, shines by the lustre of that [mountain], and is recognizable by a sun-like splendour, as if the sun were shining. There the divine soul of the world, Sambhu, one, but tenfold, Brahmā, dwells, the god of gods, attended by the rishis. You must by no means go beyond the Kurus.”

The commentator remarks on v. 56: Viśvaṁ samati vyāpnoti iti viśvātmā vyāpakeḥ | tena Viśṇu-rūpeḥ | Viśṇu-vyāptāv ity anusārāt sa eva Sambhuḥ śam bhavaty asmāt | sa evaikādaśānuvākārthaikādaśa-rudrātmakeḥ | sa cha Brahmā brāhmaṇatrāḥ jayat-sraṣṭritvād evaṁ-rūpa-trayātmā bhagavāns tatra Soma-girau kūrūya-brahma-lokatrād va-satīty arthah | “He who pervades all things,—is the soul of all things, the pervader. He is therefore in the form of Viśṇu. Since Viśṇu pervades, he is consequently Sambhu, he from whom happiness arises. He is the subject of the eleven anuvākas, and exists in the form of the eleven Rudras. [The commentator must therefore read ekādaśātmakeḥ in the text. Gorresio's edition reads bahudhātmakeḥ.] And this divine being, [called] Brahmā, from his character of Brahmā, i.e. from his being the creator of the world, existing in these three forms, dwells on that Soma-giri, from its being the created Brahma-loka [?].” I subjoin for comparison the passage as given in Gorresio's edition:

Kishk. K. 44, 117 ff.—Kurūṁs tān samatikramya uttare payasām nidhiḥ | tatra Somagirir nāma hiraṇmaya-samo mahān | Indra-loka-gatā ye cha Brahma-loka-gatās cha ye | sarve te samavaśanta giri-rājaṁ divaṁ gatāḥ | asūryyo 'pi hi deśaḥ sa tasya bhāsaḥ prakāśate | sasūryya iva lakṣmīvāns tapatīva divākare | bhagavāns tatra bhūtātmā svayambhūr bahudhātmakeḥ | Brahmā bhavati vasyātmā sarvātmā sarva-bhāvanah |

In the description of the regions to which the monkeys were sent to search for Sītā after she had been carried off by Rāvana, which is given in the Kishkindhyā Kāṇḍa or fourth book of the Rāmāyaṇa, the following reference occurs to the three steps of Viṣṇu; and it is of such a character as to preserve some trace of the original meaning of those steps :

Sect. 40, vv. 54 ff. (Calc. ed.)<sup>a</sup>—Tataḥ paraṁ hemamayāḥ śrīmān Udaya-parvataḥ | tasya koṭiḥ divaṁ sprishṭvā śata-yojanam āyatā | jātarūpamayī divyā virājati sa-vedikā | . . . 57. "Beyond that is the glorious, golden, Udaya parvata [mountain over which the sun rises]; the divine and golden peak of which shines, touching the sky, a hundred yojanas long, and supported by a basement. . . . 57. There with its pinnacles stands the firm, golden Saumanasa, a yojana broad and ten yojanas high. When Viṣṇu, the chief of spirits, formerly strode three paces, he planted his first step there, and his second on the summit of Meru. When the sun has circled round Jambudvīpa by the north, he is mostly visible on that lofty peak ;" (or, 'he is visible to living beings, resting upon that peak.' Gorr.).

The commentator does not throw much light on the matter in his remarks on v. 58 : Tatra śata-yojana-dīrgha Udaya-giri-śikhare tatra Saumanase śringe trivikrame tribhiḥ padaiḥ triloky-ākramaṇa-prastāve prathamam padam Meroḥ śikhare chakāra | On v. 59 : Athānantaram uttareṇa Jambu-dvīpam parikramya tam mahochhrayaṁ śikharam Saumanasākhyam prāpya sthito divākaro Jambu-dvīpa-varttinām bhūyishṭham drīṣṭo bhavati Saumanasa-śikhare ity arthaḥ | idam satya-yugābhīprāyaṁ tretāyāṁ xīra-sūgara-madhya-gasya dvāpare suroda-madhya-gasya kalau Lankā-madhya-gasya Jambudvīpa-stha-manushya-drīṣyatāyā anyatrotkṛtvāt | "On this summit of the Udaya-giri, a hundred yojanas lofty, on that peak Saumanasa, in his triple stride, on the occasion of his traversing the three worlds with three steps, [Vishṇu] placed his first step on the summit of Meru." [Some words would seem to be left out here, as the commentator now contradicts the text, and says nothing of the second step.] On v. 59 he remarks: "Afterwards when the sun has circled round Jambudvīpa by the north, he is mostly seen by the inhabitants of that dvīpa standing on the lofty summit called Saumanasa. This refers to the Satya yuga. For it is said in other books that in the Tretā age the sun is beheld by the men of Jambudvīpa to go through the ocean of milk, in the Dvāpara through the ocean of wine, and in the Kali through Lankā."

The three steps of Vishṇu are mentioned in other parts of the Rāmāyaṇa. Thus in book vi. 39, 22 (Calc. ed.), it is said: Prāsādaiścha vimānaiś cha Lankā parama-bhūṣita | ghanair ivatāpāpāye madhyamaṁ Vaiṣṇavam padam | "Lankā was beautifully adorned with temples and palaces, as the middle step (or position) of Vishṇu, with clouds, at the departure of the hot season [and commencement of the rains]." The commentator explains the middle position of Vishṇu by ākāśa. This passage may refer either to the original, or to the legendary, sense of Vishṇu's steps.

In this note I shall adduce some further evidence tending to confirm the supposition that Rāma may not have been originally represented in the Rāmāyaṇa as an incarnation of Vishṇu.

In the summaries of the poem, contained in sections 1 and 3 of the First Book, as given in the Calcutta edition and in Schlegel's, no allusion is made to the divine origin of Raama; and the same is the case in the first and third sections in Gorresio's edition also. In the fourth section, however, of the last-named recension (which the others do not contain), the plan pursued by the gods for the destruction of Rāvaṇa, and the divine fluid through which the sons of Daśaratha were produced, are distinctly referred to (vv. 14, 15). In the first of the two summaries in Rāmāyaṇa i. 1, 18 (Calc. ed.), Rāma is described as "resembling Vishṇu in vigour, and pleasant to behold, like the Moon." The former epithet would imply that he was not Vishṇu. Otherwise, what necessity for the comparison? The commentator remarks thus on the expression : Yadyapi Rāmo Vishṇur eva sarva-rūpāś cha tathāpi mānushopādhi-bhedāt sarvatra sādṛśyaṁ drashtavyam | yadvā Vishṇunā sadṛśa ity ananrayālanākārah | "Although Rāma was no other than Vishṇu, still from the seeming distinctness of his humanity, resemblances may be regarded as existing in all points [between the one and the other]. Or, the comparison may be regarded as coming within the class of improper similes (ananrayālanākāra).” See Professor Goldstücker’s Dictionary under this word.

In the text, pp. 142-145, following Schlegel and Lassen, I have pointed out that the second sacrifice described in the fourteenth section in Schlegel’s edition, has some appearance of not having formed a portion of the original poem. The edition lately published in Calcutta, which frequently differs in its readings from Schlegel’s, omits vv. 5-11 of the section in question (the fourteenth) as given in Schlegel’s; and passes at once from the fourth to the twelfth verse. In the account which follows of the request preferred by the gods to Vishṇu to become incarnate in the sons of Daśaratha, etc., the two editions differ in their arrangement of details, but not in the substance. In the Calcutta edition the words pitaraṁ rochayāmāsa tadā Daśaratham nṛipam (“he accepted as his father the king Daśaratha”) which occur in section 15, 32, are repeated in section 16, 8.

In the text, pp. 145 f., I have given the account of the birth of Daśaratha’s sons according to Schlegel’s edition. I now subjoin the description of the same event as found in the Calc. ed. and in Gorresio’s :

10. "To them were born four sons, of boundless might, Rāma, Laxmaṇa, Satrugṇa, and Bharata, in fashion like the gods. Kausalyā brought forth Rāma, a son of unparalleled vigour, the first in birth, might, and qualities, equal in valour to Viṣṇu. 12. (=v. 12 of the Calc. ed.) 13. For this lotus-eyed Rāma was born from the half of Viṣṇu's generative the half of Vishṇu, and gladdener of the race of Ixvāku, with red eyes, great-armed, with red lips, and with a voice like a kettle-drum. 12. Kauśalyā received lustre from this son of unbounded might, as Aditi did from the chief of the gods who wields the thunderbolt. 13. [A son] called Bharata, of real valour, possessed of all virtues, was born of Kaikeyī, who was manifestly the fourth part of Vishṇu. 14. Then Sumitrā bore two sons, Laxmaṇa and Śatrughna, heroes, skilled in all weapons, who had [each] the half [of the fourth] of Vishṇu.<sup>11</sup> 15. But Bharata, of tranquil mind, was born ~~under~~ the lunar mansion Pushya and the sign of Pisces; while the sons of Sumitrā were born under Śarpa or (the ninth lunar mansion) when the sun had risen in Cancer. The four great sons ~~of~~ the king were separately born, possessing great qualities, resembling one another, and in brilliancy like the constellation Proshṭhapadā."

<sup>9</sup> I do not know what vāreṇa means, if this reading be correct. Perhaps we should read vareṇa or avareṇa. The other editions have adhipena.

The Calcutta edition has not the verse which is found as the fifth in Schlegel's edition, and the thirteenth in Gorresio's, but it, equally with the others, asserts in its eleventh verse (which is not in Schlegel's edition) that the half of Vishṇu was incarnate in Rāma. The same remark which in p. 146 I have made on the passage as given in Schlegel's edition, applies to this recension also—viz., that the verses which refer to Dasaratha's sons being incarnations of Vishnu might be omitted with little injury to the connection. The account of Bharata, Laxmana, and Satrugna, given in vv. 13-15 (as they now stand), has a certain awkwardness, inasmuch as after leaving Bharata, and introducing (v. 14) Laxmana and Satrugna, the narrator recurs (v. 15) to Bharata, to give further particulars of his birth, and then goes back again to the other brothers. If, however, vv. 13 and 14 have been interpolated, it is possible that some other lines, which seem necessary to complete v. 15, and to tell the name of Bharata's mother, and the names of Sumitrā's sons (which that verse does not contain), may at the same time have been left out. In Gorresio's text of this passage, the verses describing the astrological influences under which Dasaratha's sons were born, are left out; though these are not unlikely to have formed part of the original text of the poem.<sup>12</sup> The twelfth verse of this (as well as the corresponding verses of the other two recensions), where Rāma is compared to Indra, and also the fourteenth verse (Gorr.) in which he is said to be not inferior to Indra and Vishnu [these two verses, I say, if original portions of the poem, as is not unlikely], could scarcely have formed part of a work in which the incarnation of Rāma was described, as it would not exalt the reader's conception of the dignity of the hero (supposed to be an incarnation of Vishnu) to compare his might to that of Indra, an inferior god. On this subject Gorresio remarks, in note 90, p. 423 f. of his sixth vol., as follows: "This is one of the passages in the poem from which it might be inferred that the avatāra of Vishnu in Rāma was an interpolation in the epopee. If Rāma was a corporeal manifestation of Vishnu, and consequently Vishnu himself in a human form, the epithet not inferior to Vishnu which is here assigned to him has neither appropriateness nor sense. It would be as if it were said to any one that he was not inferior to himself. But we shall not anticipate the judgment of a question which has need to be maturely considered."

Again, it is related in the Aranya K., or Third Book, 30, 20 ff. of Gorresio's edition, that when the Rāxasas were about to attack Rāma, the gods and other beings became very anxious about his safety: Tato devarshi-gandharvāḥ siddhāś cha saha chāraṇiḥ | ūchuh parama-santrastā guhyakāś cha parasparam | chatur-daśa sahasrāṇi raxasām bhīma-karma-

nām | ekaś cha Rāmo dharmātmā katham yuddham bhaviṣyati | Rāmo no vidito yo 'yaṁ yathā cha vasudhām gataḥ | manushyatvam tu matrā 'sya kārūṇyād vyathitam manaḥ | nardantīra chamūs teshām raxasām kāmārūpīnām | nānā-vikṛita-veśānām Rāmāśramam upāgamat | "Then the gods, rishis, Gandharvas, Siddhas, Chāraṇas, and Guhyakas, being greatly terrified, spoke thus among themselves: 'There are fourteen thousands of Rāxasas, terrible in their deeds, and the righteous Rāma is but one: how shall they fight together? We know who this Rāma is, and how he went to the earth; but considering his human nature, our minds are distressed from compassion. The army of these Rāxasas, who take any shape they will, and who have assumed various disguises, has approached the hermitage of Rāma, shouting.'"

In the Calc. ed. iii. 23, 19 ff., however, the words ascribed to the gods, etc., are quite different: *Tato devāḥ sa-gandharvāḥ siddhāś cha saha chāraṇaiḥ | sameyuścha mahātmāno yuddha-darśana-kāṇṇayā | 20. descendants of Pulastya, (22) as the god who bears the discus (Vishnu) [overcame] the chiefs of the Asuras.' Having thus spoken, and looked at each other, they said again: 23. 'There are fourteen thousands of Rāxasas, terrible in their deeds, and the righteous Rāma is but one: how shall they fight together?' 24. [Having] thus [spoken], the royal rishis, Siddhas, and Brahman rishis, with the [other] hosts, stood in curious expectation, together with the gods in aerial cars. 25. Beholding Rāma, full of might, standing in the front of the battle, all creatures were agitated with fear. 26. The unparalleled form of Rāma, vigorous in action, was like the form of the great Rudra when incensed. . . . 35. The form of Rāma, incensed, was beheld then, like that of Binākin (Rudra) when prepared to destroy the sacrifice of Daxa."

From a comparison of these passages as given in the two different recensions, it appears probable that the speech which is put into the mouths of the gods and other spectators, in the Calcutta edition, is the most ancient and original, as no mention is there made of the divine nature of Rāma, the reference to Vishnu in the twenty-second verse being introduced only by way of illustration, in the same way as the allusions to Rudra in the twenty-sixth and thirty-fifth verses. In Gorresio's edition, on the other hand, there is a distinct reference to the divine nature of Rāma; and I therefore conjecture that the short speech which it contains has been substituted for the other somewhat longer one, by a subsequent editor in support of this later conception.

The career of Rāma in his conflicts with the Rāxasas was not entirely unchequered by reverses. In the forty-fifth section of the sixth, or Yuddha Kāṇḍa, Calc. ed. (corresponding to section 20 of Gorresio's recension), it is related that both he and his brother Laxmana were severely wounded and rendered senseless by a cloud of serpents transformed into arrows, which were shot by Indrajit, son of Rāvana.

In the following citations I shall use the Calcutta edition only, except when I specially refer to Gorresio's. In vv. 7 ff. (sect. 45) it is said: Rāma-Laxmanayor eva sarva-deha-bhidaḥ śarāṇ | bhṛīṣam aveśa-yāmāsa Rāvaṇiḥ samitiñjayaḥ | nirantara-śarīrau tu tāv ubhau Rāma-Laxmanau | kruddhenendrajitā vīrau pannagaiḥ śaratāpi gataiḥ | tayorḥ xata-ja-mārgena sūśrāva rudhiram bahu | . . . 16. Baddhau tu śara-bandhena tāv ubhau rana-mūrdhani | nipeshāntara-mātreṇa na śekatur arexitum | 22. Papāta prathamam Rāmo viddho marmasu mārganaiḥ |

krodhād Indrajitā yena purā Śakro 'pi nirjitah | "The son of Rāvana, victorious in battle, discharged numerous arrows which pierced the whole bodies of Rāma and Laxmāṇa. Both of these two heroes had their bodies [wounded] in every spot by the incensed Indrajit with serpents which had taken the form of arrows. Much blood flowed through the openings formed by their wounds. . . . 16. Bound by the chain (or, smitten by the stroke ?) of these arrows in the front of the battle, those two could not look up even for a moment.<sup>16</sup> . . . 22. Rāma first fell, pierced in the most vital parts, in anger, by Indrajit, by whom even Indra had formerly been conquered."<sup>17</sup> Their allies the monkeys arrive and find the two brothers lying helpless. Sect. 46, 3 ff. . . . Anvāsochanta Rāghavau | acheshtau manda-nīśvāsau śonitenā pariplutau | śara-jālānritau stabdhau śayānau śara-talpa-gau | nīśvasantau yathā sarpaū nīścheshtau dīna-rikramau | ityādi | "They bewailed the two descendants of Raghu incapable of effort, breathing slowly, bathed in blood, wounded with a mass of arrows, stiff, lying on a bed of arrows, breathing like serpents, helpless, their vigour quelled," etc. Vibhīṣaṇa comforts the monkeys by saying that the good fortune of Rāma and Laxmaṇa would not forsake them (vv. 38 ff.): Athavā vaxyatūn Rāmo yāvat sañjñā-viparyayaḥ | labdha-sañjñau hi Kākutssthau bhayaṁ nau vyapaneshyataḥ | naitat kiñchana Rāmasya na cha Rāmo mumārshati | na hy enaṁ hāsyate Laxmīr durlabhā yā gatāyushām | "Or, let Rāma be guarded while his insensibility continues. When the two descendants of Kakutsstha have recovered their senses, they shall remove our fear. This [mishap] of Rāma is nothing; he is not about to die: for Good Fortune (Laxmī), who is beyond the reach of the dead, will not abandon him."

It will be observed that nothing is here said of the divine nature of Rāma; and nothing is said of Laxmī being his spouse, though she is regarded in Hindu mythology as the consort of Nārāyaṇa (see the commentator's remark on Uttara Kāṇḍa, 17, 35, which will be quoted below).

<sup>16</sup> On this the commentator remarks: Na śekatur avexitum | tādṛśīv ita sthitau manushyateva-naṭanāya iti bodhyam | "Could not look up: remained, as it were, in this condition. This is to be understood as done to act (i.e. simulate) humanity (i.e. that they were mere men)."

<sup>17</sup> Indrajit's victory over Indra is related in the Uttara Kāṇḍa, section 34. He was originally called Meghanādā, but after he had taken Indra captive, he received from Brahmā the name of Indra-jit, or the "conqueror of Indra," ibid. section 35.

In the next section (the forty-seventh) it is related that Ravana sent Sitā on his car Pushpaka, with the Raxasī Trijaṭā, to the spot where Rāma and Laxmaṇa were lying wounded and helpless; and that on seeing these brothers, "powerful as the sons of the gods" (deva-suta-prabhāvau, v. 24), she broke out into lamentations, supposing them to be dead. The forty-eighth section contains her lament, in which she alludes to the two brothers having had various divine weapons (but says nothing of their divine nature). Though they resembled Vāsava (Indra), they were slain, she says, by the magic of the invisible foe; and Fate, she adds, is hard to be overcome (vv. 16 ff.: Nanu Vāruṇam Āgneyam Aindraṁ Vāyavyam eva cha | astraṁ Brahma-śiraś chaiva Rāghavau pratyapadyata | adṛśyamūnena rane māyayā Vāsavopamau | . . . . . nihatau | . . . . . 19. Na Kālasyaṭi-bhāro 'sti kṛitāntaś cha sudurjayah |). Sitā is then consoled by the Raxasī Trijaṭā, who tells her (v. 22) that her husband is not dead; and explains why she thinks so. In vv. 30 f., she says: Nemau śakyau rane jetuṁ sendrair api surūsuraiḥ | tādṛśaṁ darśanam dṛiṣṭvā mayā chodiritaṁ tava | idaṁ tu sumahach chitraṁ śaraiḥ paśyasva Maithilī | viśaṅjūnaṁ patitāv etau naiva Laxmīr vimuñchati | prāyena gata-sattvānām puruṣhānām gatayūṣhām | dṛiṣyamāneṣhu vaktreṣhu param bhavati vaikṛitam | "These two cannot be conquered in battle even by the Suras and Asuras, Indra included. Such a sight (vision?) I have seen, and declared to thee. But behold this great wonder that though they are lying senseless from the arrows, Fortune (Laxmī) does not abandon them. There is generally a great change in the countenances, when beheld, of men who have lost their lives and whose breath has departed."

While the monkeys were watching Rāma, he recovers his consciousness (sect. 49, v. 3): Etasminn antare Rāmo pratyabudhyata vīryyavān | sthīratvāt satya-yogāchcha<sup>18</sup> śaraiḥ sandāmito 'pi san | "In the meantime the heroic Rāma awoke, owing to his firmness and robustness of frame (?), though he had been overcome by the arrows." He then begins to lament the loss of his brother Laxmaṇa, whom he supposes to be dead; and ascribes the misfortune to his own bad generalship (v. 18: Imām adya gato 'vasthām mamānāryasya durnayaiḥ).

becoming king of Laṅkā; but is comforted by Sugrīva, who says to him (vv. 21 f.): Rājyāṃ prāpsyasi dharma-jña Laṅkāyām neha saṁsayah | Rāvaṇaḥ saha putreṇa sva-kāmaṁ neha lapsyate | Garuḍādhiṣṭhihitāṃ etāv ubhau Rāghava-Lakṣmaṇau | tyaktvā moham badhiṣhyete sa-gaṇaṁ Rāvaṇaṁ rane | “Thou, o [prince], well-skilled in duty, shalt without doubt obtain sovereignty in Laṅkā; but Rāvana and his son shall not attain the object of their desire.” He adds another prophecy: “Both Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa are superintended by Garuḍa: having escaped from their swoon, they shall slay Rāvana with his hosts.” Sugrīva, however, proposes to remove Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa from the scene of action to Kishkindhyā; and promises that he himself will slay Rāvana, and bring back Sītā, as Indra recovered the lost Śrī (24 f.: Saha śūrair hari-gaṇair labdha-sañjñāv arindamaṃ | gachha tvam bhrātaraṃ grihya Kishkindhyām Rāma-Lakṣmaṇau | ahaṁ tu Rāvaṇaṃ hatvā sa-putraṁ saha-bāndhavam | Maithilīm ānayishyāmi Sakro nash-tām iva Sriyaṃ |).<sup>19</sup>

Sushena, another of the monkeys, then relates (vv. 26–32) that once when the gods had been wounded with arrows and rendered senseless, in a combat with the Dānavas, they had been cured by Vṛihaspati by herbs aided by sacred texts; and suggests that some of the monkeys should be sent to the ocean of milk to bring those herbs. The Calcutta edition then goes on at once in vv. 33 ff. to relate the arrival of the celestial bird Garuḍa for the purpose of curing Rāma and his brother. But in Gorresio’s text the following verses are introduced between those which correspond to the thirty-second and thirty-third of the Calcutta edition:

Nārāyaṇa, who hast descended [to earth] on account of the Rāxasas. Call to mind the snake-devouring god the strong Vainateya (the bird Garuḍa); he shall deliver you twain from the dreadful bonds of the serpents.' Hearing Vāyu's words, Rāma called to mind the god Garuḍa, the terrifier of serpents."

The omission of these verses in the Calcutta edition renders it probable that they formed no part of the original Rāmāyaṇa. But in addition to this fact, another proof to the same effect is to be found in the circumstance that in the verses which follow shortly after in both recensions, Rāma, after being cured by Garuḍa, is represented as enquiring, and consequently, as being ignorant, who his benefactor is, although, according to Gorresio's edition, he had just before called Garuḍa to mind, i.e. summoned him. The verses in which this is shewn are as follows (Calc. ed. 50, 37 ff.): Tam āgatam abhiprexya nāgās te vipradudruvuh | yais tu tau purushau baddhau śara-bhūtair mahābalaiḥ | tataḥ Suparnah Kākutsthau sprishṭvā pratyabhinandya cha | vimamarśa cha pāṇibhyām mukhe chandra-sama-prabhe | Vainateyena saṁsprishṭās tayoh samrurukhur <sup>20</sup> vraṇāḥ | suvarṇe cha tanū snigdhe tayor āśu babhūvatuh | 40. Tejo vīryam balam chaiva utsāhascha mahā-guṇah | pradarśanaṁcha buddhiścha smṛtiścha dviguṇā tayoh | tāv utthāpyu mahā-tejā Garuḍo Vāsavopamau | ubhau cha sasraje hṛishṭau Rāmaś chainam uvācha ha | bhavat-prasādād vyaśanaṁ Rāvaṇi-prabhavam mahat | upāyena vyatikrāntau śighraṁ cha balinau kṛitau | yathā tātām Daśa-ratham yathā 'jaṁcha pitāmaham | tathā bhavāntam āśādyā hṛidayam me prasīdati | 44. Ko bhavān rūpa-sampanno divya-srag-anulepanah | "Beholding him arrived, the powerful serpents by whom, in the form of arrows, these two heroes had been bound (or, wounded), took to flight. Then Garuḍa, having touched and saluted the descendants of Kakutstha, soothed with his hands their faces brilliant as the moon. Touched by Garuḍa, their wounds closed up, and their bodies became speedily sleek and of a beautiful colour. 40. Their fire, strength, force, vigour, and energy became many degrees greater, and their insight, understanding, and memory, were doubled. The powerful Garuḍa raised up and embraced those two [princes] resembling Indra, who were delighted; and Rāma thus addressed him: 'By thy favour, and through thy appliances, we have quickly got over the great calamity inflicted by the son of Rāvana, and have become strong. Since I have found thee, who art as my father Daśaratha, and my ancestor Aja, my heart rejoices. 44. Who art thou,<sup>21</sup> distinguished by beauty, adorned with celestial garlands, and unguents?' etc.

The corresponding passage in Gorresio's edition (sect. 26, vv. 16 ff.) does not, as I have intimated, differ materially from the above, and in it, in like manner, Rāma is represented as enquiring who Garuḍa is.

In reply to Rāma's question Garuḍa tells him (vv. 46 ff.) who he is, says he is his friend, and that no one but himself, whether god or Asura, could have delivered Rāma from the serpents. He finally assures him that he should slay Rāvana and recover Sītā; and then departs after walking round and embracing him (v. 60: pradaxiṇaṁ tataḥ kṛtvā parishvajya cha).<sup>22</sup>

There is another passage in Gorresio's edition (book vi. sect. 33) in which it is related that after the fall of Prahasta, one of the Rāxasas, Mandodarī, Rāvana's queen, went into the assembly to dissuade her husband from contending any further against Rāma, when she is introduced as saying (v. 25 f.): Na cha mānusha-mātro 'sau Rāmo Daśarathātmajaḥ | ekena yena vai pūrvam bahavo rāxasā hatāḥ | "Nor is this Rāma a mere man, he by whom singly many Rāxasas have been slain." The same idea is repeated in the two following verses, where the number of the slain and the names of some of them are given.

The passage in which these verses occur, is not, however, to be found in the Calcutta edition, which omits verses 7-51 of the thirty-third, and the whole of the thirty-fourth sections of Gorresio's edition.

In the fifty-ninth section of the same book (Calc. ed.) it is related that Laxmaṇa was wounded by Rāvana with a dart given to the latter by Brahmā (v. 105-7); but that when Rāvana tried to lift his fallen foe, he was unable (v. 109 f.): Himavān Mandaro Merus trailokyam vā sahāmaraiḥ | śakyam bhujābhyām uddharttuṁ na saṅkhye Bharatā-nujāḥ | śaktyā brāhmyā tu Saumitris tādito 'pi stanāntare | Viṣṇor amīmāṁsya-bhāgam ātmānam pratyānusmaran | "Himavat, Mandara, Meru, or the three worlds with the immortals, might be lifted by him with his arms, but not the younger brother of Bharata in battle. But Laxmaṇa, though smitten on the chest with the dart given by Brahmā, recollected himself to be an incomprehensible portion of Viṣṇu." Similar words are again ascribed to him in v. 120: Viṣṇor bhāgam amīmāṁsya ātmānam pratyānusmaran. Expressions of the same purport occur in the parallel verses in Gorresio's edition, sect. 36, vv. 86, 88, and 98. The words in v. 88, are Viṣṇor achintyo yo bhāgo mānusham deham āsthitāḥ | "The inconceivable portion of Viṣṇu residing in a human body." The expressions, however, may be later interpolations in both editions.

In the same sect. (59, Calc. ed.) it is related that Rāvana was defeated by Rāma, and compelled to return to Lankā. After his return he thus speaks (sect. 60, v. 5 ff.): Sarvaṁ tat khalu ne moghaṁ yat taptam paramaṁ tapaḥ | yat samāno Mahendrena mānushenāsmi nirjitaḥ | idam tad Brahmaṇo ghoraṁ vākyaṁ mām abhyupasthitam | "manushyebhyo vijānīhi bhayaṁ tvam iti tat tathā | deva-dānava-gandharvair yaxa-rāxasa-pannagaiḥ | abadhyatvam mayā proktam mānushyebhyo na yūchitam" | tam imam mānusham manye Rāmaṁ Daśarathātmanjam | Iṣvāku-kula-jātena hy Anaranyena<sup>23</sup> yat purā | utpatsyati hi mad-vaṁśe puruṣo

The story of Anaranya is, however, told in the Uttara Kāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa,

*rāxasādharma | yas tvām sa-putraṁ sūmātyam sa-balaṁ sūśva-sārathim |

 is then vain, since I, though the equal of Indra, have been overcome by a man. This is the direful word of Brahmā that has now reached me, [when he said]: 'know that thy great cause of apprehension is from men. I have decreed thy indestructibility by gods, Dānavas, Gandharvas, Yaxas, Rāxasas, and Pannagas: but thou hast asked no [security] from men.' This man I consider to be Rāma, the son of Daśaratha, since I was formerly thus cursed by Anaranya of the race of Ixvāku; 'There shall arise among my posterity a man who shall slay thee in battle, thou lowest of Rāxasas, and wicked wretch, along with thy sons, ministers, hosts, and charioteers.' And I was also cursed by Vedavati when she was insulted by me: it is she who has been born as the great Sitā, the gladdener of Janaka. And that which Umā, Nandīśvara, Rambhā, and the daughter of Varuṇa<sup>22</sup> uttered, has befallen me. What has been spoken by rishis<sup>23</sup> is never falsified. Wherefore, ye must assemble, and make exertions."

In this passage it will be observed that there is no express reference to the divine nature of Rāma: and it is conceivable that the original section 19. Dushyanta, Suratha, Gādhi, Gaya, Purūravas (though, as the commentator remarks, they lived at different periods, yet they all in their own times) submitted, without fighting, to Rāvaṇa on his victorious march through the world.

 Anaranya, a descendant of Ixvāku, and king of Ayodhyā, however, when called upon either to fight, or acknowledge himself conquered, prefers the former alternative (v. 9); but his army is overcome, and he himself is thrown from his chariot (v. 21). When Rāvaṇa triumphs over his prostrate foe, the latter says that he has been vanquished not by him, but by fate, and that Rāvaṇa is only the instrument of his overthrow
 (v. 26); and he predicts that Rāvaṇa should one day be slain by his descendant Rāma
 (v. 29: Utpatsyate kule hy asmin Ixvākūṇām mahātmanām | Rāmo Dāśarathir nāma yas te prāṇūn harishyati).

legend may have represented him as being, even in his human capacity, of sufficient prowess to slay the king of the Rāxasas.

[Most of the legends referred to in the preceding passage are given in the Uttara Kāṇḍa, and I shall supply an abstract of them here. That of Anaranya will be found in note 23.

The rather pretty story of Vedavatī is related in the seventeenth section of that book, vv. 1 ff., as follows : Rāvana, in the course of his progress through the world, comes to the forest on the Himālaya, where he sees a damsel of brilliant beauty, but in ascetic garb, of whom he straightway becomes enamoured. He tells her that such an austere life is unsuited to her youth and attractions, and asks who she is, and why she is leading an ascetic existence. She answers that she is called Vedavatī, and is the vocal daughter (vāṇmayī kanyā) of Vṛihaspati's son, the rishi Kuśadhvaja, sprung from him during his constant study of the Veda. The gods, gandharvas, etc., she says, wished that she should choose a husband, but her father would give her to no one else than to Viṣṇu, the lord of the world, whom he desired for his son-in-law (v. 12 : Pitṛas tu mama jāmātā Viṣṇuḥ kila sureśvaraḥ | abhipretas trilokēśas tasmān nāsyasya me pitā | dātum icchati tasmai tu |). This resolution provoked Sambhu, king of the Daityas, who slew her father, Kuśadhvaja, while sleeping, on which her mother (whose name is not given) after embracing his body, entered into the fire (15). Vedavatī then proceeds (v. 16) : Tato manoratham satyam pitur Nārāyaṇam prati | karomiti tam evāham hṛidayena samudvāhe | iti pratijñām āruhya charāmi vipulam tapaḥ | . . . 18. Nārāyaṇo mama patir na tv anyah puruṣhottamāt | āśraye niyamaṁ ghoram Nārāyaṇa-parīpsayā | "In order that I may fulfil this desire of my father in respect of Nārāyaṇa, I wed him with my heart.<sup>27</sup> Having entered into this engagement, I practise great austerity. Nārāyaṇa, and no other than he, Puruṣhottama, is my husband. From the desire of obtaining him, I resort to this severe observance." Rāvana's passion is not in the least diminished by this explanation, and he urges that it is the old alone who should seek to become distinguished by accumulating merit through austerity; prays that she who is so young and beautiful, shall become his bride; and boasts that he is superior to Viṣṇu (v. 24). She rejoins that no one but he would thus contemn

that deity. On receiving this reply, he touches the hair of her head with the tip of his finger (27). She is greatly incensed, and forthwith cuts off her hair, and tells him that as he has so insulted her, she cannot continue to live, but will enter into the fire before his eyes. She goes on (v. 31 ff.): Yasmāt tu dharshitā chāhaṁ tvayā pāpātmanā vane | tasmāt tava badhārthaṁ hi samutpatsyaty aham (samutpatsyati samutpatsye ity arthaḥ | Comm.) pumāḥ | nahi śakyāḥ striyā hantum puruṣaḥ pāpa-niśchayaḥ | śāpe tvayi mayotsrishiṣṭe tapasāś cha vyayo bhavet | yadi tv asti mayā kiñchit kṛitaṁ dattaṁ hutaṁ tathā | tasmāt tv a-yoni-jā sādhuḥ bhaveyaṁ dharmīnaḥ sutā | exam uktvā pravishṭā sā jvalitaṁ jātavedāsam | papāta cha divo divyā pushpa-vṛishṭiḥ samantataḥ | scishā Janaka-rājasya prasūtā tanayā prabho | tava bhāryyā mahābāho Viṣṇus tvam hi sanātanaḥ | pūrvaṁ krodha-hataḥ śatruṣ yayā 'sau nihatas tayā | upāśrayitvā śailābhas tava vīryyam amānusham | “ ‘ Since I have been insulted in the forest by thee who art wicked-hearted, I shall be born again for thy destruction. For a man of evil design cannot be slain by a woman; and the merit of my austerity would be lost if I were to launch a curse against thee. But if I have performed, or bestowed, or sacrificed, aught, may I be born the virtuous daughter, not produced from the womb, of a righteous man.’ Having thus spoken, she entered the blazing fire. Then a shower of celestial flowers fell from every part of the sky. It is she, lord, who (having been Vedavati in the Kṛita age, v. 38) has been born (in the Tretā age, v. 38) as the daughter of the king of the Janakas, and [has become] thy bride; for thou art the eternal Viṣṇu. The mountain-like enemy who was [virtually] destroyed before by her wrath, has now been slain by her, having recourse to thy superhuman energy.” On this the commentator remarks: Anena Sitaiva Rāvaṇa-badhe mukhyaṁ kāraṇam Rāmo tu hantrītvam āropitam iti sūchitam | “ By this it is signified that Sītā was the principal cause of Rāvaṇa’s death; but the function of destroying him is ascribed to Rāma.” On the words “thou art Viṣṇu,” in the preceding verse, the same commentator remarks: Anena Sītāyā Laxmītvam sphuṭam evoktam | tad uktam Parāśareṇa “ Rāghavatve ’bharat Sītā Rukmiṇī Kṛishṇa-janmani” iti | “ By this it is clearly affirmed that Sītā was Laxmī. This is what Parāśara* says: ‘In the god’s life as Rāma, she became Sītā, and in his birth as Kṛishṇa [she became] Rukmini.’”

Umā, but the commentator<sup>28</sup> connects this allusion to her in the preceding passage (vi. 60, 11) with the following story about Nandiśvara, which is thus told in the sixteenth section of the Uttara Kāṇḍa (v. 1 ff.): After his victory over Kuvera, Rāvaṇa went to Śaravaṇa, the birth-place of Kārttikeya. Ascending the mountain he sees another delightful wood, where his car Pushpaka stops, and will proceed no further. He then sees a formidable dark tawny-coloured dwarf, called Nandiśvara, a follower of Mahādeva, who desires him to halt, as that deity is sporting on the mountain, and has made it inaccessible to all creatures, the gods included (v. 10). Rāvaṇa angrily demands who Śankara (Mahādeva) is, and laughs contemptuously at Nandiśvara, who has the face of a monkey. Nandiśvara who was another body (aparā tanuḥ) of Śiva, being incensed at this contempt of his monkey form, declares that beings, possessing the same shape as himself, and of similar energy, monkeys, shall be produced to destroy Rāvaṇa's race (v. 17: Tasmād mad-vīryya-saṁyuktā mad-rūpa-sama-tejasah | utpatsyanti badhārthaṁ hi kulasya tava vānarāḥ |). Nandiśvara adds that he could easily kill Rāvaṇa now, but that he has been already slain by his own deeds (v. 20). Rāvaṇa threatens (v. 23 ff.) that as his car has been stopped, he will pluck up the mountain by the roots, asking in virtue of what power Śiva continually sports on that spot, and boasting that he must now be made to know his danger. Rāvaṇa then throws his arms under the mountain, which, being lifted by him, shakes, and makes the hosts of Rudra tremble, and even Pārvatī herself quake, and cling to her husband (v. 26: Chachāla Pārvatī chāpi tadā śliṣṭā Maheś-varam). Śiva, however, presses down the mountain with his great toe, and along with it crushes the arms of Rāvaṇa, who utters a loud cry, which shakes all creation. Rāvaṇa's counsellors then exhort him to propitiate Mahādeva, the blue-throated lord of Umā, who on being lauded will become gracious. Rāvaṇa accordingly praises Mahādeva with hymns, and weeps for a thousand years. Mahādeva is then propitiated (v. 35), lets go Rāvaṇa's arms, says his name shall be Rāvaṇa from the cry (rāva) he had uttered, and sends him away, with the gift of a sword bestowed on him at his request (v. 43).

<sup>28</sup> His words are: Kailāsa-sikhara-chātana-velāyām Rāvaṇasya strī-nimittam maraṇam ity evaṁ-rūpam ity āhuḥ | "They say that at the time when he shook the summit of Kailāsa a curse was pronounced on Rāvaṇa that he should die on account of a woman."

The legend of Rambhā is narrated in the thirty-first section of the Uttara Kāṇḍa. Rāvaṇa goes with his army to Kailāsa, to conquer the gods. He there sees the Rambhā, the most beautiful of all the Apsarases, and is smitten with her charms (v. 20). She says she is properly his daughter-in-law, being the wife of Nalakūvara (son of his brother Kuvera), with whom she has an assignation, and cannot therefore receive his addresses (v. 34). Rāvaṇa says the Apsarases are mere courtezans, without any husbands, and ravishes her (v. 41). She goes and reports the outrage to Nalakūvara (46), who, after touching all his organs of sense (chakur-ādīndriya-gaṇaṁ sarvaṁ | Comm.) with water, launches the following curse against Rāvaṇa: v. 54. Akāmā tena yasmāt tvam belād bhadre pradharshitā | 55. Tasmāt sa yuvatīm anyām nākāmām upayāsyati | yadā hy akāmām kāmārto dharshayishyati yoshitam | mūrdhā tu saptadhā tasya śakalibharitā tadā | “Since thou, kind lady, who hadst no passion for him, hast been forcibly insulted by him, he shall not approach any other damsel who does not reciprocate his passion. For when through passion he shall ravish any woman who has no passion for him, his head shall split into seven fragments.” Hearing of this curse, Rāvaṇa resolves to abstain from offering violence to women.

I have not noticed in the Uttara Kāṇḍa any story about the daughter of Varuṇa, but the commentator on the text (vi. 60, 11) explains the allusion to her thus: Varuṇa-kanyakā Puṇjikasthalī tan-nimittam brahma-śāpaḥ strī-dharshane maraṇa-rūpaḥ | “The daughter of Varuṇa was Punjikasthalī. On her account, a curse of Brahmā, involving the penalty of death, [was pronounced] on the rape of women.”]

After expressing himself as above (p. 490), Rāvaṇa desires his brother Kumbhakarna (a monster who, owing to the curse of Brahmā,<sup>29</sup> slept for six months at a time, and remained awake for a single day) to be awakened. This is with immense difficulty effected. Kumbhakarna asks (vv. 67 ff.) why they have awakened him, and is told that they stand in dread, not of the gods but of a man, Rāma (v. 72: mānushān no bhayaṁ rājan tumulam sampradhāvitam | ityādi); when he assures them that he will destroy their foes, and himself drink the blood of Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa. After drinking two thousand jars of liquor, he goes to see and consult with his brother Rāvaṇa; who, in answer to his enquiry, describes to him (sect. 62) the present position of

affairs, and the necessity there is to obtain his assistance. Kumbhakarna, in reply, delivers (sect. 63, vv. 2-21) a moral discourse on the wickedness of Ravana's conduct, such as we should scarcely have expected from the speaker's antecedents; and is told by Ravana in answer (vv. 23-27) that this is not the time for such lectures, but for action, to which he calls upon him to proceed, if he has any regard for him, or pretensions to valour. Kumbhakarna then promises (vv. 30 ff. of the same section) to destroy the enemies of his brother. But before this last speech of Kumbhakarna, which is given in the forty-second section of Gorresio's recension, that text introduces another speech of the same personage, which occupies vv. 30-53 of the fortieth section, and a further speech of Ravana which fills the forty-first section; both of which are wanting in the Calcutta edition, and even in one of the MSS. consulted by Signor Gorresio, as we learn from his Preface, vol. v. p. xlv. ; and might, as he thinks, be omitted without detriment, or perhaps with advantage, to the connexion of the ideas, and the march of the poem. Some account must, however, be given of this speech, as in it Kumbhakarna gives the same account of the divine origin of Rama, as we have already met in the earlier part of the poem (see p. 139 ff., above). He says that one day he had seen the divine sage Nārada, who had told him that he had just returned from an assembly of the gods who had met to take counsel for the destruction of the Rāxasas, on which occasion Brahmā had spoken as follows (sect. x. 40, 44 ff. cd. Gorr.): Evam ukte tu vachane Brahmā devān uvācha ha | abadhyatvam mayā dattam deva-dāityaiścha rāxasaiḥ | mānusebhyo bhayaṁ tasya vānarebhyascha devatāḥ | surāsurasamūhe 'pi badhas tasya na vidyate | tasmād esha Hariḥ devaḥ padmanābhas trivikramaḥ | putro Daśarathasyāstu chaturbāhuḥ sanātanaḥ | bhavanto vasudhām gatvā Viṣṇor asya mahātmanah | vānarāṇām tanuṁ kritvā sahāyatvam karishyatha | 'When [the priest of the gods Vṛihaspati] had thus spoken, Brahmā said to the gods: 'I have conferred [on Ravana] indestructibility by gods Daityas and Rāxasas: he has, o gods, to fear men and monkeys. Nor can he be killed by all the gods or Asuras. Wherefore let this god Hari (Viṣṇu) from whose navel sprang a lotus, who is thrice-striding, four-armed, and eternal, become the son of Daśaratha. You, gods, repairing to the earth, and assuming the form of monkeys, shall assist the mighty Viṣṇu.' " Kumbhakarna says that Vishṇu has taken the human form of Rāma, and come to slay them. He therefore advises that Sītā should be restored, and peace made with Rāma, before whom the three worlds bow down.

In reply to this exhortation, Rāvaṇa utters the following defiance of Vishṇu (sect. 41, 2 ff. ed. Gorr.): Ko 'sau Vishṇur iti khyāto yasya tvam tāta bibhyase | devatve na namasye tam tathā 'nyān devatā-gaṇān | manushyatvaṁ gate tasmin kim bhayam tvāṁ upasthitam | nityam samara-bhī-tāstu mānushāḥ sumahābala | khādayitvā tu tān pūrvam katham paśchād namāmy aham | pranāmya mānusham Rāmam Sītām datvā tu tasya vai | hāsyā-bhūtas tu lokānām anuyāsyāmi prishṭhataḥ | Rāghavam tam mahā-bāho dīpa-rūpo 'tha dūsa-rat | riddhiṁ cha paśyamāno 'sya katham tāx-yāmi jīvitum | hrītvā tasya purā bhāryyam mānaṁ kṛtvā sudūruṇam | pranamed Rāvaṇo Rāmam esha te buddhi-nirṇayaḥ | yadi Rāmaḥ svayaṁ Vishṇur Laxmaṇo 'pi Satakratuḥ | Sugrīvas Tryambakaḥ sāxāt svayam Brahmā tu Jāmbavān | aho śāstrāṇy adhitāni yasya te buddhir idṛśi | atitāśramiṇāṁ Rāmaṁ yo namaskarttum ichhasi | devatvaṁ yaḥ parityajya mānushīm yonim āsṛitaḥ | asmān hantuṁ khilāyātāḥ sa sandheyaḥ katham mayā | yadvā Rāghavo Vishṇur vyaktaṁ te śrotram āgataḥ | devatānām hitārthaṁ tu pravishṭo mānushīm tanum | sa vūnarānām rājānaṁ Sugrīvam śaraṇāṁ gataḥ | aho 'sya sadṛśāṁ sakhyāṁ tiryagyoni-gataiḥ saha | vīrya-kīnas tu kiṁ Vishṇur yaḥ śṛitaḥ ṛixa-vūnarān | athavā vīrya-hīno 'sau yena pūrvam mahāsuraḥ | vāmanaṁ rūpam āsthāya yāchitas tripadaḥ padam | Balis tu dīxito yajñe tena tvāṁ sakhyam ichhasi | yena dattā mahi sarvā sa-sāgara-vanānṛavā | upachāra-kṛitā pūrvam sa baddho yajña-dīxitaḥ | upakūṛi hātas tena so 'smūn raxati vairiṇaḥ | yadā me nirjīta devāḥ svargaṁ gtvā tvayā saha | tadā kim nāsti Vishṇutvaṁ tasya devasya Rāxasa | sāmprataṁ kuta āyātāḥ sa Vishṇur yasya bibhyase | śūrīra-raxaṇārthāya brūshe tvāṁ vākyam idṛśam | nāyaṁ klīvayitum kālaḥ kālo yoddhuṁ nīśāchara | svāmyam Pitāmahāt prāptaṁ trailokyāṁ vaśa-gaṁ kṛitam | Rāghavam pranāme kasmād hīna-vīrya-parākramam | tad gachha śayanīyaṁ tvam piva tvam vigata-jvaraḥ | śayamānaṁ na hanyāt tvāṁ Rāghavo Laxmaṇas tathā | ahaṁ Rāmam badhishyāmi Sugrīvāṇcha sa-Laxmaṇam | vānarāmścha hanishyāmi tato devān mahā-rane | Vishṇuñchaiva badhishyami ye cha Vishṇv-anuyāyinaḥ | gachha gachhasva tat xetraṁ chiraṁ jīva sukhī bhava | bhrātaram tv evam uktvā 'sau Rāvaṇaḥ Kāla-choditaḥ | sāvalepaṁ sa-garjaṇcha punar vacchanam abravīt | jānāmi Sītām dharaṇī-prasūtām jūnāmi Rāmam Madhusū-

“Who is that being called Viśhṇu, whom thou fearest? In his divinity I reverence neither him, nor any of the other hosts of gods: what fear is this, then, which has seized you, now that he has become a man? Men are always afraid of battle. When I have formerly eaten them, how can I afterwards bow down before them? Paying reverence to the mortal Rāma, and restoring Sītā, how could I,—an object of derision to the universe,—follow behind Rāghava in humility like a slave? and beholding his prosperity, how could I live? This is thy opinion, that after carrying off Rāma’s wife, and manifesting terrible haughtiness, Rāvaṇa should bow down before him! Even if Rāma were Viśhṇu himself, and Lakṣmaṇa were Indra, if Sugrīva were Tryambaka (Śiva), and if Jāmbavat were Brahmā, [I could not do so]. O thou hast [well] studied the Sāstras, thou who so thinkest, and who desirest to make obeisance to Rāma who stands without the four orders of society; who, abandoning his divine nature, has entered into a mortal womb! How can I make peace with him who has come to kill me? Or if it has distinctly reached thy ears that Rāma is Viśhṇu, and has entered into a mortal body for the welfare of the gods, [still] he has resorted [for help] to Sugrīva the king of the monkeys. How suitable is his friendship with brutes! Is then Viśhṇu destitute of valour that he has sought [the aid of] bears and monkeys? Or, he is [certainly] devoid of valour who formerly assuming the form of a dwarf, demanded of the great Asura three paces of ground, while Bali was consecrated for the sacrifice: with such a person thou desirest friendship! He (Bali) who formerly presented to him the whole earth with its oceans, forests, and seas, was bound by him when consecrated for sacrifice! A benefactor was destroyed by him, and he is to deliver us who are his enemies! When I went to heaven with thee and conquered the gods, had not this god then his character of Viśhṇu? Whence has this Viśhṇu now come, whom thou fearest? Thou speakest such words to save thy body [from injury in battle]. This is not the time for timidity, Rāxasa, but for fighting. I have obtained dominion from

Brahmā; the three worlds are subject to me; why should I bow down before Rāma who is destitute of energy and valour? Go, therefore, to thy couch; drink, free from disquiet. Neither Rāma nor Laxmaṇa will kill thee when thou art sleeping. I shall slay Rāma, and Sugrīva, and Laxmaṇa, and the monkeys, and then the gods also in a great battle. I shall kill Viṣṇu too, and all Viṣṇu's followers. Go, go then to thy abode, live long, live at ease.' Having thus, impelled by fate, spoken to his brother with arrogance and noise, Rāvaṇa said again: 'I know Sītā, who is sprung from the earth; I know Rāma and Madhusūdana. And this I know, that I am to be slain by him; and therefore have I carried off this daughter of Janaka. It is not from passion or from anger that I retain her: I desire, being slain, to go to that highest abode of Viṣṇu.' "

The change of tone in this last short speech is remarkable. The defier of Viṣṇu all at once acknowledges his deity and becomes his humble worshipper. This looks like a still later addition to the preceding part of the section, inserted by some editor who considered the earlier portion to be too blasphemous to be allowed to stand without some qualification, or recantation.

Again, after Rāvaṇa's death, Mandodarī, the highest in rank of his queens, in the lament which she utters for her husband's loss, speaks as follows (sect. 113, 5 ff., Calc. ed.): *Sa tvam mānusha-mātrena Rāmeṇa yudhi nirjitaḥ | na vyapatrapase rājan kim idaṁ rūxaseśvara | 6. “5. Art not thou ashamed, o king, to have been conquered by Rāma, a mere man? What is this, lord of the Rāxasas? 6. How did a man frequenting the forests slay thee who hadst assailed the three worlds, who wast distinguished by good fortune and heroism, and unconquerable? 7. That thou who movedst at will, invisible to men, shouldst have been destroyed by Rāma is inconceivable. 8. I do not credit this act of Rāma in the front of the battle, the overthrow by him of thee who wast endowed in every way. 9. Either Death (Kṛitānta) came in the form of Rāma, applying an unimagined magic for thy destruction, (10) or thou hast been overwhelmed by Vāsava (Indra). But what power had Vāsava in battle even to look at thee, who wast (11) the mighty in force and heroism, the glorious enemy of the gods? This was manifestly the great contemplator (Mahāyogin), the supreme spirit, the eternal, (12) without beginning, middle, or end, the great Being superior to the greatest, superior to darkness, the sustainer, the wielder of the shell, the discus, and the club, (13) who bears the śrīvatsa on his breast, who enjoys perpetual prosperity, the invincible, everlasting, unchanging, Viṣṇu, of genuine prowess, who had assumed a human form, (14) and was attended by all the gods in the shape of monkeys. This glorious and resplendent lord of all the worlds, desiring the good of all the worlds, (15) slew thee, the mighty, the heroic, the terrific, enemy of the gods, with thy attendant Rāxasas. 16. Formerly, by subduing thy senses, thou did subdue the three worlds; but thou wast [afterwards, i.e. when thou didst carry off Sītā, etc.] overcome by thy senses, which, as it were, remembered [and revenged] that [former] hostility [of thine towards them]. For since thy brother Khara, attended by many Rāxasas, was slain [by Rāma] in Janasthāna, Rāma is not a mere mortal.”

If this quotation from the Calcutta edition be compared with the corresponding passage of Gorresio's text (sect. 95), it will be found that, on this occasion, the former is more diffuse than the latter. Verses 5-8 are nearly the same in both recensions; but instead of one verse (the ninth) affirming the divine character of Rāma, which we find in Gorresio's edition, there are in the Calcutta recension seven verses, in most of which, at least, the same idea is enforced. The ninth and tenth verses of Gorresio's edition are as follows: 9. Athavā āma-rūpeṇa Viṣṇuś cha svayam āgataḥ | tava nāsūya māyābhiḥ praviśyānupalaxitaḥ | 10. Yadaiva hi Janasthāne rāxasair bahubhir vṛitaḥ | Kharas tava hato bhrātā tadaivāsau na mānushhaḥ | "Or Viṣṇu himself came in the form of Rāma, having entered into it unperceived, through supernatural powers, for thy destruction. 10. For since thy brother Khara, attended by many Rāxasas, was slain by [Rāma] in Janasthāna, Rāma is not a mere mortal." It will be observed that here a verse (the tenth) which corresponds to the seventeenth of the Calcutta edition, immediately succeeds the ninth, and that consequently there is in Gorresio's text no such development of the idea contained in the ninth verse as we find in vv. 10-15 of the other edition. Now if we are to suppose that the original text of the Rāmāyaṇa made no allusion to Rāma being an incarnation of Viṣṇu, it might at first sight seem as if the ninth verse of the Calcutta text, which represents Death (Kṛitānta) as taking the form of Rāma, was more genuine than the corresponding verse of Gorresio's edition, which declares that Viṣṇu assumed the form of that hero. In this case, verses 11 ff. of the Calcutta edition, which represent Rāma as an incarnate deity, would be a subsequent interpolation. But the eleventh and following verses appear, on examination, to hang well together with those which precede; and if the entire passage thus forms one connected whole, we can only (on the hypothesis that Rāma's divine nature was foreign to the original poem) suppose that the interpolation, or alteration, has extended over a wider surface. It is worthy of remark that the hundred and thirteenth section of the Calcutta edition is in other parts also more developed than Gorresio's. Thus after verse 40 of the Calcutta edition, corresponding to verse 28 of Gorresio's, eighteen verses are inserted which are not in the latter, and after verse 59 of the Calcutta edition—verse 29 of Gorresio's, twelve verses are found which are wanting in the latter. From this it would appear that both recensions have, in different places, received developments after they began to be separately handed down, unless, indeed, we are to assume that that followed by Gorresio

In the passage which I shall next quote, the legend makes no mention of the incarnation of Viṣṇu, but specifies the birth of Sītā as the means whereby Rāvana is to be destroyed. After the Rāxasas had been defeated by Rāma and driven back into Lankā, their females loudly bewailed the calamities by which their race had been overtaken. In the course of this lament, they say (sect. 95, vv. 25 ff. Calc. ed.): Rudro vā yadi vā Viṣṇur Mahendro vā Sātakratuḥ | hanti no Rāma-rūpeṇa yadi vā svayam Antakaḥ | hata-pravīrā Rāmeṇa nirāśā jīvite vāyam | apaśyanto<sup>32</sup> bhayasyāntam anāthā vilapāmahe | Rāma-hastād Daśagrīvaḥ śūro datta-mahāvaraḥ | idam bhayam mahāghoraṁ samutpannam na budhyate | taṁ na devā na gandharvā na piśāchā na rāxasāḥ | upaśriṣṭam<sup>33</sup> parikrāntuṁ śaktā Rāmeṇa saṁyuge | utpātāśchāpi dṛśyante Rāvanasya raṇe raṇe | kathayanti hi Rāmeṇa Rāvanasya nivarhanam | Pitāmahena prītena deva-dānava-rāxasaiḥ | Rāvanasyābhayaṁ dattam manushebhyo na yāchitam | tad idam mānusham manye prāptaṁ niḥsaṁśa-yam bhayam | jīvītānta-karaṁ ghoraṁ rāxasāṁ Rāvanasya cha | pīḍya-mānās tu balinā vara-dānena rāxasā | dīptais tapoblir vibudhāḥ Pitā-maham apūjayan | devatānāṁ hitārthāya mahātmā vai Pitāmahaḥ | urācha devatās tushṭa idaṁ sarvā mahad vachaḥ | adya-prabhṛiti lokāṁs trīn sarve dānava-rāxasāḥ | bhayena prāvṛitā nityaṁ vicarishyanti śūsvatam<sup>34</sup> daivatais tu samāgamya sārvaś Chandra-purogamaiḥ | vṛiṣha-dhruvas Tripura-hā Mahādevaḥ pratoshitaḥ | prasanna tu Mahā-devo devān etad vacho 'bravīt | utpatsyati hitārthāya vo nārī rāxasayāvahā | eśā devaiḥ prayuktā tu xud yathā<sup>35</sup> dānavān purā | bhaya-yishyati naḥ sarvān rāxasa-ghnī sa-rāvaṇān | Rāvanasyāpanītena<sup>36</sup> durvinītasya durmateḥ | ayaṁ nishṭhānako ghoraḥ śokena samabhiplutaḥ | Tanna paśyāmahe loka ye naḥ śarāṇa-do bhavet | Rāghavenopasṛiṣṭānām kālēneva yugaxaye | "Either Rudra, or Viṣṇu, or Indra Sātakratu, or Death himself slays us in the form of Rāma. Having had our heroes destroyed by Rāma, we despair of life. Seeing no end of our apprehension, we lament, deprived of our protectors. The heroic Daśagrīva (Rāvaṇa) who had received a great boon [from Brahmā] does not perceive this great cause of alarm which [comes] from the hand of Rāma. Neither gods, nor Gandharvas, nor Piśāchas, nor Rāxasas, are able to deliver (?) him when assailed by Rāma in battle. Portents, too, regarding Rāvaṇa are seen in every battle, which foretell his destruction by Rāma. Pitāmaha, gratified, granted to Rāvaṇa security against gods, Dānavas and Rāxasas, but he did not ask [to be secured] against men. This dreadful danger from men, has now, I think, without doubt arrived, which shall terminate the life of Rāvaṇa and the Rāxasas. The gods when oppressed by the Rāxasa (Rāvaṇa) who was mighty through the boon which [Brahmā] had conferred on him, worshipped Pitāmaha (Brahmā) with ardent austerities. The great Pitāmaha, pleased, addressed this great word to all the deities for their benefit: 'From this day forward all the Dānavas and Rāxasas shall roam continually through the three worlds, overwhelmed with fear.' All the gods,<sup>37</sup> with Chandra (the Moon) at their head, assembled and propitiated Mahādeva, whose banner is a bull, and who destroyed Tripura (or, the three cities). He, being pleased, thus spake to them: 'For your benefit there shall arise a female who shall bring destruction to the Rāxasas.' This female slayer<sup>38</sup> of Rāxasas, being commissioned by the gods, shall [now] devour all of us, including Rāvaṇa; as Hunger formerly<sup>39</sup> [devoured] the Dānavas. Through the folly of the misguided and wicked Rāvaṇa this dreadful destruction surrounded by affliction has come upon us. Therefore we see no one in the world who shall afford protection to us assailed by Rāma, as it were by Time at the end of the ages."

above (p. 391 f.) from the Uttara Kāṇḍa. Could it have been one form of the legend that Sitā, and not Viṣṇu, was the real destroyer of Rāvaṇa?

In an earlier part of the poem it is related that after Rāma had slain the Rāxasa Khara, he was congratulated by the gods in a way which is scarcely consistent with the idea that the poet regarded him as an incarnation of Viṣṇu:

Āraṇya Kāṇḍa (or Third Book) 30, v. 27 ff. (Calc. ed.).—Sa papāta Khara bhūmau dahyamānaḥ śarāgninā | Rudreṇeva vinīrdagdhah śvetārāṇye yathā 'ndhakah | sa Vṛittra iva vajrena phenena Namuchir yathā | Bala vandraśani-hato nipapāta hataḥ Kharah | etasminn antare devās chāraṇaiḥ saha saṅgatāḥ | dundubhīmśchābhiniḥnantah pushpa-varshaṁ samantataḥ | Rāmasyopari saṁhrishtā vacarshur vismitās tadā | arddhādhika-muhūrttena Rāmeṇa niśitaiḥ śaraiḥ | chaturdaśa sahasrāṇi raxasāṁ kāma-rūpiṇām | Khara-Dūshana-mukhyānām nihatāni mahāmṛidhe | aho vata mahat karma Rāmasya viditātmanah | aho vīryyam aho dārdhyaṁ Viṣṇor iva hi dṛśyate | ity evam uktrā te sarve yayur devā yathāgatam | “Burnt up by the fire of the arrow, Khara fell like Andhaka who was formerly consumed by Rudra in the white forest. He fell like Vṛittra smitten by the thunderbolt, like Namuchi by the foam,<sup>40</sup> or like Bala by the lightning of Indra. At this moment the gods, joined with the Chāraṇas, beating kettle-drums, delighted, rained on Rāma a shower of flowers all round, and [said] in astonishment: ‘In a muhūrta and a half (two hours) fourteen thousand Rāxasas, changing their shapes at will, headed by Khara and Dūshana, have been slain by Rāma with sharp arrows in a great fight. O what a mighty exploit of Rāma, sage in spirit (or, who knows himself)! O, his valour and his firmness are seen to be like those of Viṣṇu!’ Having thus spoken, all those gods went as they came.”

The writer of these verses could scarcely have regarded Rāma as an incarnation of Viṣṇu, or it would have been superfluous to compare him with that deity. In the corresponding section of Gorresio's edition (the thirty-fifth) these verses are not given, but the several classes of rishis are introduced as [among other things] saying to Rāma (vv. 105 ff.) that all the gods, Gandharvas, etc., were praising him with triumphal benedictions (jayāśīrbhiḥ), and that Brahmā and Mahādeva were paying him honour. Rāma is then said to have "made obeisance to the gods whom he saw not far off standing on their celestial cars," (namaśchakre vimānasthān dṛiṣṭvā 'dūre divaukasaḥ |).

The following is another passage occurring in the Calcutta edition, but not in Gorresio's, in which Rāma, when about to engage in battle with Rāvana, is recommended by Agastya to utter a hymn to the Sun, which will ensure his victory over his enemy. Not a word is said of Rāma's own divinity, and in fact the use of such a prayer does not seem to harmonize with such a character :

He by his beams sustains the gods, the Asuras, and the worlds. 8. He is both Brahmā and Viṣṇu, Śiva and Skanda, Prajāpati, Indra, Kuvera, Kāla (Time), Yama, Soma, and the lord of waters (Varuṇa), (9) the Pitṛis, Vasus, Sādhyas, Aśvins, Manu, Vāyu, Agni, the breath of creatures, the former of the seasons, the producer of light, Āditya, Savitṛi, Sūryya, moving in the sky, Pūshan, the radiant, of golden hue, the shining, who has golden seed, the maker of the day.” Then follow (vv. 11–15) many other titles of the Sun, succeeded (vv. 15–21) by invocations addressed to him under various appellations, among which is (v. 19) Brahmesānāchyuteśāya,<sup>43</sup> “lord of Brahmā, Iśāna (Śiva), and Achyuta (Viṣṇu).” After some further eulogies of the Sun, Rāma is again exhorted to worship this deity (vv. 26 ff.): “Worship with fixed mind this god of gods, the lord of the world. Having thrice muttered this [hymn], thou shalt conquer in battles; in this moment, o great-armed, thou shalt slay Rāvaṇa.’ Having thus spoken, Agastya went as he had come. After hearing this, the vigorous Rāma became then freed from grief; and, with well-governed spirit, bore it in his memory. Beholding the Sun, and muttering this hymn, he attained the highest joy. Having thrice rinsed his mouth, and become pure, the hero took his bow. Beholding

Rāvaṇa with gladdened spirit, he approached to vanquish him ; and with great intentness became bent upon his slaughter. Then the Sun looking upon Rāma with rejoicing mind, exceedingly exulting, knowing the [approaching] destruction of the chief of the Rāxasas, and going into the midst of the gods, uttered the word 'speed.' ”

This extract, as I have said above, is entirely wanting in Gorresio's edition, in which a verse (the last of its eighty-ninth section) corresponding with the last in the hundred-and-fifth section of the Calc. ed., is succeeded immediately by one (Gorr. 90, 1) corresponding to the fourth verse of the hundred-and-seventh section of the Calcutta edition. The whole of the matter which is wanting in Gorresio may be omitted without detriment to the connection ; and in fact the recurrence at the beginning of the hundred-and-seventh section (Calc. ed.) of expressions repeating in substance what had been said at the close of the hundred-and-fifth would lead to the conclusion that the whole of the hundred-and-sixth section was interpolated. On the other hand, it seems strange that a passage which appears to militate against Rāma's divine character, should be a later addition. The only conceivable motive for such an interpolation would be to glorify the Sun by the insertion of this hymn in celebration of his praise, an object which does not bear upon the main design of the Rāmāyaṇa.

The following is, on the other hand, a passage which may be understood as ascribing a superhuman nature to Rāma. After Vibhīṣaṇa had deserted his brother Rāvaṇa, and come over to Rāma's side, a consultation took place among the friends of the latter, whether the deserter was deserving of confidence or not. Some regarded him with suspicion, but Rāma himself was in favour of receiving him with open arms. In the course of the conversation he asks (Yuddha Kāṇḍa 18, 22 f., Calc. ed.): Sudushṭo vā'py adushṭo vā kim esha rajanī-charaḥ | sūxmam apy ahitaṁ karttum mama śaktaḥ kathañchana | piśā-chān dānavān yaxān prithivyām chaiva rāxasān | aṅguly-agreṇa tān hanyām ichhan hari-gaṇeśvara | “Whether the Rāxasa be good or bad, what, even the smallest, injury can he do to me in any way? If I wish, I can destroy Piśāchas, Dānavas, Yaxas, and Rāxasas on the earth, with the tip of my finger.” This mode of expression rather points to an inherent divine power. In Gorresio's edition the expression is somewhat different. Rāma there says (Sundara K. 91, 3) that he could destroy all those beings "forthwith, and by the power of a divine weapon" (śakto 'haṁ sahasā hantum divyenāstra-balena cha), which may be understood of a derived power. However this may be, it turned out upon trial that Rāma was unable to dispose of his enemies so summarily, as we have seen above in the case of his conflict with Indrajit (p. 383 ff.).

The termination of Rāma's terrestrial career is thus told in sections 116 ff. of the Uttara Kāṇḍa. Time, in the form of an ascetic, comes to his palace-gate (116, 1 ff.), and asks, as the messenger of the great rishi (Brahmā), to see Rāma (v. 3). He is admitted and received with honour (v. 9), but says, when asked what he has to communicate, that his message must be delivered in private, and that any one who witnesses the interview is to lose his life (v. 13). Rāma informs Laxmaṇa of all this, and desires him to stand outside. Time then tells Rāma (117, 1) that he has been sent by Brahmā to say that when he (Rāma, i.e. Viṣṇu), after destroying the worlds, was sleeping on the ocean, he had formed him (Brahmā) from the lotus springing from his navel, and committed to him the work of creation (vv. 4-7); that he (Brahmā) had then entreated Rāma to assume the function of Preserver, and that the latter had in consequence become Viṣṇu, being born as the son of Aditi (v. 10), and had determined to deliver mankind by destroying Rāvaṇa, and to live on earth ten thousand and ten hundred years; that period, adds Time, was now on the eve of expiration (v. 13), and Rāma could either, at his pleasure, prolong his stay on earth, or ascend to heaven and rule over the gods (v. 15). Rāma replies (v. 18) that he had been born for the good of the three worlds, and would now return to the place whence he had come, as it was his function to fulfil the purposes of the gods. While they are speaking, the irritable rishi Durvāsas<sup>44</sup> comes, and insists on seeing Rāma immediately, under a threat, if refused, of cursing Rāma and all his family (118, 1 ff.). Laxmaṇa, preferring to save his kinsmen, though knowing that his own death must be the consequence of interrupting the interview of Rāma with Time, enters the palace, and reports the rishi's message to Rāma (v. 8 f.). Rāma comes out, and when Durvāsas has got the food he wished, and departed, Rāma reflects with great distress on the words of Time, which require that Laxmaṇa should die (v. 16). Laxmaṇa, however (119, 2 f.), exhorts Rāma not to grieve, but to abandon him, and not break his own promise. The counsellors concurring in this advice (v. 9), Rāma abandons Laxmaṇa, who goes to the river Sarayū, suppresses all his senses, and is conveyed bodily by Indra to heaven. The gods are delighted by the arrival of the fourth part of Viṣṇu (v. 19). Rāma then resolves to install Bharata as his successor, and retire to the forest and follow Laxmaṇa (120, 1 ff.). Bharata, however, refuses the succession, and determines to accompany his brother (v. 8). Rāma's subjects are filled with grief, and say they also will follow him wherever he goes (v. 12). Messengers are sent to Śatrughna, the other brother, and he also resolves to accompany Rāma (121, 1-14); who at length sets out in procession from his capital with all the ceremonial appropriate to the "great departure" (mahā-prasthāna, 122, 1 ff.), silent, indifferent to external objects, joyless, with Śrī on his right, the goddess Earth on his left, Energy in front, attended by all his weapons in human shapes, by the Vedas in the forms of Brahmans, by the Gāyatrī, the Omkāra, the Vashaṭkāra, by rishis, by his women, female slaves, eunuchs, and servants. Bharata with his family, and Śatrughna, follow, together with Brahmans bearing the sacred fire, and the whole of the people of the country, and even with animals, etc. etc. Rāma, with all these attendants, comes to the banks of the Sarayū (sect. 123). Brahmā, with all the gods, in innumerable celestial cars, now appears, and all the sky is refulgent with the divine splendour. Pure and fragrant breezes blow, a shower of flowers falls. Rāma enters the waters of the Sarayū; and Brahmā utters a voice from the sky, saying: "Approach, Viṣṇu; Rāghava, thou hast happily arrived, with thy god-like brother. Enter thine own body as Viṣṇu, or the eternal æther. For thou art the abode of the worlds (loka-gatiḥ): no one comprehends thee, the inconceivable and imperishable, except the large-eyed Māyā, thy primeval spouse." Hearing these words, Rāma enters the glory of Viṣṇu (Vaiṣṇavaṁ tejas) with his body and his followers. He then asks Brahmā to find an abode for the people who had accompanied him from devotion to his person, and Brahmā appoints them a celestial residence accordingly.

Instead of describing any such resumption of his divine nature, the Mahābhārata (Droṇa-parva, v. 2246) merely speaks of Rāma's going to heaven with four kinds of creatures (chaturvidhāḥ prajā Rāmaḥ svar-gam nītvā divaṁ gataḥ). The Rāmopākhyāna in the Mahābhārata does not describe the apotheosis of Rāma at all.

The probability that many of the verses in the preceding passages which I have above suspected to be spurious may really be such, is greatly strengthened by the fact that the commentators on the poem themselves note various texts which they regard as interpolated. Thus the commentator on Kishk. K. sect. 43 (Calc. ed.) remarks on 46 ff. : Itaḥ uttaram kechid "ramante sahītās tatra nārībhiḥ bhāsvara-prabhāḥ" (v. 50) ity antāḥ ślokaḥ praxiptāḥ prāchīna-pustakeshu anupalambhād iti Katakāḥ | "Kataka (a previous commentator) says that after this (forty-sixth verse) some verses ending with the words (in the 'fiftieth verse) 'They sport there resplendent, along with their women,' are rejected, because they are not found in the old copies."

At the end of the twenty-third section of the Uttara Kāṇḍa, the commentator remarks: Itaḥ param pañcha-sargāḥ praxiptā bodhyāḥ | "After this five sections are to be regarded as rejected." On these five sections, the twenty-fourth to the twenty-eighth, he gives no commentary. In sect. 24, v. 42, Kansa is mentioned by anachronism.

At the end of the forty-second section of the same book the commentator furnishes the following piece of sensible criticism: Etad-uttaram Bāli-Sugrīvotpatti-pratishṭhā Rāvanasya Sveta-dvīpa-gamuneti-hāsaś cha kapatīyāiḥ (katipayaiḥ ?) sargair Agastyoktīṭayā kvachit pustakeshu drīṣyate | tat-pūrva-sargānte eva Agastyasya āśrama-gamana-kathanāsaṅgate | Kataka-Tīrthādy-anūdattatvād mayā 'pi na vyākhyātāḥ | Uttare bahavaḥ sargāḥ praxiptāḥ | "That which follows—viz. the celebration of the birth of Bāli and Sugrīva, and the story of Rāvana's journey to Sveta-dvīpa—is found in some copies, as being related by Agastya in (?) several sections. But as these sections have not been received by Kataka, Tīrtha, and other [previous commentators], owing to their inconsistency with the account [given] at the end of the previous section (41, vv. 51, 58 ff.) of Agastya's departure to his hermitage, I have left them uncommented." Sections 43–47 are accordingly without any commentary.

Kataka and Tīrtha on the ground of spuriousness. And the story of the vulture and owl which follows is [only] found in some copies." Sections 70-72 have no comment; and in fact the beginning of section 73 seems to be connected with the end of section 69.

From these extracts it is clear that various passages which are still preserved in the Rāmāyaṇa were regarded by the commentators as spurious because they were not to be found in the oldest MSS. extant in their day, or because they contained something inconsistent with the context in which they occur. The judgment of these commentators is no doubt correct, especially as they must have been well acquainted with the habit which, we need not hesitate to assume, prevailed in their day, as internal evidence proves it to have prevailed in India for many centuries past, of interpolating legendary works such as the Purāṇas and Itihāsas, the style of which, from its simplicity, offers the greatest facilities for imitation. But if such interpolation be admitted by the commentators as practised in their time, it is natural to suppose that it must have been practised at an earlier period also. And the example of the Mahābhārata confirms this supposition.

After reviewing most of the passages, which I have cited above, in which Rāma's divine character is alluded to, as they are given in his own edition, and, in addition, the section which I have cited in p. 148 ff.,<sup>45</sup> Signor Gorresio remarks as follows (vol. x. Preface, p. xlvii. f.): "What are we to conclude from all this? Notwithstanding the citations adduced, I would not yet venture to pronounce a definitive judgment on this question (whether the idea of the incarnation of Viṣṇu in Rāma was an original part of the conception of the poem, or interpolated). The passages quoted only prove that the interpolation, if it be such, has been made with great study and much art. But in order thoroughly to elucidate this question, we must have recourse to other documents, and seek for other proofs and indications than the poem itself supplies. Our sentence, therefore, remains suspended."

<sup>45</sup> On this passage he observes (p. xlvii.): "Among the names here assigned to Viṣṇu some of a sufficiently suspicious character are found, such as that of Kṛishṇa, which I do not recollect to have discovered in any other part of the poem. Besides, this chapter has no close bond to connect it with the context, and might be removed without the least injury to the poem."

Yuddhishtira by the sage Mārkaṇḍeya, in the Vana-parva, vv. 15872-16602. In this episode it is briefly related (v. 15878 f.) that Daśaratha had four sons, born of his three queens. The birth and history of Rāvaṇa and his brothers are described in much greater detail (vv. 15881-15928), and many particulars are given which do not occur in the earlier part of the Rāmāyaṇa, though the Uttara Kāṇḍa contains a similar account. According to the episode in the Mahābhārata, Brahmā had a mental son Pulastya, who again had a son Vaiśravaṇa. The latter deserted his father and went to Brahmā, who as a reward made him immortal and appointed him the god of riches, with Lankā for his capital, and the car Puṣhpaka for his vehicle. His father, Pulastya, however, being incensed at this desertion of himself, created another son, Viśravas, who looked on Vaiśravaṇa with ill-will. The latter, to pacify his father<sup>46</sup> (v. 15890 ff), gave him three elegant Rāxasīs to attend on him: Puṣpotkaṭā, who had two sons, Rāvaṇa and Kumbhakarṇa; Mālinī, who bore Vibhīṣhaṇa; and Rākā, who bore Khara, and Śūrpaṇakhā. These sons were all valiant, skilled in the Veda, and observers of religious rites; but perceiving the prosperity of Vaiśravaṇa, they were filled with jealousy. They accordingly began to practise austerities to propitiate Brahmā, and at the end of a thousand years Rāvaṇa cut off his own head and threw it as an oblation into the fire (v. 15908). Brahmā then appeared to stop their austerities and offer them boons. He ordained that Rāvaṇa should have heads and shapes at will, and should be invincible, except by men; that Kumbhakarṇa should, according to his request, enjoy long sleep<sup>47</sup> • (sa vacre mahatīm nidrām tamasā grasta-chetanah). Vibhīṣhana asks that he may never meditate any unrighteousness, and that the weapon of Brahmā may appear to him unlearned.<sup>48</sup> Having obtained such power, Rāvaṇa expels Vaiśravaṇa (Kuvera) from Lankā.

<sup>46</sup> Viśravas must be here meant, although according to v. 15883 ff. Viśravas appears to have been born after Vaiśravaṇa, and in consequence of the latter having deserted his father, Pulastya. Vaiśravaṇa means the son of Viśravas, and in v. 15925, Vaiśravaṇa (Kuvera) is said to be the brother of Vibhīṣhana, who must have been the son of Viśravas, as his brother Rāvaṇa is called in v. 15930. There appears to be some confusion in the account.

Vibhīṣhaṇa follows his brother<sup>49</sup> (v. 15925) Kuvera, who retires to Gandhamādana (v. 15921). Rāvaṇa having begun to exercise his power tyrannically, the rishis resort for deliverance to Brahmā (v. 15929 ff.), who promises that as Rāvaṇa could not be killed either by gods or Asuras, the four-armed Viṣṇu, the chief of warriors, should descend to earth for his destruction (tad-artham avatīrṇo 'sau man-niyogāch chaturbhujah | Viṣṇuḥ praharatām śreshṭhaḥ sa tat karma karishyati |). No account, is, however, given of the way in which Viṣṇu was to become incarnate in one or more of the sons of Daśaratha; or how this was accomplished. Brahmā also desired Indra and the other gods to beget on the she-bears and she-monkeys sons who should assist Viṣṇu, which they accordingly did. He also gave injunctions to a Gandharvī called Dundubhī, who was born on earth as Mantharā, and stirred up enmity by urging Kaikeyī to claim the succession to Daśaratha's throne for her own son Bharata (vv. 15960 ff.).

This portion of the episode which relates the earlier history of Rāvaṇa, and the means adopted by Brahmā for his destruction, need not have formed an original part of the poem: though an allusion is afterwards made in a later part of it to the monkeys of Rāma's army having been begotten by the gods (v. 16309), where Sāgara, the Ocean, who had appeared to Rāma, is introduced as saying: Asti tatra Nalō nāma vānarah śilpi-sammataḥ | Tvashṭur devasya tanayo balavān Viśvakarmaṇaḥ | "There is there a monkey called Nala, approved by artizans, the strong son of the god Tvashṭri Viśvakarman."

The main incidents in this episode agree, as far as I have examined them, with those of the Rāmāyaṇa: though there are some minor points in which there is a difference between the two. Thus the larger poem appears (as far as I have looked into it) to say nothing of Mantharā being the incarnation of a Gandharvī, though this is alluded to by the commentator in ii. 7, 1 of the Calcutta edition, in these words: Atha Sitāyā Laṅkā-pura-praveśaṁ vinā Rāvaṇa-badhayāśak-

<sup>49</sup> In v. 16158 f. Vibhīṣhaṇa is said to dwell with a white umbrella, and white garlands, on the S'vetaparvata, or, "white mountain," attended by his four counselors, and apart from his disreputable brothers Kumbhakarna, etc., who, naked, with dishevelled hair, and red garlands, frequented the south. In v. 16314, he is said to join Rāma, and it is not mentioned whence he comes; but as his treachery is at first suspected; it might appear to be implied that he came from Lankā, as is expressly related in the Rāmāyaṇa, v. 89, 1, 43, Gorr.; and vi. 17, 1, Calc. ed.

yatayā tat-siddhaye devaiḥ preritāyāḥ kṛita-kubjā-veshayā Mantharāyā Rāmābhisheka-vighna-pravṛittim . . . . . vaktum upakramate | “Now since Rāvaṇa could not be killed unless Sītā entered into Lankā,—with a view to the accomplishment of that, he (the poet) begins to relate how Mantharā, who had been sent by the gods, and had taken the disguise of a hunchback, threw obstacles in the way of Rāvaṇa’s inauguration,” etc. Again, as we have already seen, long periods of sleep are said, in the larger poem, to have been inflicted by Brahmā on Kumbhakarna as a curse, but in the episode to have been granted as a boon.<sup>50</sup> The account which will be given below from the Mahābhārata, is a sort of reconciliation of these two statements. Another discrepancy noticed by the commentator has been already cited above, p. 352, note 327.

In the sequel of the story, as given in the Mahābhārata, it is said that, after the destruction of Rāvaṇa, and the appearance of the gods to persuade Rāma to take back his wife Sītā, Brahmā offered Rāma any boons he might choose, and that Rāma accordingly desired that he might continue steadfast in righteousness, and unconquered by his enemies; and solicited the resurrection of the monkeys who had been killed by the Rāxasas (vv. 1657 ff.). The poet, who represents Rāma as consenting to receive these boons from Brahmā, could scarcely have regarded him as the Supreme Spirit, as he is declared in some parts of the Rāmāyaṇa to have been (see above, p. 148 ff.).<sup>51</sup>

As I have noticed above, the Uttara Kāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa contains an account of the birth, and a sketch of the earlier history, of Rāvaṇa and his brothers, which varies in some particulars from the narrative

<sup>51</sup> My attention has been drawn by a brochure of Professor M. Williams, which is passing through the press, to another passage in the Mahābhārata where Rāma is mentioned. He is there (Drona-parva 2224–2248) celebrated in the most hyperbolic language, as where he is said (v. 2235) to “have transcended all beings, rishis, gods, and men,” but no reference appears to be made to his possessing a divine nature. The word īśvara applied to him in v. 2242 appears to mean only “lord,” and not to be employed in the sense of “god.”

in the Mahābhārata. We are there told how after Rāma had returned to Ayodhyā, and taken possession of the throne, the rishis assembled to greet him, and Agastya, in answer to his questions, recounted many particulars regarding his old enemies. In the Kṛita Yuga (or Golden Age) the austere and pious Brahman-rishi Pulastya, a son of Brahmā, being teased with the visits of different damsels, proclaimed that any one of them whom he again saw near his hermitage should become pregnant. This had not been heard by the daughter of the royal-rishi Trinavindu, who one day came into Pulastya's neighbourhood, and her pregnancy was the result (sect. 2, vv. 14 ff.). After her return home, her father, seeing her condition, took her to Pulastya, who accepted her as his wife, and she bore a son who received the name of Viśravas (v. 32). This son was like his father, an austere and religious sage. He married the daughter of the muni Bharadvāja, who bore him a son, to whom Brahmā gave the name of Vaiśravaṇa = Kuvera (sect. 3, vv. 1 ff.). He performed austerity for thousands of years, when he obtained from Brahmā as a boon, that he should be one of the guardians of the world [along with Indra, Varuṇa, and Yama] and the god of riches (vv. 11 ff.). He afterwards consulted his father Viśravas about an abode, and at his suggestion, took possession of the city of Lankā, which had formerly been built by Viśvakarman for the Rāxasas, but had been abandoned by them through fear of Viṣṇu, and was at that time unoccupied (vv. 23 ff.). Rāma then (sect. 4) says he is surprised to hear that Lankā had formerly belonged to the Rāxasas, as he had always understood that they were the descendants of Pulastya,* and now he learns that they had also another origin. He therefore asks who was their ancestor, and what fault they had committed that they were chased away by Viṣṇu. Agastya replies (vv. 9 ff.) that when Brahmā created the waters, he formed certain beings,—some of whom received the name of Rāxasas,—to guard them. The first Rāxasa kings were Heti and Praheti (v. 14). Heti married a sister of Kāla (Time). She bore him a son Vidyutkeśa (v. 17), who in his turn took for his wife Lankaṭankaṭā, the daughter of Sandhyā (v. 21). She bore him a son Sukeśa, whom she abandoned, but he was seen by Śiva, as he was passing by with his wife Pārvatī (v. 27 ff.), who made the child as old as his mother, and immortal, and gave him a celestial city. Pārvatī, too, gave as a boon to the Rāxasa women the power of immediate conception and parturition (v. 30). Sukeśa married a Gandharvī called Devavatī (sect. 5, v. 3), who bore three sons, Mālyavat, Sumāli, and Māli (v. 6). These sons practised intense austerities (v. 9), when Brahmā appeared (v. 12) and conferred on them invincibility and long life (15). They then harassed the gods (16). Viśvakarman gave them a city, Laṅkā, on the mountain Trikūṭa, on the shore of the southern ocean, which he had built at the command of Indra (v. 25). They marry the three daughters of the Gandharvī Narmadā. Mālyavat's wife, Sundarī, bears Vajramuṣṭi, Virūpāxa, Durmukha, Suptaghna, Yajnakopa, Matta, Unmatta, and one daughter Anakā (v. 35 ff.). Sumāli's wife, Ketumatī, bears Prahasta, Kampana, Vikāṭa, Kālikāmukha, Dhūmrāxa, Daṇḍa, Supārśva, Sanhrādi, Pradyasa, Bhāsakarṇa, and four daughters, Rākā, Pushpotkaṭā, Kaikasī, and Kumbhīnasī (v. 39 ff.). Māli's wife, Vasudā, bore Anala, Nila, Hara, and Sampāti (v. 43). The three Rāxasas, Mālyavat and his two brothers, then began to oppress the gods, rishis, etc.; who (sect. 6, v. 1 ff.) in consequence resort for aid to Mahādeva ("the creator and destroyer of the world, the unborn, imperceptible, the support of all worlds"), who, having regard to his protégé Sukeśa (the father of Mālyavat, etc., see above), says that he cannot kill the Rāxasas (v. 10); but advises the suppliants to go to Viṣṇu, which they do (v. 12), and receive from him a promise that he will destroy their enemies (v. 21). The three Rāxasa kings, hearing of this, consult together (v. 23 ff.), and proceed to heaven to attack the gods (v. 46). Viṣṇu prepares to meet them (v. 63). The battle is described in the seventh section. The Rāxasas are defeated by Viṣṇu with great slaughter, and driven back to Laṅkā, one of their leaders, Māli, being slain (v. 42). Mālyavat remonstrates with Viṣṇu, who was assaulting the rear of the fugitives, on his unwarriorlike conduct, and wishes to renew the combat (sect. 8, v. 3 ff.). Viṣṇu replies that he must fulfil his promise to the gods by slaying the Rāxasas, and that he would destroy them even if they fled to Pātāla (v. 7 ff.). The battle is renewed, but Mālyavat and Sumāli are driven into Laṅkā (v. 20), and being unable to withstand Viṣṇu, at length retire to Pātāla (v. 22). These Rāxasas, Agastya says, were more powerful than Iṣvaṇa, and could only be destroyed by Nārāyaṇa, i.e. by Rāma himself, the eternal indestructible god (v. 24 ff.). Sumāli with his family lived for a long time in Pātāla, while Kuvera dwelt in Lapkā (v. 29). In section 9 it is related that Sumālī once happened to visit the earth, when he observed Kuvera going in his chariot to see his father Viśravas. This leads him to consider how he might restore his own fortunes. He consequently desires his daughter Kaikasī to go and woo Viśravas (v. 12), who receives her graciously. She becomes the mother of the dreadful Rāvaṇa (v. 29), of the huge Kumbhakarṇa (v. 34), of Sūrpanakhā, and of the righteous Vibhīṣhaṇa, who was the last son (v. 35).<sup>52</sup> These children grow up in the forest. Kumbhakarṇa goes about eating rishis (v. 38). Kuvera comes to visit his father (v. 40), when Kaikasī takes occasion to urge her son Rāvaṇa to strive to become like his brother (Kuvera) in splendour. This Rāvaṇa promises to do (v. 45). He then goes to the hermitage of Gokarṇa with his brothers to perform austerity (v. 47). In section 10 their austere observances are described. After a thousand years' penance, Rāvaṇa throws his head as an offering into the fire (v. 10). He repeats this oblation nine times after equal intervals, and is about to do it the tenth time, when Brahmā appears (v. 12), and offers a boon. Rāvaṇa asks immortality, but is refused (17). He then asks that he may be indestructible by all creatures more powerful than men; which boon is accorded by Brahmā (v. 22), together with the recovery of all the heads he had sacrificed, and the power of assuming any shape he pleased. Vibhīṣhaṇa (nearly as in the Mahābhārata, see above, p. 411) asks as his boon (v. 30 f.) that "even amid the greatest calamities he may think only of righteousness, and that the weapon of Brahmā may appear to him unlearned," etc. (paramūpad-gatasyāpi dharme mama matir bhavet | asixitañcha brahmāstram bhagavan pratibhātu me<sup>53</sup>). The god grants his request, and adds the gift of immortality. When Brahmā is about to offer a boon to Kumbhakarṇa, the gods interpose, as, they say, he had eaten seven Apsaras and ten followers of Indra, besides rishis and men; and beg that under the guise of a boon stupefaction may be inflicted on him. Brahmā thinks on Sarasvatī, who arrives, and by Brahmā's command (Vāṇi tvāṁ Rāxasendrasya bhava vāg-devatepsitū) enters into Kumbhakarna's mouth, that she may speak for him. Under this influence he asks that he may receive the boon of sleeping for many years, which is granted (v. 45).<sup>54</sup> When, however, Sarasvatī has left him, and he recovers his own consciousness, he perceives that he has been deluded (v. 47). Kuvera, by his father's advice, gives up the city of Laṅkā to Ravana (sect. 11, v. 39 ff.).

The Uttara Kāṇḍa, sect. 41, vv. 44 ff., contains in its description of the monkey Hanumat's history the following testimony to his literary merits: 44. Asau punar vyākaraṇaṁ grahīshyan sūryonmukhaḥ prasṭu-maṇḍaḥ kapīndraḥ | udyad-girer asta-giriṁ jagāma grantham mahad dhārayan aprameyaḥ | 45. Sa-sūtra-vṛtṭi-artha-padam mahārthaṁ sa-sangrahaṁ sidhyati vai kapīndraḥ | na hy asya kaśchit sadṛśo 'sti śāstre vaiśārade chhanda-gatau tathaiva | sarvāsu vidyāsu tapo-vidhāne praspardhate 'yaṁ hi guruṁ surāṇām | "44. Again the chief of monkeys (Hanumat), measureless, seeking to acquire grammar, looking up to the sun, bent on enquiry, went from the mountain where the sun rises to that where he sets, apprehending the mighty collection—(45) viz., the aphorisms (sūtra), the commentary (vṛtṭi), the vārttika (artha-pada), of extensive contents, and the sangraha [of Vyāḍi]. The chief of monkeys is perfect, no one equals him in the śāstras, in learning, and in ascertaining the sense of the Scripture, [or in moving at will]. In all sciences; in the rules of austerity, he rivals the preceptor of the gods."

in learning. When specifying, it is well known that Hanumat was the ninth author of Grammar; such is Kataka’s explanation.”

The other eight grammarians are mentioned by Colebrooke—Essays
ii. pp. 39, 48.

The word Ākhaṇḍala occurs in R. V. viii. 17, 12, and the words are quoted in the Nirukta iii. 10, Ākhaṇḍala pra hūyase; “o Ākhaṇḍala, thou art invoked.” It is rendered by “destroyer” in Böhlingk and

Instead of “mārjālīyāya,” read “mārjālīyāya.” When I rendered this word by “cat,” the only significations of it of which I was aware, were those given in Wilson’s Dictionary. I have since accidentally noticed it mentioned in a sentence of Sāyaṇa’s Commentary on R. V. i.
1, 4 (prāchyādi-chatur-dig-ānteshv āhavanīya-mārjālīya-gārhapatyā- gāidhrīya-sthāneśhv agnir asti), as the name of one of the four sacrificial fires. The word also (as Professor Aufrecht has pointed out to me) occurs in the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā, 5, 32, where it is explained by the commentator. Instead, therefore, of “the cat,” read in line 27, “the Mārjāliya fire.”

Krishṇa, when applied to by Duryodhana, as well as by Arjuna, for aid in the impending conflict, promises succour to them both, but allows Arjuna the first choice :

Udyoga-parva, vv. 147 ff.—Mat-saṁhanana-tulyāṇām<sup>55</sup> gopānām arbudam mahat | Nārāyaṇā iti khyātāḥ sarve saṅgrāma-yodhinah | te vā yudhi durādharshā bhavantu ekasya sainikāḥ | ayudhyamānaḥ saṅgrāme nyastaśastro 'ham ekataḥ | ābhyām anyataram Pārtha yat te hṛidyataram matam | tad vṛṇītām bhavān agre pravāryas tvam hi dharmataḥ | “Let one of you either take those invincible soldiers, the great hundred millions of herdsmen called Nārāyaṇas, whose bodies are equal to my own, and who are all fighting men : or let him take, on the other hand, myself who do not engage, in battle, and have laid aside my weapons. Do thou, son of Prithā, first choose the one of these two things which is most acceptable to thee ; for thou art justly entitled to the preference.”

Arjuna selects Krishṇa himself, “the unborn Nārāyaṇa, destroyer of his foes, who had been at his will born among men” (Nārāyaṇam amitraghnaṁ kāmāj jātam ajaṁ nṛishu), though he was not to fight. Duryodhana chose the army of warriors.

The story of Indra destroying Namuchi with foam is also told in the Mahābhārata, Salya-parva (vv. 2434 ff.): Namuchir Vāsavād bhītaḥ sūryya-raśmīṁ samūvīśat | tenendraḥ sakhyam akarot samayañchedam abravīt | “na chārdrena na śushkena na rātrau nāpi chāhani | badhishyāmy asura-śreshṭha sakhe satyena te śape” | evaṁ sa kṛtvā samayaṁ dṛishṭvā nīhāram īśvaraḥ | chichchedāsya śīro rājany apām phenena Vāsavaḥ | tach chhiro Namucheś chhinnaṁ prishṭhataḥ Śukram anviyāt |

Indra formed a friendship with him, and uttered this agreement: ‘I shall neither slay thee with wet nor with dry, neither in the night nor in the day; I swear in truth to thee, my friend, thou most eminent of Asuras.’ Having made this agreement, the lord Vāsava (Indra), beholding a fog, [when it was neither night nor day], cut off his head with the foam of the waters [which was neither wet nor dry]. That head of Namuchi, after being cut off, followed close after Indra, calling out, ‘o wicked slayer of thy friend.’ Being thus again and again pressed by the head, and being distressed, he [Indra] represented the matter to Pitāmaha (Brahmā). The lord (or teacher) of the world (Brahmā) said to him: ‘Having sacrificed, touch [the waters] in the Aruṇā, that sacred spot, which removes sin and fear,’” etc.

“No mortal,” etc. These words are differently explained by the commentator, thus: Jarāsandhena abhūgaḥ aśīkṛitaḥ | purushataḥ mūrdhābhishikteshu purusheshu | tena sarve vaśīkṛitaḥ ity arthaḥ | “Abhūgaḥ means ‘unappropriated’ by Jarāsandha. Purushataḥ means ‘among anointed kings.’ The sense is, that ‘all have been subdued by him.’”

Rukma-vedi-nibhāḥ. In Rāmāyaṇa iii. 32, 5, Rāvaṇa is described as rukma-vedi-gatam, which the commentator explains as rukma-vedim prāptaṁ hiraṇyeshṭaka-chitāṁ vedim prāptam, “mounted on a platform of golden bricks.”

In her lamentation for Rāvaṇa (Rāmāyaṇa vi. 113, Calc. ed.), his queen, Mandodarī, among other attributes which she ascribes to him, speaks of him (v. 49) as jetāraṁ lokapālānāṁ xeptāraṁ Saṅkarasya cha, “conqueror of the guardians of the world, and caster down (or, contemner) of Saṅkara.” Saṅkara could not therefore have been looked on by the writer of this as the Supreme Deity. From the story of Nandiśvara quoted above, p. 393, it will have been seen, however, that Rāvaṇa was really no match for Saṅkara.

I have not observed any mention of the Linga in the earlier part of the Rāmāyaṇa, but in the Uttara Kāṇḍa, sect. 36, v. 42 f., the following lines occur: Yatra yatra cha yāti sma Rāvaṇo rāxaseśvaraḥ | jām-būnadamayāṁ liṅgaṁ tatra tatra sma nīyate | 43. Bālukā-vedi-madhye tu tal liṅgaṁ śhāpya Rāvaṇaḥ | archayāmāsa gandhaiś cha pushpaiś chāmṛita-gandhibhiḥ | “Wherever Rāvaṇa, lord of the Rāxasas, went, a golden liṅga was carried thither. Placing that liṅga in the midst of a pedestal of sand, Rāvaṇa worshipped it with incense, and flowers of ambrosial odour.”

For “verse 26,” read “verse 28.” In Manu vii. 38 the following verse occurs: **Vṛiddhāṁścha nityaṁ śreṭa viprān veda-vidāḥ śuchīn | vṛiddha-sevī hi satatāṁ raxobhir api pūjyate |* “Let [the king] constantly reverence old and pure Brahmans, skilled in the Vedas; for he who continually reverences the aged is honoured even by the Rāxasas.” Can this verse refer to the character vṛiddha-sevī given to Atikāya in the passage (Rām. vi. 71, 26) quoted in the text? If so, the passage in Manu must be posterior in date to the Rāmāyaṇa. Or has this character been given to Atikāya in consequence of the verse of Manu? or have the two passages no connection? The coincidence is at least curious.

given in the thirty-second and following sections of the Yuddha Kāṇḍa. Rāvaṇa in the course of his expeditions goes to Indra-loka. Indra becomes afraid and resorts to Viṣṇu (sect. 32, 6) whom he glorifies as the Creator and Destroyer, and asks his aid (v. 13). Viṣṇu replies that he could not interfere without killing Rāvaṇa,—which he is unable to do on account of the boon conceded to the Rāxasa chief by Brahmā (v. 18); but he would slay him at the proper time (v. 20). A battle takes place between the gods and Rāxasas (v. 26). The eighth Vasu Sāvitra comes on the field (vv. 34 and 43), fights with Sumālī, and kills him, reducing to ashes his bones and all the rest of him (sect. 33). The Rāxasas are rallied by Indrajit, and the gods put to flight. Indra's son, Jayānta, enters the fray. After his son's apparent destruction (v. 23)—though he in reality only disappears—Indra himself comes upon the scene, and captures Rāvaṇa (sect. 34, v. 18 f.). Meghanāda (son of Rāvaṇa), afterwards called Indrajit, becoming invisible by his magical power, binds Indra (v. 27). The gods, headed by Brahmā, go to Lankā (sect. 35). Brahmā praises Indrajit's valour, and declares that he shall be called Indrajit ("the conqueror of Indra"). Brahmā then asks that Indra shall be released. Indrajit, as a condition, requires the boon of immortality. This Brahmā refuses. Indrajit then asks that if he offers a sacrifice to Agni he shall obtain Agni's car, and that while he is mounted on that chariot he shall be immortal; but if he shall not have finished the rite, he is to be liable to destruction (see above, p. 354). Brahmā agrees to this, and Indra is released. Brahmā then tells Indra (vv. 18-42) that he had incurred this misfortune because he had corrupted Ahalyā, the first woman, whom Brahmā had made and had given to the sage Gautama. She, however, would be restored to purity by the vision of Viṣṇu incarnate in Rāma, and Indra himself was to offer a Vaishṇava sacrifice (see pp. 249, 353, above, and compare the forty-eighth and forty-ninth sections of the Twelfth Book of the Rāmāyaṇa, ed. Schl.; and a similar purification of Indra for another sin, above p. 420). I quote the verses in which Brahmā here describes the creation of the first woman Ahalyā:

Sect. 35, 19 ff.—Amarendra mayā buddhyā prajāḥ sṛiṣṭās tathā prabho | eka-varnāḥ samābhāṣā ekā-rūpās cha sarvaśaḥ | tāsāṃ nāsti viśeṣo hi darśane laxaṇe 'pi vā | tato 'haṃ ekāgra-manās tāḥ prajāḥ samachintayam | so 'haṃ tāsāṃ viśeṣārthaṃ striyam ekāṃ vinirmame | yad yat prajānām pratyāṅgaṃ viśiṣṭaṃ tat tad uddhṛitam | tato mayā

rūpa-guṇair Ahalyā strī vinīrmitā | “O chief of immortals (Indra), all creatures were by my understanding formed by me of one caste, of the same speech, and of one form in every respect. There was no distinction of them in appearance or characteristic (sexual) mark. I then with intent mind reflected on these creatures. In order to distinguish them I formed one woman. Whatever there was most distinguished (excellent) in the several members of [different] creatures was taken [to compose her]. A woman faultless (ahalyā) in form was then fashioned by me.”

Professors Aufrecht and Müller have been good enough to furnish me with the text of this Durgā-stava, or Rātri-sūkta, which, in the Sanhitā MSS. of the R. V., follows a hymn addressed to Night (the 127th of the Tenth Mandala = Ashtaka viii. 7, 14). I will first give the text with a translation of the genuine hymn to Night (R. V. x. 127) and then quote the Parīśiṣṭa :

R. V. x. 127.—1. Rātri vi akhyat āyatī purutrā devī axabhiḥ | viś-vāḥ adhi śriyo 'dhita | 2. Ā uru aprāḥ amartyā nirato devī udrataḥ | jyotishū bādhatē tamaḥ | 3. Nir ū svasāram askṛitā ushasam devī āyati | apa id ū hāsate tamaḥ | 4. Sā no adya yasyā vayaṁ ni te 'yāman avic-mahi | vṛxe na vasatiṁ vayah | 5. Ni grāmāso avicata ni padvanto ni paxinaḥ | ni śyenāsas chid arthinaḥ | 6. Yāvaya vṛikyaṁ vṛikaṁ yāvaya stenam ūrmye | athā naḥ sutarā bhava | 7. Upa mā pepīsat tamaḥ kṛish-naṁ vyaktam ūsthita | ushaḥ rinā iva yātaya | 8. Upa te gāḥ iva ā akaraṁ vṛiṇishva duhitar divaḥ | rātri stomāṁ na jigyuṣhe | “The divine Night arriving, hath shone in many places with her eyes ; she has revealed all her splendours. 2. I am indebted to Professor Aufrecht for some assistance in correcting the corrupt text and in explaining parts of this composition.

"1. O Night, the terrestrial atmosphere was filled with thy father's rays (?). Thou, the mighty one, pervadest the celestial mansions, and thick darkness prevails. 2. Night, may the man-beholders which are united with thee<sup>58</sup> be 99, 88, or 77. 3. I approach Night, the mother who finds a home for all creatures, kind, divine, dark, the night of the whole world. 4. I have approached the auspicious Night, who causes men to enter [their abodes], who controuls, who is invested with a garland of planets and stars. O gracious night, may we reach the opposite shore! may we reach the opposite shore! 5. Intent, I will praise the divine Durgā, who affords a refuge, who is beloved by the Bahvrichas (priests of the Rig-veda ceremonial), who is equal to a thousand. Let us pour forth soma to Jātavedas (Fire). 6. Thou who art resorted to by rishis for the expiation of twice-born men, hast thy origin in the Rig-veda. [Agni] burns up the wealth of him who injures us. 7. The Brahmanas, learned or ignorant, who resort, o goddess, to thee, the carrier of oblations,—may he transport us over all difficulties. 8. Agni transports over all evils [though] hard to be traversed,—as with a boat across the ocean,—those twice-born men who shall celebrate the fire-coloured, auspicious, beautiful goddess. 9. Bewildered (?) in difficulties, in dire perplexity, in battle, in trouble from enemies, in visitations of fire, and thieves, for the prevention of inauspicious planets, (10) in difficulties, perplexities, battles, and forests, men resort to thee. Give us security from these things, give us security from these things! 11. [I praise] her the long-haired [?], among all creatures, and whose name is Panchanī. May this goddess every night preserve me in every way. (12. The same as the verse already quoted in the text, p. 363, line 11). May the divine (?) Durgā be propitious for our good in difficult places. He who always every night reads this holy Durgā-stava,—(the night, Kuśika, Saubhara, the rātri-stava, gāyatrī),—he who continually mutters the rātri-sūkta, arrives at that time."

It will be seen that the sense of some parts of this production is not very clear, but to ascertain it is of little consequence.

These same tongues of fire are also mentioned in a hymn to Agni, in the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa, sect. 99, vv. 52 ff.: *Yā jihvā bhavataḥ Kālī kāla-nishṭhā-karī prabho | bhayān[tayā?] naḥ pāhi pāpebhyah ahihāch-cha mahābhayāt | 53. By thy tongue Manojavā, which is distinguished by the quality of lightness, preserve us, etc. 55. By thy tongue Sulohitā, which accomplishes the desires of creatures, preserve us, etc. 56. By thy tongue Sudhūmra-varṇā, which inflicts diseases on living beings, preserve us, etc. 57. By thy tongue Sphulinginī, the loveliest of all, preserve us, etc. 58. By thy tongue Viśvā, which always bestows blessings on living beings, preserve us, etc.

In the course of this hymn to Agni he is said (v. 41) to have been formed eightfold: Tvām asṭadhā kalpayitvā yajñam ādyam akalpayan | “Having formed thee in eight ways, they performed the earliest sacrifice.” Does this refer to the legend from the Brahmanas given in pp. 283–289? Again, we are reminded of some characteristics which are ascribed to Rudra in the Śatarudriya vv. 2 and 11 (above, pp. 268, 269) by the expressions which are applied to Agni in the seventieth verse of this hymn: Yat te Vahne śivam rūpaṁ ye cha te sapta-hetayah | taiḥ pāhi naḥ stuto deva pitā puttram ivātmajam | “When thou art lauded, Agni, preserve us by thine auspicious form, and by thy seven shafts, as a father preserves his own son.”

In v. 63 Agni is said to have “stretched out the whole universe, and, though one, to exist in manifold shapes” (tvayā tataṁ viśvam idaṁ charācharam Itutāsanaiko bahudhā tvam atra).

ADDITIONAL NOTE on page 115, line 9.

In the Calcutta edition, section 29, the reading here is different, as the words Kaśyapo 'bravīt are succeeded by the following: Adityā devatā-nāmcha mama chaivānuyāchitam | varaṁ varada supṛito dātum arhasi suvrata | “Bestow in thy good pleasure the boon solicited by Aditi, by the gods, and by me. Sinless lord, become the son of Aditi,” etc. etc., as in Schlegel. Then after the line Sōkārttānām tu devānām sākāyāṁ

karttum arhasi comes the following: v. 18. Ayañ siddhāśramo nāma prasādāt te bhaviṣhyati | siddhe karmaṇi deveśa uttiṣṭha bhagavann itaḥ | 19. Atha Viṣṇur mahātejā Ādityāñ samajāyata | vāmanañ rūpam āsthāya Vairochanin upāgamat | 20. Trin padān atha bhixitvā ityādi | “‘By thy grace this shall be the hermitage of the perfect. When thy work is accomplished, arise hence, o divine being.’ Then the glorious Viṣṇu was born of Aditi. Assuming the form of a dwarf, he approached the son of Virochana, and begging three paces of ground,” etc. It will be observed that an attempt is here made to connect the legend of the birth of Viṣṇu from Kaśyapa and Aditi with the story of the dwarf incarnation more closely than it is connected in Schlegel’s edition; for first, Kaśyapa is made to allude to the “hermitage of the perfect,” as if he were himself present there, of which nothing is said in Schlegel’s edition; and secondly, the transition from the digression about Viṣṇu’s birth as the son of Kaśyapa and Aditi back to the story of the dwarf incarnation is more cleverly managed here than in Schlegel’s edition, as here the words evam uktaḥ surair Viṣṇuḥ (“being thus addressed by the gods, Viṣṇu,” etc.) which in Schlegel’s edition (v. 17) carry us back to v. 8, and ignore all that intervenes, are omitted. It will also be noticed that another verse (the one quoted at the commencement of this note) is introduced at the beginning of Kaśyapa’s address to Viṣṇu, in which the gods are mentioned as fellow-suppliants with Kaśyapa. This alteration also appears to have been made to facilitate the transition from the interpolated lines back to the main story.

It is to be observed, however, that the readings of the Calcutta edition differ from those of Schlegel’s in several respects at the beginning of the section also.
